A number of items concerning the China field were presented to the Board. In considering these, the presence of Dr. Fred Wampler was particularly helpful. A good brother and sister in Virginia have promised Dr. Wampler a gift of from $2,500 to $3,500 for an electric lighting plant for the Ping Ting Hsien hospital. The plant will probably be large enough to supply all our mission premises with electricity at some future time.

Sister Laura Shock, who has been teaching the Liao Chou missionary children, was released from this work, to take up general mission work.

Permission to build two missionary homes was granted to China.

It appears that missionaries are subject to the ailments common to mortals. Several having been compelled to undergo operations during the last few months, the Board approved of paying their hospital expenses. In this connection it may be noted that the Mayo Brothers, Rochester, Minn., made no charge for operating upon Sister Anna V. Blough. It is their practice to perform operations for ministers and missionaries without charge, though, of course, all hospital expenses must be borne by the patient.

The purchase of five windmills and eighteen cook-stoves was authorized for the use of the various stations in India. The allowance for the school-going children of our India missionaries was placed at $200 per year. Heretofore this has been $90 for children under eight years of age and $180 for those between the ages of eight and eighteen.

India and China were given permission to be represented by one delegate each at the Tokio World Sunday-school Convention in 1920.

A letter having been received from the missions department of Bethany Bible School, asking how the school might be of the greatest assistance in the preparation of missionaries, the Board appointed a committee to consider what our schools can do by way of co-operating still more effectually with the Board in this important matter. The committee is to report at the December meeting.

Bro. G. J. Fercken, having recently arrived in America from Switzerland, is now stopping at Harrisburg, Pa. He desires to seeure a pastorate. The Chairman and Secretary of the Board were appointed to assist in effecting a suitable arrangement.

South China was considered by the Board, and a native pastor appointed for that field, in keeping with the recommendation of the General Conference. Report is to be made in this matter to the next Conference.

The Tract Examining Committee submitted a report on the revision of our list of tracts. The report was approved. Some tracts are to be eliminated, others revised and still others are to be written anew.

It has been felt for some time that a plan should be worked out whereby funds given by the various churches for the training of prospective missionaries may be credited to the mission account and reported through the Missionary Visitor. A committee was appointed to devise a plan for giving recognition to such gifts.

A splendid history of the China mission was submitted by the China publication committee and the Board decided that it should be published.

Considerable money was appropriated for assistance to State Districts. Texas and Louisiana is seeking a pastor for Fort Worth, Texas, and an appropriation was made to help the brethren of this District to support such a man if he can be found. Correspondence with the Board on this subject is solicited.

The members at Fruitdale, Ala., presented a petition for assistance in various ways. A competent evangelist to help these brethren in some meetings as soon as possible is desired. The Board is also planning to provide some assistance in pastoral care for that needy field. Evangelists of experience who might be interested in work in that field are invited to communicate with the Board.

Church loans were granted to the Milk River congregation, Montana, and Freeport, Illinois.

As our missionaries, who expect to engage in some kind of technical work—agricultural, industrial, or medical—go to the field, equipment is necessary. The purchase of such equipment as would best fit them for their work was authorized.

Bro. H. C. Early reported that a proposed gift of $20,000 in property by Bro. D. C. Moomaw, of Roanoke, Va., had been consummated. This gift, which demonstrates Bro. Moomaw's great interest in our mission work, is much appreciated by the Board.

On recommendation of the Tract Examining Committee, the address of Bro. C. C. Ellis at the Winona Conference on "The Call of the World to the Christian Young Man" was ordered printed.

A petition came before the Board asking the privilege of soliciting the Brotherhood for a certain home mission cause. The Board explained to the District that before any such privilege can be granted, the District, in which the enterprise is to be established, must first be solicited. The disposition of this item is mentioned that it may refresh our minds on the steps which must be taken before the General Brotherhood can be canvassed.

These are the principal items of detail which came

The Center of Christian Doctrine

It was Paul, the theologian, who wrote the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. The same Paul that wrote Romans and Galatians and Ephesians. The same Paul that attached so much importance to sound doctrine and invoked the anathemas of heaven upon any man who dared to preach a different Gospel. It was that Paul who turned aside, in the midst of one of his doctrinal expositions, to interject that matchless parenthesis on the excellence of love.

No, he did not turn aside. He went straight to the heart of his subject and kept the thought of his readers focused on it long enough to make, if possible, an impression. Long enough to make every reader see, if possible, that the heart of that subject is the heart of the whole system of Christian doctrine and practice.

It is only when theologians and teachers and preachers forget this, that doctrine becomes mere dogma, and religion a lifeless creed. Any doctrine which contravenes the principle of love is by that test unscriptural and vicious. No system of doctrine, however much of truth it may contain, can avail the holder anything, unless it has love for its center.

Not less doctrine, but more love. Not more talk about love, but more love.

Faultfinding and Constructive Criticism

It is so much easier to object to the methods of others than to propose, not to say practice, better ones, that most of us stop at that point. Here is a good illustration of this:

An evangelist was accustomed to ask men and women to show their acceptance of Christ by rising and coming forward. After the meeting a young theological student said to him, "I was glad to see people converted tonight, but I don't just like the way you asked them to rise and come forward." "Neither do I," replied the evangelist. "How do you do it?" The young man hesitated, then answered, "Well, I

Working Old Fields and

This was the problem before the General Mission Board at its meeting last week. Sounds big enough to keep several men thinking hard for a while, doesn't it? Well, that is what it did.

The first part of it commanded the most attention, but the second part—the question of opening a new field—came up this time in real earnest. But more of that a little later. Let us look first at some of the many details involved in caring for the work in the fields already opened.

But for the very first thing let us note that the organization of the Board continues for another year the same as heretofore: H. C. Early, President; Otho Winger, Vice-President; J. H. B. Williams, Secretary-Treasurer. Also a word about the manual: For some time a manual of information for missionaries and missionary candidates has been under preparation, or rather revision. This was considered at some length, but final action was deferred. The desire is to formulate the most satisfactory and practicable manual possible. This takes time. Now for those field details.

A budget of $144,800 for India for 1920 was approved. This is more than twice the budget for 1919, showing that the India field is alive to its needs and working in harmony with the spirit of the Forward Movement.

Furloughs for 1920 were granted to Sister B. Mary Royer, the Drs. Cottrell and W. B. Stover and family.

The Board calls for one doctor and four general missionaries, two men and two women with normal training above college courses, for India in 1920.

Support allowances for native workers was increased from $60 to $80 per year; those of training department pupils from $32 to $50; those of boarding-school pupils from $25 to $35.

A number of items concerning the China field were presented to the Board. In considering these, the presence of Dr. Fred Wampler was particularly helpful. A good brother and sister in Virginia have promised Dr. Wampler a gift of from $2,500 to $3,500 for an electric lighting plant for the Ping Ting Hsien hospital. The plant will probably be large enough to supply all our mission premises with electricity at some future time.

Service Versus Boasting

BY AMOS H. HAINES

In view of the serious and critical times in which we are living, especially of the great want, suffering and even starvation; also in view of the great opportunities for service and sacrifice, it seems futile and childish to advertise and boast of what we are or have done. The present is upon us, and surely our good deeds of the past, or the advertising of our experiences can not meet the demands of the hour.

Some time ago it was my privilege to listen to an address at a Sunday-school Meeting. The purpose of the meeting was supposedly to be that of instruction, inspiration, uplift and helpfulness. Instead of this, the speaker occupied the entire time—more than one hour—in telling his own experiences, placing these experiences under three heads.

1. He said, in substance, that there was, or had been, a time in his life, when he was sometimes up and sometimes down in his Christian experience. In fact, the dark hours, at times, seemed to overshadow the bright spots in his daily living and endeavor. "But now," he said, "I have reached that stage or advancement in growth, when I am in the upper realm, in the bright period all the time, in the third heaven, so to speak."

2. He said that there had been times, since he professed to be a Christian, when he was constantly falling away into sin—daily, yes, hourly. But now, from his description of himself, he seemed, to himself at least, to be leading a substantially sinless life.

3. He said that there had been a time in his life when he had little influence with the sinner and the unconverted. Now, if I understood him correctly, he intended to convey the impression, that almost every one whom he approached, and spoke to, about his soul's salvation, yielded to his admonition or entreaty.

Now I do not know what others got from this address. I do not wish to charge the speaker with boasting and self-righteousness, but to me such autobiography does not meet the demands of the hour. I wish to add that the speaker referred to was not a member of the Brethren church. In fact, I do not know of what church, if any, he might be a member. Many such persons are like the proverbial saying, "A hog on ice." They can not stand anywhere. I merely mention these things as a word of warning, because the religious fanatic is very apt to have some influence over the fanatically inclined. The so-called victorious life is good and proper, but let us beware of extremes.

The need of the hour is for men and women with a message for this present day and hour in which we live—a message charged and surcharged with the Spirit of the Master, the Great Teacher, bearing the spirit of service—inspired from his words: "Let him who is great among you be as he who serves." "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet."

The Claims of the Christian Ministry

An Address Delivered at the Winona Lake Conference, June 5, 1919, by L. S. Shively, President of Mount Morris College

In Three Parts—Part Three

The fact that the minister must be a man of the highest Christian character, is even more obvious than that he must be educated. The two are both highly important; so important are they that neither can be dispensed with. But there never has been an age or time when there was any disposition to question the character requirement. There are many men and women who do not profess Christianity, who care little or nothing about its success in the world, who would even be entirely unconcerned about the educational qualifications of its leaders. But it would be very difficult, in any community, to find a single person who would not take notice if a professor of Christianity, particularly a minister of the Gospel, should even be suspected of doing things, which, from the standpoint of good morals or the highest character ideals, are questionable.

I am not disposed to say much more upon this point, with reference to ministers, than ought to be said of every follower of Christ. I believe that the same things are demanded of the latter as of the former. The kind of life and character which is satisfactory for any one who professes to be a Christian, is also, to my way of thinking, satisfactory for a minister. But with all this we can not escape noticing the fact that the minister is a leader, and consequently an example to all men and women, both in and out of the church. And for this reason we are justified in pressing the point with special reference to him.

On this question, again, we can turn to the advice which Paul gave to Timothy. Paul says that the minister must be blameless. I would interpret this as meaning that he must be a man whose reputation in the community is good. Unless he is held in high esteem by people who know him and with whom he tries to work, his preaching, as well as every other phase of his ministry, will not be very effective.

In this same word to Timothy, many things which are very familiar to us all are mentioned. Among them are good behavior, sobriety, patience and similar virtues. They all point in the same direction and mean, in a general way, the same thing. We can not do more than insist on the same things and insist on them as strongly as Paul did; neither can we be satisfied with lower standards than these.

When we consider this phase of the demands of the ministry, we ought to keep in mind that it is not the mere outward appearance in these things which is wanted and which will satisfy. In other words, it is character, rather than reputation which must be made the cornerstone that enters into the make-up of him who shall minister successfully to the needs, both temporal and spiritual, of his fellow-men.

I have, perhaps, said enough on this point, since it is all so very evident. But I would like to have you think now of the minister's devotional life. This involves the intimate relation between himself and his God. Here again the same standards should apply as do for every Christian. The Christian life is a matter of growth. And like every other growing thing, it has its own peculiar means of growth. If these things are present, growth may result. Unless they are present, growth can not take place.

The simple illustration of the vine and the branch helps to convey my idea. Intimate relationship is the vital, the absolutely essential, thing. There can be no substitute for this. Such a relationship is implied by the words devotion, meditation and communion. It is in these things that the abiding, of which John speaks, consists, and upon which fruit bearing depends.

All of this has to do with the most secret thought and life of the individual. It is that phase of his life which no other human being, not even his closest friend, really knows or understands. And it can be known by others only to the extent that they can see its visible results in his life and actions.

Of course, the ministry can not be expected to appeal to one who has not dedicated his life to the idea of service. For the fundamental idea in ministry is service. Take that out of it and there is nothing left but empty pretense, coupled perhaps with an attempt to win the praise of men. Such a ministry would benefit a Pharisee, but it would not be worthy of a follower of Jesus Christ.

And I do not hesitate to say that I can not think of a larger field of service than is offered by the Christian ministry. A very brief survey of the need, such as can be made by doing just a little thinking concerning conditions in any community with which we are acquainted, ought to bear out this thought. There has long been an aversion, on the part of talented young men, who could easily have fitted themselves for successful work in the ministry, to prepare for and take up this work. On this account the problem of supplying the demand is even today a more or less serious one, forcibly reminding us of the largeness of the field at the present time. But when considered wholly from the standpoint of the importance of the work, it is apparent that there is here a large opportunity to serve.

The life of the Master was not an easy one. His days were full from early morning till late in the evening. There are numerous recorded instances in which time, that he had planned to spend in obtaining physical rest, was used to minister to some kind of human need. It was very seldom that his pathway was strewn with flowers. But in spite of all this, and along with all this, he was happy. It is doubtless true that very few smiles were ever seen on his countenance, even by his closest friends, yet there was gladness in his heart, because he enjoyed that perfect peace which always follows genuine service to one's fellow-men. It was this which enabled him to live through his Gethsemane experience. It was this which bore him up in the supreme sacrifice he made on Calvary.

I can point to no better example of real ministry of service than that of Christ. And I would be at a loss to know where to go to learn better, the general methods to be used in the work, than to this example.

The outlook for the future ministry in the Church of the Brethren seems to me to be quite hopeful. If education is an important factor in the preparation, the fact that there is a growing increase of interest in education, among the young people of our church, is most favorable. Our people are not only seeking education, but they are putting into their courses, more and more, those things which are directly preparatory to religious work.

Another feature, which is very encouraging and which is sure to result in good, is the forward step which our church took recently in the manner of election to the ministry. Heretofore a young man could hardly be expected to prepare definitely for the ministry. It is true, he might have it in mind as a possibility, but at the same time it was almost necessary to prepare for other life-work also.

Today a young man who feels that he is called to enter this work may look forward to it and prepare for it as definitely as he would for any other calling in life. He has the assurance that when he has gone sufficiently far in his preparation, there will be an opportunity for him to volunteer in this work. The effect of this is to put the ministry in a different light in the young man's eyes. It will become a thing to be desired, more than has been the case in the past, and it will be prepared for and entered by a larger number of the splendid young men who are now growing up in the church.

The need for religious workers, and in particular for ministers, is very great. There is work for them in this land and in every other land. And this need can only be supplied in case young people catch the vision of what it means to serve and to sacrifice.

I asked a young man, a student in one of the Brethren schools a short time ago, whether he expected to enter the ministry. He replied: "I expect to devote my life to some kind of religious work. I would feel that I was wasting my life if I did not do so." There are many of our splendid young people who could say the same thing, and I hope that one of the results of this Life Work Conference will be that many others will reach similar conclusions with reference to themselves.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

The Divine Authority of Conference

BY PAUL MOHLER

One of the most interesting topics ever discussed is this one. To think of there being on earth an institution used by God to express his will and to guide his children in their daily living! What a comforting provision! Again, to think of being without any certain guidance such as an intelligent, Spirit-directed Conference can give, how dark and desperate! Does it make a difference? It makes all the difference in the world whether we can have a Conference in which God is present, and through which he speaks with authority to the church, and through the church, to the world.

Why need God's direction? Because God knows and men do not. Somebody starts something new. It in all things (John 14: 21, 23). Love rules in the order, and all disciplinary measures are based upon love, and are for the good, helpfulness and salvation of the erring ones (John 13: 34; Gal. 6: 1).

All peoples and classes are eligible to membership if they are willing to submit to and comply with the conditions and terms of membership, as prescribed in the divine law, governing in Christ's Kingdom (Luke 14: 21, 23; Matt. 28: 19, 20).

This order supports and sustains the truth of God, being represented as "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3: 15). It is a spiritual body, composed of lively stones, "built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 2: 5). They "are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets [which is Christ], Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth into an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit" (Eph. 2: 20-22).

It is the only order that will survive the wrecks of time (Matt. 16: 18). Christ is the Foundation upon which this spiritual structure rests (Isa. 28: 16; 1 Cor. 3: 11).

The Leader and Commander is Christ (Isa. 55: 4). Christ is the Master (Matt. 23: 8, 10). Initiation into the order—baptism as commanded by the Great Commander (Matt. 28: 19; Gal. 3: 27). Prerequisites or qualifications for baptism, faith and repentance (Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38).

The constitution and ritual, the New Testament (Eph. 1: 13; 2 Cor. 3: 6). The pass-word, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 8: 37; John 6: 69). Purpose and object of the order of friends of Jesus: the glory of God and salvation of the world (Matt. 4: 10; Mark 16: 15, 16; John 3: 17). Obligations taken when being received into the order: a renouncement of the devil, his pomp, and all the sinful pleasures of this world (James 4: 7; 1 Peter 5: 8, 9; 1 John 2: 15-17). And a covenant with God in Christ Jesus to live faithful unto death (Rev. 2: 10).

She has no union or fellowship with the works of darkness, nor secretism (2 Cor. 6: 14-18; Eph. 5: 11). This order has no secrets as the body of Christ. All her meetings and teachings are public, and are intended for the betterment and salvation of mankind (Matt. 5: 14-16; John 3: 19-21; 18: 20).

Her badge is love. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another" (John 13: 35). Her supreme mission in the world is to preach the Gospel Message of salvation to all people and entreat them to accept of Christ as their Savior (Mark 16: 15; Acts 1: 8; 1 Cor. 5: 20, 21).

The members of the order are held and act from an impulse of conscience and not by an oath (Matt. 5: 34, 35; James 5: 12).

Her prayers, petitions and thanksgivings are offered in the name of Christ (John 14: 13; 15: 16; 16: 23, 24). Her charity and almsgiving is an obligation enjoined by the Master and is not confined to the brethren and sisters of the friends of Jesus but is extended to the poor, needy, maimed, halt and blind, regardless of their political or religious views (Matt. 25: 34-45; Luke 14: 12-14). "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again" (Prov. 19: 17). "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world" (James 1: 27). Christ died for all. "He by the grace of God tasted death for every man" (Heb. 2: 9; 2 Cor. 5: 15).

This being a fact, his friends should manifest an interest in his cause, and their ministrations of kindness and helpfulness should reach all. A large per cent of the so-called charitable organizations are selfish in the extreme. Their so-called charity is confined to their members, who have paid initiation fees and kept their monthly dues paid up, and especially is this true in the secret orders or lodges. Such charity is not charity at all, and is foreign to the teachings of God's Word.

This order is called by different names in the New Testament: The church of God; the church of Christ, church of saints, vineyard, sheepfold, little flock, etc. "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Peter 2: 9). Her peculiarities consist in her simple life of faith and trust, her separateness from the world and her humble obedience to God in all things, set forth in the New Testament plan of salvation.

Come, take a look within and behold the beautiful arrangements, order and service of God, as observed and practiced by his children, the friends of Jesus:

"Ye Are My Friends, if Ye Do Whatsoever I Command You."

The Case of Discipline

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

A TEACHER in one of our eastern colleges recently became "peeved" at some of his well-meaning friends who were continually urging him to do certain things for the sake of the discipline involved. One of these friends persistently preached the cold bath before breakfast. Another was equally insistent on the practice of sawing wood for two hours every morning. A third was enthusiastic in regard to the effects of certain mental and physical exercises, to which the professor had a decided aversion. Being forced to treat his friends with becoming courtesy, he wrote an article for a magazine, setting forth his individual ideas on the subject of discipline in general, and revealing some of the secret trials of a college teacher who is conscientiously trying to fit his pupils for the discipline of real life.

Primarily, he asserts that doing things for the sake of discipline involved, has no place in the life of a man like himself, who has a family to support, a department to keep up, and the ordinary duties of a citizen to discharge. He maintains that the doing of these things gives him all the discipline he can assimilate, and that the addition of any artificial rules of conduct would be disastrous to himself and his work. That kind of discipline, he frankly begs to say, belongs to individuals who have time for the luxuries of self-culture and introspection. In brief, the real worker has no need—and no opportunity if he had the need—for artificial means of discipline.

With becoming deference to the military powers, he admits that the discipline of camp and field may possibly be a means of developing manliness in our boys, and the horrors of war may perhaps be a background against which our girls may advantageously show the sterling qualities of womanhood. But he sees, in the opportunities of civil life, a challenge to all the powers latent in any normal youth.

"Nature never formed me for heroism," said this teacher, "but if I were given my choice of proving my heroism by walking twenty-five miles through a storm, on the darkest night, and grading examination papers for the length of time required by the walk, I am sure that I should choose the latter, not because it would be easier, but because I believe it would involve more heroism."

The young woman who longs to prove herself a heroine is reminded that a regular, persistent washing of dishes, mending of clothes and "minding" of babies is one of the supreme tests of heroism.

It is to be regretted that our college courses still consume the time of young men and women in so-called disciplinary study and activity, while the college accepts, from its students, standards of excellence which the business world can never accept. As this teacher so clearly shows, degrees are conferred on a per cent of scholarship which could have no recognition in actual work outside of school, where results only are counted.

Nothing could be more sound and wholesome than this teacher's plea for uniform standards of excellence in school and in actual life, and the discipline which comes naturally with the assuming of real duties.

Which Are You?

BY MARGARET DUDTF

SEVERAL weeks ago, while a party of friends and myself were up on Mt. Manitou, we had a very severe electric storm. The power-house was struck by lightning, thus severing the connections with the station below. This caused several hours of delay in our transportation.

While up on the mountain, I had a splendid opportunity of studying people. Two I have in mind, who greatly impressed me. The one was a lady of fifty some years, who acted hateful, and said so many ugly things. She seemed to despise everything and everybody. She made every one feel perfectly miserable. She said she "did not see why the lightning had to strike the power-house the very day she came up there. She knew her folks would worry themselves to death, if she could not get down that night, and that she would freeze," etc. She scorned the men who were doing all that was in their power to do. They could not control the elements.

To offset her dismal story we had the other character—a child about six years old. She was optimistic through and through. She was so glad she could stay up there, for she was not ready to go home anyway. She said she would not need to go to bed early that night. Nor would she need to eat supper (very unusual, I must say, for most children are always hungry). She saw nothing but good, while the former saw nothing but bad.

We find these two problems everywhere. If we could only remember that God is good, and all things that come from him are good, and that he is all-powerful, we would be much happier. The evil is mostly in our own minds. We must cleanse them of evil and let the good prevail. Then we will cease to be troubled. Seeing only evil is a very bad habit, and one easily formed. It will make the world seem dark. Why can we not see God manifest as life, health, love and happiness, and praise him for such?

That little child praised him by not finding fault. She had no time for troubles. She was even then about her Master's business—establishing peace and harmony. She realized the Divine Presence protecting her. Can there not be more like her?

Manitou, Colo.

THERE is no life so humble, that, if it be true and genuinely human and obedient to God, it may not hope to shed some of his light. There is no life so meager that the wisest of us can afford to despise it. We can not know at what moment it may flash forth with the life of God.

whenever any one convinces me that our own ference of the Church of the Brethren does not om the foregoing facts we deduce the following:

innumerable deceits of the devil. He who dis-of his local church or of himself. He is in dark-a Conference that is respected, or give me none.

The Order of Friends of Jesus Christ

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT

Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servher I have made known unto you" (John 15: 14, 15).

RIENDS of Jesus means union with Christ and the itual family of God, and fellowship with the sts; heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ in the gdom of God. This is the highest position to which n or women can attain in this life. It fits and prees them for that eternal life in heaven. There is order or organization that reaches beyond this sent world. All human organizations will end with life—the boast and teachings of the secret lodges he contrary notwithstanding.
The order of friends of Jesus sustains a very close tionship to the Heavenly Master. Jesus, upon a ain occasion, was very explicit in expressing his tionship to his followers: "My mother and my
in all things (John 14: 21, 23). Love rules in the order, and all disciplinary measures are based upon love, and are for the good, helpfulness and salvation of the erring ones (John 13: 34; Gal. 6: 1).

All peoples and classes are eligible to membership if they are willing to submit to and comply with the conditions and terms of membership, as prescribed in the divine law, governing in Christ's Kingdom (Luke 14: 21, 23; Matt. 28: 19, 20).

This order supports and sustains the truth of God, being represented as "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3: 15). It is a spiritual body, composed of lively stones, "built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 2: 5). They "are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets [which is Christ], Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth into an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit" (Eph. 2: 20-22).

The Case of Discipline

BY OLIVE A. SMYTH

A TEACHER in one of our eastern colleges recently became "peeved" at some of his well-meaning friends who were continually urging him to do certain things for the sake of the discipline involved. He maintains that the doing of these things gives him all the discipline he can assimilate, and that the addition of any artificial rules of conduct would be disastrous to himself and his work. fortunate. It is always willing to lend a helping hand to alleviate suffering and distress.

How much of a blessing to both the sister and the orphan, had that sister on the train been mothering an orphan instead of the dog. Even in the minds of worldly people such an act is commended, but, above that, it is pleasing in the sight of God. The procedure of the sister mentioned was undoubtedly very displeasing in the sight of God, and a disgrace to his church.

First Cor. 3: 16, 17 says: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." If we wish to keep this temple pure, as God would have it, we must live close to him and commune much with him, in order to partake of his nature and spirit. We are to be witnesses for him wherever we go and in whatever we do. Our future destiny depends largely on what we think, say and do, while here in life. Let us, who claim to be the Lord's followers, witness for him, for the Master is very much grieved and disappointed in us if we fail to witness for him. Many of us will be disappointed in that great day if we neglect this supreme privilege—witnessing for Christ.

The Shut-Outs

BY G. W. TUTTLE

THE most beautiful, comprehensive, spiritual creed that has ever been written will be no password to heaven. Alas for our hopes, alas for our soul, if we subscribe to a creed and fail to subscribe to a neighbor's need. Love manifests itself in little ministries—the small, homely, never-to-be-forgotten ministries that are often wordless, yet they speak with insistent power when eloquent words are deep-covered in oblivion.

Without this ministry, without this evidence of the indwelling Christ, without this love that manifests itself in fragrant, homely service, we shall be like the Ephraimites when they would have escaped from the Gileadites over the fords of the Jordan—our "Shibboleth" would be only "Sibboleth." Or we might change the figure of speech and say, "The link of service will be lacking in the golden chain that binds earth to heaven."

Somehow everything within me rises up in rebellion against the words so often heard: "Preparation for death." What I need is preparation for life. Then the service stream that now moves so sluggishly will pulse as the blood pulses in my veins. Then, indeed, it will be mine—

> To close my eyes to earth,
> And wake in heaven—
> To know no death, if Christ
> Of life be leaven.

There is a verse that is sweeter than honey in the honeycomb to the faithful follower of the Master: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Satan and all his helpers are powerless to close the gates against a soul that comes over the service trail to the pearly gates.

Only the man who believes in a future life can face life's burdens and sorrows and disappointments high-heartedly. These are the schooldays of our soul, these present days; days of preparation, of life-furnishing, of soul-enlarging. Lessons—they rub elbows with us from the rising to the setting of the sun! Disappointments—how they lose their sting as we realize that they are God's appointments for us! Disappointments beget understanding, sympathy, helpfulness—they are life-enlargers.

Who will be shut out from heaven? Those who have the form of godliness but whose lives have denied the power thereof. Those who have said "Go!" with their lips, but not "Come!" with their lives. Those who have worshiped the Lord with their lips while their hearts have been far from him will be shut out—have they not taken his name in vain? Those who shut their ears to the cry of the poor shall be shut out: "Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard."

To put Christ first is heaven. To put self first is hell. Every seed of kindness and unselfish service, planted upon earth, will blossom in heavenly fruitage and perfection in heaven.

Non-Christians often say: "I will take my chances on heaven," and then build the fences of pride and selfishness and indifference so high that even God can not come over them unless repentance breaks them down. When a man says: "I will not!" he limits God. Chances! Heaven has nothing to do with chances—there are only certainties in heaven!

"By Substitution"

BY A. E. HECKER

SUBSTITUTION is a blessing to mankind. The prophet understood this when he said: "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." The successful life is largely a series of substitutions. Knowing what to substitute is very important. Many drift aimlessly along without trying to improve their present status in life. These lose the joy and pleasure of adventuring into new realms.

When we consider the thorn and the brier, we find that they are of little use to mankind. In fact, their presence is abhorred. They grow in waste places. Their natures are defensive. One always shuns direct contact with them. Their spikes prick, tear, and gouge. They destroy other vegetation and live to themselves alone, benefiting nothing. They are avoided by animals and man alike. When near the habitation of man, they are removed and destroyed.

The fir tree, on the other hand, is the king of the forest and its branches are a protection to birds and animals. Its presence is welcomed. Man provides laws for its protection and its growth is encouraged. Its wood is used in the erection of houses and utilized in a multitude of other ways. The tree itself presents a magnificent and stately appearance. The myrtle is a tree of fragrance and beauty and by the ancients was considered sacred.

Man, by nature, is much like the brier. Left to himself, he is selfish, greedy, and grasping. He becomes useless to his fellows, striving only to satisfy his selfish desires. He will even resort to murder to accomplish his ends. He can sink so low that he is avoided, despised and detested. The Jukes family is an apt illustration. By substitution man can set aside, remove, and eventually eradicate these traits. It may take years of training, or it may transpire over night. Science takes the bitter, sour crab tree just where it stands, cuts off a limb, and in its place grafts the cultivated branch, and we have the "Delicious" apple. Science takes the short cut in obtaining results. Instead of digging up the old crab, and planting in its stead the apple, and waiting for it to grow, it simply takes life as it finds it, builds upon the established root, and in a shorter time produces the perfect fruit.

Christianity can be grafted into man's character in much the same way. The objectionable habits of life can be put away and the new grafted on. A little instruction and training, under the power of the Spirit, and we behold the new life bearing fruit. With many of us it is just a constant growth. We learn that it is wrong to lie, and we replace lying by truth. We learn that selfishness is unbecoming a Christian, and we commence to share our blessings with others. Step by step we advance toward perfection.

The Gypsy camp is looked upon with a feeling of distrust, and stealing, deception, and immoral conduct is attributed to the Gypsy. Yet the power of God worked itself into the heart of Gypsy Smith and we have even the lowly Gypsy substituting the new life for the old and becoming a blessing to humanity by proclaiming the Gospel. When Paul set out on his tour of persecution, we have a life and character, perfect in the knowledge of the world, so far as instruction and study could make it. Paul's was a positive life, burning with ambition. His determination accomplished things. Instead of blotting out his life, when on his mission of persecution, the Spirit touched him and onto the established root of the old life was grafted the new. Christians well know the results. History was changed by a substitution in his ambitions.

The world is zealously chasing after material things. Christian people are awakening to the fact, as never before, that a change must take place. The Methodist Church has launched its big Centenary Movement. Other denominations are following their lead. Our church has always been an aggressive evangelical church, insisting that Christian character and living are the cure for the world's direst needs. And yet, could not our church, too, put on a more intensive program and do even more than its share, that this generation may see the world's false teachings substituted by the Gospel? Then will the thorn have been replaced by the fir tree and the brier by the myrtle tree.

2. "The Law of the Lord" Suggests Coöperation.—All needful blessings are insured by linking the human with the Divine; by the gracious intervention of the Divine in the sphere of the human. God's Word fully enlightens.

3. We Must "Delight" in the Word.—To make sure this alliance of the Divine with the human, for the blessing of the latter, the believer must adopt the attitude of a learner, entering into special relationship with the Divine in the full exemplification of faith, repentance and the various Christian graces.

4. "Planted by the Streams."—The beautiful picture of the tree bearing its fruit because its roots draw sustenance from the near by river, has become the common symbol of the fruitfulness of the soul which drinks continually from the river of living water, gushing forth from the throne of God. The soul is as dependent upon God as the tree is upon the waters. It is made for God, as the tree is made for the river. Large, vigorous, efficient, fruitful life is his who communes with God. Perhaps there is a little danger in our days, with our great emphasis on service and the doing of good works, to neglect this meditation in God's Law, this communion with the Great Father, which makes possible a rich and fruitful life. We must guard against this. Our lives will surely grow both weak and barren if we neglect this contact with the life-giving Spirit. The very effectiveness of our service and our abiding social enthusiasm rests in our oneness with God. He can not give much who is not continually enriching himself.

5. "Does Not Wither."—See how the Psalmist emphasizes the fact that he who abides in God possesses the blessedness of an unfading youth! There is no such thing as age in God. He whose life is hid with Christ in God, partakes of God's unchanging youth. He has discovered the inexhaustible waters of life—the river that never fails.

6. Godliness Is Gain.—Material as well as spiritual blessings follow in the wake of godliness. The Christian's faith lays hold upon the great realities. His convictions thrust themselves so deeply into the great truths of God's Word that it is impossible to dislodge them. His purposes go down through superficial, fleeting things to the eternal will of the Almighty, and so he stands steadfast and unmoved, even though the fiercest storms may beat upon him. To move a full-grown tree from its place is an exceedingly difficult matter. Great roots, like mighty arms, reach down into the earth, and, as you follow their endless ramifications, you recognize that, though you can destroy the tree, you can not uproot it. What a striking picture of a righteous man with deep-seated convictions! You always know just where to find him. The wind may drift sand or snow hither or thither, upon the earth's surface, but the great tree remains just where it was planted.

7. Suggestive References.—Acquaint thyself with the Lord (Job 22: 21). Learning from the Lord (Psa. 25: 12, 13). Delight thyself in the Lord (Psa. 37: 4, 11, 37). "They that trust in the Lord" (Psa. 125: 1, 5). Perfect peace (Isa. 26: 3, 12). "Justified by faith" (Rom. 5: 1). "To be spiritually minded is life and peace" (Rom. 8: 6). The Lord's own (Psa. 15: 1, 2). Those who receive the blessing of the Lord (Psa. 24: 3-5). "The path of the just" (Prov. 4: 18). How we may be renewed (2 Cor. 5: 17, 21). "Fruit of the Spirit" (Gal. 5: 22-26).

How much of a blessing to both the sister and the orphan, had that sister on the train been mothering an orphan instead of the dog. Even in the minds of worldly people such an act is commended, but, above that, it is pleasing in the sight of God. The procedure of the sister mentioned was undoubtedly very displeasing in the sight of God, and a disgrace to his church.

First Cor. 2: 16, 17 says: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." If we wish to keep this temple pure, as God would have it, we must live close to him and commune much with him, in order to partake of his nature and spirit. We are to be witnesses for him wherever we go and in whatever we do. Our future destiny depends largely on what we think, say and do, while here in life. Let us, who claim to be the Lord's followers, witness for him, for the Master is very much grieved and disappointed in us if we fail to witness for him. Many of us will be disappointed in that great day if we neglect this supreme privilege—witnessing for Christ.

The Shut-Outs

BY G. W. TUTTLE

THE most beautiful, comprehensive, spiritual creed that has ever been written will be no password to heaven. Alas for our hopes, alas for our soul, if we subscribe to a creed and fail to subscribe to a neighbor's need. Love manifests itself in little ministries—the small, homely, never-to-be-forgotten ministries that are often wordless, yet they speak with insistent power when eloquent words are deep-covered in oblivion.

Without this ministry, without this evidence of the indwelling Christ, without this love that manifests itself in fragrant, homely service, we shall be like the Ephraimites when they would have escaped from the Gileadites over the fords of the Jordan—our "Shibboleth" would be only "Sibboleth." Or we might change the figure of speech and say, "The link of service will be lacking in the golden chain that binds earth to heaven."

Somehow everything within me rises up in rebellion against the words so often heard: "Preparation for death." What I need is preparation for life. Then the service stream that now moves so sluggishly will pulse as the blood pulses in my veins. Then, indeed, it will be mine—

> To close my eyes to earth,
> And wake in heaven—
> To know no death, if Christ
> Of life be leaven.

There is a verse that is sweeter than honey in the honeycomb to the faithful follower of the Master: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Satan and all his helpers are powerless to close the gates against a soul that comes over the service trail to the pearly gates.

Only the man who believes in a future life can face life's burdens and sorrows and disappointments high-heartedly. These are the schooldays of our soul, these present days; days of preparation, of life-furnishing, of soul-enlarging. Lessons—they rub elbows with us from the rising to the setting of the sun! Disappointments—how they lose their sting as we realize that they are God's appointments for us! Disappointments beget understanding, sympathy, helpfulness—they are life-enlargers.

Who will be shut out from heaven? Those who have the form of godliness but whose lives have denied [illegible] hell. Every seed of kindness and unselfish service, planted upon earth, will blossom in heavenly fruitage and perfection in heaven.

Non-Christians often say: "I will take my chances on heaven," and then build the fences of pride and selfishness and indifference so high that even God can not come over them unless repentance breaks them down. When a man says: "I will not!" he limits God. Chances! Heaven has nothing to do with chances—there are only certainties in heaven!

"By Substitution"

BY A. E. HECKER

SUBSTITUTION is a blessing to mankind. The prophet understood this when he said: "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." The successful life is largely a series of substitutions. Knowing what to substitute is very important. Many drift aimlessly along without trying to improve their present status in life. These lose the joy and pleasure of adventuring into new realms.

When we consider the thorn and the brier, we find that they are of little use to mankind. In fact, their presence is abhorred. They grow in waste places. Their natures are defensive. One always shuns direct contact with them. Their spikes prick, tear, and gouge. They destroy other vegetation and live to themselves alone, benefiting nothing. They are avoided by animals and man alike. When near the habitation of man, they are removed and destroyed.

The fir tree, on the other hand, is the king of the forest and its branches are a protection to birds and animals. Its presence is welcomed. Man provides laws for its protection and its growth is encouraged. Its wood is used in the erection of houses and utilized in a multitude of other ways. The tree itself presents a magnificent and stately appearance. The myrtle is a tree of fragrance and beauty and by the ancients was considered sacred.

Man, by nature, is much like the brier. Left to himself, he is selfish, greedy, and grasping. He becomes useless to his fellows, striving only to satisfy his selfish desires. He will even resort to murder to accomplish his ends. He can sink so low that he is avoided, despised and detested. The Jukes family is an apt illustration. By substitution man can set aside, remove, and eventually eradicate these traits. It may take years of training, or it may transpire over night. Science takes the bitter, sour crab tree just where it stands, cuts off a limb, and in its place grafts the cultivated branch, and we have the "Delicious" apple. Science takes the short cut in obtaining results. Instead of digging up the old crab, and planting in its stead the apple, and waiting for it to grow, it simply takes life as it finds it, builds upon the established root, and in a shorter time produces the perfect fruit.

Christianity can be grafted into man's character in much the same way. The objectionable habits of life can be put away and the new grafted on. A little instruction and training, under the power of the Spirit, and we behold the new life bearing fruit. With many of us it is just a constant growth. We learn that it is wrong to lie, and we replace lying by truth. We learn that selfishness is unbecoming a Christian, and we commence to share our blessings with others. Step by step we advance toward perfection.

The Gypsy camp is looked upon with a feeling of distrust, and stealing, deception, and immoral conduct is attributed to the Gypsy. Yet the power of God worked itself into the heart of Gypsy Smith and we have even the lowly Gypsy substituting the new life for the old and becoming a blessing to humanity by proclaiming the Gospel. When Paul set out on his

AROUND THE WORLD

Federation of Bible Societies

At a recent meeting of the Board of the American Bible Society it was voted to effect a federation of all the Bible Societies of the world. It is quite obvious to all, how such a federation could largely avoid a duplication of effort, and thus tend to greater efficiency. The annual output of Bibles is 35,000,000, but even this vast number is inadequate to the demand. The proposed consolidation is, therefore, urgently needed, and will go far in a more thorough distribution of the Word of Life. While the world is facing perplexing questions and conditions, never before experienced, what better Counselor can be given to humanity than the Book that through all the ages has been the infallible Guide of humanity?

Prohibition in Nigeria

According to late reports, the prohibition of the importation of spirits into Nigeria is not likely to become permanent without considerable opposition from some of the more influential traders. While the prospect of prohibition is warmly welcomed by those who have the best interests of the country at heart, unfortunately some of the traders are more interested in continuing the traffic because of the gain involved, than they are in seeing a sober nation. Sir H. H. Johnston, president of the African Society of London, recently said: "Nothing could be more satisfactory than the general situation in Nigeria, where we are now definitely promised the removal of the last blot on an intelligent administration—the traffic in distilled liquors."

The Japanese as Discriminators

It is not wholly flattering to the people of our land—who have rather prided themselves on their clear-cut conceptions of morality—to learn that out of 4,291,000 feet of film, passed by American censorship, the Japanese critic found only 785,000 feet that would conform to the standard of propriety deemed essential by his countrymen. Sensational love affairs, daring hold-up scenes, thrilling encounters and the eventual slaughter of one or more of the participants, are not regarded as being particularly elevating to the morals of the people, and hence they are ruled out. Somehow or other, the attitude of our Nipponese friends impresses us as a silent but nevertheless effective rebuke to the authorities of our land, in their unwarranted leniency.

Helping Syria's Needy Ones

Working hand in hand, the American Red Cross and the British Army of Occupation have been doing a great deal for the people of the Bible Lands. When the Red Cross proposed the establishment of an orphanage at Aleppo for Armenian children who had lost their parents in the wholesale deportations into the desert, the British Army offered to supply the necessary tents and erect them. Seven hundred children find shelter and comfort as a result of this coöperation. As the town became crowded with refugees, penniless and destitute, the Americans and British set up an employment bureau, giving work in the construction of buildings and roads to all desiring it. In only a short time, a wonderful transformation has been wrought in all parts of the Bible Lands.

Japan Promises Shantung's Return

Restitution of the much-discussed Province of Shantung to China, by Japan, within a year, was predicted recently by Yosuke Matsucka, secretary in the foreign department of Japan, and a member of the Japanese Peace Delegation. Mr. Matsucka expects to see negotiations opened with China at a very early date, and he promises that Japan will withdraw from Shantung as soon as all preliminaries to that end have been disposed of. The Peace Treaty requires Germany to hand over to Japan all the documents relative to Shantung, within three months after the treaty comes into force. When this is done, Japan is ready to take the final steps towards restitution. Possibly this explanation will serve to remove any fears that may have been entertained regarding the Shantung incident, and its bearings upon the Peace Treaty.

Italian Ruler Gives Fortune to the Needy

In the spirit of true democracy King Victor Emmanuel has decided to surrender all the crown properties for the benefit of needy toilers and for the national relief of disabled soldiers. The crown properties of Italy are larger than those of any other country—the royal family having inherited the properties formerly belonging to the rulers of the eleven states, into which Italy was divided before the Kingdom became united. The King has already handed over six of the finest palaces, in addition to villas and parks, for the use of disabled soldiers and sailors, and for the maintenance of war orphans. Further distribution will go far in the adequate relief of needy toilers. It is also worthy of mention that Italy's ruler has in the past retained only a small portion of the salary which the nation has been paying him, distributing the remainder to the needy of his realm.

Russian Jews Turn Christian

A recent cablegram to the "New York Globe" states that thousands of Jews in Russia are uniting with the various Christian churches—doing this despite the aerid opposition of the Soviet to Christianity. Just how long this mass movement of Jews towards the Christian churches will continue, is difficult to foretell at this time. The unsettled state of Russia makes any sort of guess exceedingly problematical. Nevertheless the large numbers of Jews, now turning to Christ, is a matter of exceeding interest to the student of prophecy. What does it portend? It is a matter of considerable importance when so many of Abraham's chosen seed accept the teachings of Christ.

Snares for Children

Sociologists are viewing with alarm a growing tendency to make dancing more popular than it has ever been before. Not only are the various dancing-teachers doing a larger business than previously, with a corresponding increase of financial gain, but the public schools, in many places, are also catering to the desire of those who are infatuated by the mazes of the dance. In consequence of the last-named feature, parents who have convictions on the subject find themselves in a serious dilemma. Their children are expected to fall in line with their associates, no matter what parental preferences may be. This is surely a time when the faith of many earnest believers is put to a critical test.

Their Grateful Acknowledgment

Some weeks ago the farmers of the Allison district in La Plata County, Colo., were threatened by a devastating invasion of grasshoppers. Fervent prayers were offered by many, that their crops might be spared, but every means of fighting the pest was also employed. Seemingly the threatened destruction was praetically averted, and in expression of their gratitude, the farmers decided to donate the remainder of their "grasshopper war fund" to the relief of famine in Europe. One is impressed by the very practical act of these farmers. Having been afforded the desired relief, they were more than willing to show their gratitude by helping the needy elsewhere. If you are favored, brother or sister, be sure to pass it on!

Help Needed for 4,000,000 Children in Europe

According to latest advices from Herbert C. Hoover, Europe still needs private charity. Most of the European Governments have all they can do to keep moving, hence outside help is imperative. Heretofore the American Relief Administration has been feeding about 4,000,000 children, but that work will have to be done by private organizations hereafter. Mr. Hoover regards the child welfare movement as being the most important of all relief work, and hopes that the different organizations in the United States will coördinate their efforts to that end. While many European critics have accused Americans of being mercenary, ample evidences of our generosity have now convinced the most skeptical that the great world need lies very close to the nation's heart.

Fighting Bolshevism in the United States

When the workers of the Evangelistic Committee in New York City went into a new section of one of the foreign neighborhoods on the East Side of the city, they found that at least seventy-five per cent of the adults were exponents of Bolshevism. Children of that section refused to sing the national anthem or to salute the flag. But the workers persevered in their task of winning the children, and soon their prayerful efforts began to take effect. Hundreds who formerly scoffed at the well-directed efforts of the workers, are now the most enthusiastic supporters of the propaganda of uplift. Bibles and Testaments are distributed to eager inquirers, and as indications are now, Bolshevism has received its death-blow. By winning the children, the older ones have been made to see the light. Truly, "a little child shall lead them."

Argonne Veterans Against Conscription

Universal military training and a billion-dollar standing army have been loudly acclaimed by militarists, as the all-sufficient panacea to guarantee national security. Such, however, is not the conviction of those who have stood in the forefront of the struggle, where the battle raged fiercest. Resolutions have been sent to Congress by the National Guard Association of the United States, during its late annual convention in New York. Every member of Congress received a telegram from this organization—the men who won Chateau Thierry and the Argonne—notifying him that they will not stand for conscription in America in time of peace. We quote in part: "The League of Nations and the Chamberlain-Kahn bill can never go hand in hand. Failing utterly in its efforts to secure necessary recruits for the regular army, the general staff now attempts, in time of peace, under the guise of a universal service bill, to resort to conscription and to seize from their homes the youth of America for service in the regular army in the Philippines . . . and even in Russia, should the military dictator, created by the provisions of this vicious bill, determine that the emergency demanded it."

Our Latest Insular Possession

By the stipulations of the Peace Conference, the Island of Yap, one of the Carolines, was awarded to the United States. Formerly a German possession, it will hereafter serve as a cable and coaling station for our country, being on the direct route from Hawaii to the Philippines. It is to be hoped that the new ownership will be a decided change for the better, so far as the seven thousand inhabitants are concerned, that dwell on the island of but seventy-nine square miles. The history of Yap and the other islands of the Caroline group is a most checkered one. As early as 1852 the American Board of Foreign Missions began work among the natives, gaining a fair foothold. In 1885 Spain obtained control of the islands, which meant the driving out of all Protestant missionaries and an alarming increase of drunkenness. During the Spanish-American war, Germany was given control of the islands. Improved methods have highly raised the productivity and commerce of the Carolines during recent years.

The Mexican Situation

Various opinions are being expressed in the public press, concerning the restoration of orderly conditions in Mexico. While many of the journals are openly favoring armed intervention by the United States, such a step is open to many serious objections, and several leading religious journals are voicing these in no uncertain terms. "The American Friend," a wide-awake weekly, published under the auspices of the Society of Friends or Quakers, takes a decided stand on the question, and even urges that Representatives and Senators in Washington be petitioned against armed intervention in Mexico—the petitioners giving their reasons for such action. A list of Representatives and Senators is appended, so that all may know to whom to send their petitions. It is well to look at the Mexican situation calmly, without being led astray by those who have financial interests at stake. If a strong Government, like that of the United States, were to step in and by force of arms put down disorder, such action would entail unwarranted cost through the destruction of life—American as well as Mexican—and of property. The American lives lost in such an enterprise would certainly vastly outnumber those, said to have been murdered in Mexico within the past six years. Then, too, armed intervention by America, or any other foreign power, would array against her the entire Mexican nation, including the best people as well as the worst, for they would entertain a lingering suspicion that we were actuated by selfish motives. Most of all, the entire program of missionary activity by Protestant churches would be seriously imperiled.

Japan and the Sunday-School Convention

Two thousand Sunday-school workers are to make a peaceful invasion of Japan next year, when the International Sunday School Association convenes in that distant realm. The very prospect of it excites our imagination and compels serious thought. The people of Japan—always polite—are looking forward to the occasion with the evident desire to make their visitors heartily welcome. At the same time they are wondering as to the whys and wherefores of the great gathering, and here are some of the questions they are already asking: "(1) Are the Sunday-school delegates coming to spread the teachings of Christianity? (2) Are they coming to make Japan and America more friendly? (3) Are they coming to learn of our excellencies, or will they merely try to teach us theirs? (4) What can we do to make their stay among us pleasant and profitable?" Japan now ranks as one of the five great powers of the earth and regards herself as the advance agent of civilization in the East. Naturally the Nipponese are just a little curious to know why the Sunday-school workers of the world should make the long voyage to Japan, when so many other countries are situated so much more conveniently. Being assured that the choice was made as a distinct tribute to Japan's wide-awake and progressive leadership, the people are now endeavoring, in their hospitable, courteous way, to find a sufficient number of homes to shelter the tourists. They are fully conscious of the fact that it will require no small amount of tact and foresight to make things just right for the visitors. Not doubting the good intentions of the enthusiastic Sunday-school workers, it is to be hoped that all will be persons of adaptability, who will readily conform to the strange customs of their Nipponese hosts. One of the most progressive Japanese, who has spent many years in the United States, recently said: "My greatest fear is that the Americans might go back with a false impression of Japan, and that the Japanese might get a false impression of America from them." The convention will afford a glorious opportunity to demonstrate to the Japanese hosts and hostesses what the power of Christianity has done for its exponents—as evidenced by those who will be in attendance at the great gathering. The two thousand delegates, who will represent America's Sunday-school forces, will have to shoulder a great responsibility. It is not too early to think about the best way of discharging it.

In only a short time, a wonderful transformation has been wrought in all parts of the Bible Lands.

Japan Promises Shantung's Return

Restitution of the much-discussed Province of Shantung to China, by Japan, within a year, was predicted recently by Yosuke Matsuoka, secretary in the foreign department of Japan, and a member of the Japanese Peace Delegation. Mr. Matsuoka expects to see negotiations opened with China at a very early date, and he promises that Japan will withdraw from Shantung as soon as all preliminaries to that end have been disposed of. The Peace Treaty requires Germany to hand over to Japan all the documents relative to Shantung, within three months after the treaty comes into force. When this is done, Japan is ready to take the final steps towards restitution. Possibly this explanation will serve to remove any fears that may have been entertained regarding the Shantung incident, and its bearings upon the Peace Treaty.

Italian Ruler Gives Fortune to the Needy

In the spirit of true democracy King Victor Emmanuel has decided to surrender all the crown properties for the benefit of needy toilers and for the national relief of disabled soldiers. The crown properties of Italy are larger than those of any other country—the royal family having inherited the properties formerly belonging to the rulers

Russian Jews Turn Christian

A recent cablegram to the "New York Globe" states that thousands of Jews in Russia are uniting with the various Christian churches—doing this despite the acrid opposition of the Soviet to Christianity. Just how long this mass movement of Jews towards the Christian churches will continue, is difficult to foretell at this time. The unsettled state of Russia makes any sort of guess exceedingly problematical. Nevertheless the large numbers of Jews, now turning to Christ, is a matter of exceeding interest to the student of prophecy. What does it portend? It is a matter of considerable importance when so many of Abraham's chosen seed accept the teachings of Christ.

Snares for Children

Sociologists are viewing with alarm a growing tendency to make dancing more popular than it has ever been before. Not only are the various dancing-teachers doing a larger business than previously, with a corresponding increase of financial gain, but the public schools, in many places, are also catering to the desire of those who are infatuated by the mazes of the dance. In consequence of the last-named feature, parents who have convictions on the subject find themselves in a serious dilemma. Their children are expected to fall in line with their associates, no matter what parental preferences may be. This is surely a time when the faith of many earnest believers is put to a critical test.

Their Grateful Acknowledgment

Some weeks ago the farmers of the Allison district in La Plata County, Colo., were threatened by a devastating invasion of grasshoppers. Fervent prayers were offered by many, that their crops might be spared, but every means of fighting the pest was also employed. Seemingly the threatened destruction was practically averted, and in expression of their gratitude, the farmers decided to donate the remainder of their "grasshopper war fund" to the relief of famine in Europe. One is impressed by the very practical act of these farmers. Having been afforded the desired relief, they were more than willing to show their gratitude by helping the needy elsewhere. If you are favored, brother or sister, be sure to pass it on!

Help Needed for 4,000,000 Children in Europe

According to latest advices from Herbert C. Hoover, Europe still needs private charity. Most of the European Governments have all they can do to keep moving, hence outside help is imperative. Heretofore the American Relief Administration has been feeding about 4,000,000 children, but that work will have to be done by private organizations hereafter. Mr. Hoover regards the child welfare movement as being the most important of all relief work, and hopes that the different organizations in the United States will coördinate their efforts to that end. While many European critics have accused Americans of being mercenary, ample evidences of our generosity have now convinced the most skeptical that the great world need lies very close to the nation's heart.

Fighting Bolshevism in the United States

When the workers of the Evangelistic Committee in New York City went into a new section of one of the foreign neighborhoods on the East Side of the city, they found that at least seventy-five per cent of the adults were exponents of Bolshevism. Children of that section refused to sing the national anthem or to salute the flag. But the workers persevered in their task of winning the children, and soon their prayerful efforts began to take effect. Hundreds who formerly scoffed at the well-directed efforts of the workers, are now the most enthusiastic supporters of the propaganda of uplift. Bibles and Testaments are distributed to eager inquirers, and as indications are now, Bolshevism has received its death-blow. By winning the children, the older ones have been made to see the light. Truly, "a little child shall lead them."

Argonne Veterans Against Conscription

Universal military training and a billion-dollar standing army have been loudly acclaimed by militarists, as the all-sufficient panacea to guarantee national security. Such, however, is not the conviction of those who have stood in the forefront of the struggle, where the battle raged fiercest. Resolutions have been sent to Congress by the National Guard Association of the United States, during its late annual convention in New York. Every member of Congress received a telegram from this organization—the men who won Chateau Thierry and the Argonne—notifying him that they will not stand for conscription in America in time of peace. We quote in part: "The to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Men who had not been in the habit of going to church were listening attentively. They saw that they had missed the greatest thing in the world—that the soul must be given back into God's keeping. That night some knelt in prayer who had never knelt before. His ministry was greatly blessed.

His sister Lavinia was satisfied. She no longer said: "What if he should fail to go through school?" "What if he should get discouraged and quit?" She knew that come what would, Harley had made choice of his life-work. He was a blessing among men. She experienced the truth of the following lines and was at peace:

"If only we strive to be pure and true
To each of us there will come an hour,
When the tree of life shall burst into flower,
And rain at our feet the glorious dower
Of something grander than ever we knew."

"Ask Teacher"

BY BESS BATES

"HENRY has an awful time in school. His teachers don't seem to understand him," complained Mrs. Myers, as she carefully embroidered a centerpiece.

"Judith has been doing real well this year," Mrs. Horner said, as she edged out of the sunshine on the porch. "Last year she had an awful time, too. But she likes her teachers better this year. It helps when they like their teachers."

"Yes, it does," agreed Mrs. Samson. "But how do you know if they are going to like the teacher? And what are you going to do when they don't? It seems that a good teacher, whom they do like, never stays more than one year anyway. Then some one else comes in and spoils everything. I have just about given up hopes of James ever getting through high school. He doesn't take a bit of interest in his lessons. It seems to me that the teachers get worse instead of better. How did you ever manage to get George through, Mrs. Will?" And Mrs. Samson turned to the lady next to her, who was quietly mending and listening to the talk.

"All right; I will tell you," declared Mrs. Will, as if she had made a sudden decision. "This is something that I never told at the time, but now, since George is safely through, I'll tell you about it and maybe my experience will help you."

Mrs. Will laid down her work and faced the other three. "George has always been a rather hard boy to handle. He had a good deal of trouble in school, but, somehow or other, he managed to get through until he got to high school. Then he had more trouble than ever. His father and I were about ready to give up and let him go to work. He wanted to had enough, but we did so want him to have an education. It seemed, though, that he wasn't learning a thing in school. He just frittered away his time and would not work."

"Exactly the way Henry does," interrupted Mrs. Myers.

"And Judith last year," added Mrs. Horner.

"His father and I had about decided to let him stop when we got a notice from the principal that George had been expelled."

"You did! And no one ever knew!" exclaimed the ladies.

Mrs. Will smiled.

"No one ever knew. That principal was a thoroughly honest fellow. It seemed that when George had been expelled, we could not stand to have him stop. It shocked George, too. He did not want to disappoint us. We talked it over and the more we talked, the more George wanted to go back and the more we wanted him to go back.

"'There is one thing certain,' declared George. 'If I have to stop now, I will never go back into that school again.'

"I decided right then to go and see the principal and talk it over with him. George and his father didn't think it would do any good. George said when the principal once made up his mind, he never changed. But I went anyhow. The principal was very courteous, but he was firm.

"'Mrs. Will,' he said, 'I have thought this over carefully. I do not like to expel a boy, but George does not work. We might keep him in spite of that, but he is the leader of a bunch of boys who will not work and are constantly causing trouble in school. If we expel George, the rest will line up and we can have a good school. If we keep him here, and he continues to influence the boys the way he is doing now, he will demoralize the school. I am sorry to do this, but it seems the only way out.'

"You may well believe it was hard for me to hear him say that about George and harder yet to believe it. I guess I had always looked at George's good qualities. I wanted to defend George, to tell the principal he was unjust to George and did not know him, but if I had done that, he surely would expel George, and all our hopes for his education would be lost. So I kept my temper and said to him: 'Talk it over with George and if he will promise to do better, will you give him another chance?' Then I told him of our plans for George and how they would all be spoiled if he did not get through.

"Do you know, after I told him our side of it, he was just as nice as he could be. He said he would give George another chance and asked me to work with him, to help George along. He said he always liked to have parents talk to him, for it helped so much in handling the children.

"Well, George agreed to do better and stayed on in school. I can't say that he was a shining light in high school. Most boys aren't, but now he is getting through college in good shape and we surely are thankful that we talked things over with the principal that time.

"I used to think that teachers couldn't know about children as the parents did, for they were not parents. But I have come to the conclusion that being a parent doesn't always mean that one knows all about raising children. Teachers study their business, and I believe that if more parents would go to them for advice, their children would get along better in school. It helps both sides when they understand each other."

IN MEMORY OF MARY PASDACH

Mary Pasdach, daughter of John and Sophia (Hawker) Bunga, was born in Berlin, Germany, Nov. 24, 1836, died at her home, near Patton, Ind., Aug. 6, 1919, aged 82 years, 8 months and 13 days.

Mary Pasdach

She was married in Germany, August, 1857, to Christian Pasdach, a soldier in the German army, who preceded her in death Sept. 17, 1913. Mr. Pasdach, his wife and their one child, emigrated from Germany to America in 1863, locating in Pennsylvania, where they lived three years. During this period Mr. and Mrs. Pasdach entered the Church of the Brethren, living ever faithful. In 1866 they moved from Pennsylvania to Illinois, where they lived nine years. In 1875 they moved to the farm near Patton, where both resided until their death. To their union were born eleven children, nine of whom survive. One died in infancy in Germany, and a daughter passed away a few years ago.

In the days of old, Grandma Pasdach would have been praised as a good wife, for of her it could truly be said: "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness." She leaves three sons and six daughters, forty-seven grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted by Eld. G. B. Heeter, assisted by Elders A. R. Bridge and John Mourer, after which the remains were laid away in the Pike Creek cemetery, Monticello church, Ind.

VIRDEN, ILLINOIS

The past weeks have been glorious ones to the Virden church. Night after night Bro. J. W. Lear, in his forceful, tactful way, brought us the message of salvation. Sister Lear loyally assisted in personal work. The recent accident that befell our dear Brother and Sister Lear has only made them more zealous for the Master. How beautiful is such consecration of hearts and lives!

Our singer, Bro. E. F. Couser, did his part faithfully, bringing home the message of Jesus through the powerful instrument of song. His solos, and special numbers by the home talent, were an inspiration.

One evening a duet of "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" was sung in the audience room. After each verse a quartette behind the baptistry softly answered with the chorus of "Tell Mother, I'll Be There." Every listener was deeply touched.

Ten were received into the church through baptism. Others are "almost persuaded." Church members were strengthened and the community at large felt the great warning of our motto throughout the revival, "Get Right with God." Stella Brubaker.

NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA, GEORGIA AND FLORIDA

The Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida were held in the Brummett's Creek church, Mitchell County, N. C., on Thursday, August 21. Bro. J. H. Moore acted as Moderator in a very able manner. The Ministerial Meeting was held during the forenoon.

"The Characteristics, the Calling and the Work of the Minister" were discussed by Bro. S. P. Jones and Bro. Geo. A. Branscom, who spoke from their rich experience in ministerial life. The discussions of these brethren were followed by general discussions. We were made to see that the minister should have a purpose, should behave well, should have patience and sympathy, should be serious in the pulpit, and should be a typical Brethren preacher in teaching and practice.

In another discussion, the work of the congregation, in hearing and living the Gospel, in praying for the minister, and in giving to the cause of Christ was presented.

At the close of the forenoon session, in short sentences, the most impressive thoughts were expressed.

In the afternoon, we met in the Sunday-school Meeting. "The Business of the Sunday-school, in Bringing Them In, in Keeping Them There, and in Winning Them to Christ" had been assigned to Sister Sarah G. Felthouse. Since she could not be present, she sent an able paper, which was read. This was followed by a further discussion of the topic by Bro. A. D. Crist.

It became the lot of Bro. L. R. Coffman, of Daleville, Va., in the absence of Bro. W. A. Reed, to tell us how to stir up greater interest in our Sunday-school work. He told us "to put ourselves into the proposition." During the discussion of the topic we were also told to plod on, and to keep on stirring.

Bro. J. H. Garst told us that the best method of presenting the lesson to the class is to combine the lecture method and the question method. Again, in short sentences, the most impressive points of the meeting were presented.

In the night service, Bro. J. H. Moore gave us an excellent sermon on "The Church of Christ." The church began with the work of John the Baptist, but the Bible does not say when the church was organized. The real church is independent of organization.

On Friday morning began the sessions of the District Conference. The organization resulted in the election of Bro. Geo. A. Branscom as Moderator; Bro. Clayton B. Miller, Reading Clerk; Bro. J. H. Griffith, Writing Clerk. The Credential Committee, composed of Elders S. P. Jones, J. H. Garst and H. H. Masters, had previously been elected by the Elders' Meeting. The response to the roll call of the churches showed that quite a number were not represented in the delegate body.

Not much business came before the meeting. One paper was returned. The position of the District Conference on dress was re-affirmed. By resolution the Program Committee for the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings was authorized to provide a program during each District Conference on "Christian Adornment." By Mt. Pleasant.—We began our series of meetings August 11, conducted by Sept. M. Fleury, of Girard, Ill. The interest grew from the beginning. Eighteen inspiring sermons were delivered. Six confessed Christ. We feel that the meetings were a success and that the community as well as the church received much benefit.—Lera E. Miller, Ladoga, Ind., August 29.

Pine Creek.—August 10 Bro. I. R. Berry, of Flora, Ind., was with us in an all-day Harvest Meeting. He also preached for us on Saturday evening. Sunday morning he preached a splendid Harvest sermon. Dinner was served at noon in the basement. In the afternoon Bro. Berry preached an inspiring missionary sermon. An offering of $121.67 was lifted. In the evening his subject was "The Seven Seals." We had a well-filled house at all of these services, and the sermons were very much appreciated by all. August 31 Sister Mary Morris, of Mishawaka, Ind., gave us one period in the morning after Sunday-school. She spoke in the interest of the Christian Workers' Meeting, on the "Second Coming of Christ," which was very interesting. Sept. 27 and 28 we expect to have with us Bro. Ezra Flory, of Chicago.—M. S. Morris, North Liberty, Ind., Sept. 2.

IOWA

Franklin.—We expect Bro. H. B. Mohler and wife, of Sterling, Ill., to begin a series of meetings Sept. 14. August 22 Bro. Emmert Stover and sister, Miriam, of Mt. Wingert gave a four lectures on the "Five-Year Forward Movement," which was an inspiration to us all. August 1 Sister Lydia Taylor, of Mt. Morris, gave an interesting lecture on "Simple Life." Just recently Bro. O. E. Messamer was with us in the interest of Bethany Bible School, and gave us two helpful sermons. August 24 the County Sunday-school Convention was held here, with a representation of nine schools. Several of our young people are planning to leave soon for our church colleges. We have been enjoying uplifting messages from our elder and pastor, Bro. Wm. Wagner.—Mrs. Chas. J. Wray, Prescott, Iowa, August 30.

KANSAS

Burr Oak congregation received much spiritual good from the series of meetings held recently by Bro. J. W. Lear, of Virden, Ill. The attendance was good considering the very busy season and the warm weather. The evangelist made many personal calls, which were much enjoyed by the members and also proved a benefit to the meetings. Four were received into the church, three of whom were baptized, and one reclaimed.—Carrie E. Wagoner, Burr Oak, Kans., Sept. 3.

Cedar Creek church met in council August 23, with Eld. Lawrence Kreider presiding. Two letters were received and one was granted. Our series of meetings will begin Oct. 12, with Bro. Wm. Buckley in charge.—Martha Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, Sept. 3.

Springfield (First Church).—August 23 we held our annual Sunday-school outing in Snyder Park. In spite of the severe storm, that swept over the city in the afternoon, the services were not class. Thursday evening the "Live Wires" class gave a supper in honor of the boys who had been in the service—eight of them—about fifty of the class being present. The supper was served on the lawn at the parsonage. After supper the evening was spent in a social way. Our Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition. The attendance has been fine all summer. Our churchhouse is very inadequate for our present needs. Soultions are being considered. We are in favor of the Forward Movement, than to erect a commodious church building in the near future, so that the work could go forward as it should.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, Springfield, Ohio, August 30. Subject of Bro. Heine: "The New Order of Life That Jesus Came to Establish," being based on the Sermon on the Mount. Six have confessed Christ since our last report.—Mrs. J. C. Inman, 734 W. Sunday night, August 24. We were pleased to have Bro. Chas. S.
Morris and wife, of McPherson College, with us over the first Sunday in August.—Alice L. Mohler, Versailles, Mo., Sept. 1.

to represent us at District Meeting: Bro. Frank Van Pelt and Sister Emma Van Trump are to represent the church, and Sisters Ida Hollar and Mary Minnich, the Sunday-school. Officers were elected for our Christian Workers' Meeting, with Sister Grace Bowman, president. Our love feast will be held Oct. 18. A committee of three was appointed to look after installing a new light plant in our church. August 3 Bro. Earl M. Bowman, of McPherson, Kans., began a three weeks' revival meeting, which closed last Sunday.
Five confessed Christ and were baptized. The attendance was very good throughout the meetings, considering the busy season. Bro.
Bowman was liked by every one who heard him. He and Sister Laura Bowman, who led the singing, did their part toward the saving of souls.—Mary Bowman, Hardin, Mo., August 26.

NORTH CAROLINA

Fraternity.—Eld. P. S. Miller, of Roanoke, Va., began our series of meetings August 10, continuing until the evening of August 18, preaching in all eleven sermons. Four were added to the church, three being baptized and one reclaimed. August 13 Bro. Fred J.
Wampler, our missionary from China, gave one of his illustrated lectures on China. The house was filled to its fullest capacity. The lecture was very interesting and enjoyed by all present.—J. P.
Robertson, Winston-Salem, N. C., August 20.

NORTH DAKOTA

Brantford.—August 24 Bro. D. A. Miller gave us a very interesting discourse while our elder, Bro. W. A. Deardorff, held services at the James River church; and Bro. A. Kreps was at a mission point. Our Harvest Meeting will be held Sept. 24, an all-day meeting, with a miscellaneous program.—Mrs. H. B. Row, Brantford, N. Dak., Sept. 1.

OHIO

Bear Creek.—Bro. John Robinson, of Pleasant Hill, began a revival at this place July 27 and closed August 17, preaching twenty-five inspiring sermons. Seven were added to the church, five of whom were baptized. The members were greatly strengthened. August 17 Sister Robinson gave an illustrated talk to the children in the morning, and in the evening a talk along the line of Junior Christian Workers. August 24 a joint Sunday-school Meeting was held. Many good thoughts were given by the assembled workers. The program was concluded by a temperance address, given by Dr. E. H. Cosner, of Dayton.—Maudie W. Filbrun, Dayton, Ohio, August 28.

Beech Grove church met in council August 23, with Eld. Sylvan Hockwalter presiding. Brethren Roy Kinsinger and Samuel Boyer were also present. Two letters were received. Bro. Jonas Royer was installed into the ministry, and Bro. Solomon Bolinger was ordained to the eldership. We held an all-day temperance meeting Sunday, August 31, which was well attended.—Hettie Rife, Hollansburg, Ohio, Sept. 1.

East Dayton church met in council August 23, with Eld. J. W.
Fidler presiding. We decided to hold our love feast Sept. 27, at 7:30 P. M. We now have a new Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Wm.
Buckley, and family, to be with us soon. Since the hot weather is over and people are home from their vacations, our attendance is increasing. Our pastor is preaching a series of Sunday-school singing-class, which was much appreciated, and we hope will be a great help to the church.—Dacie Baldwin, Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 2.

Painter Creek church met in council August 30, with Eld. Lawrence Kreider presiding. Two letters were received and one was granted.
Our series of meetings will begin Oct. 12, with Bro. Wm. Buckley in charge.—Martha Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, Sept. 3.

Springfield (First Church).—August 23 we held our annual Sunday-school outing in Snyder Park. In spite of the severe storm that swept over the city just before noon, many of our people met. Last Thursday evening the "Live Wires" class gave a supper in honor of the boys who had been in the service—eight of them—about fifty of the class being present. Tables were prepared on the lawn at the parsonage. After supper the evening was spent in a social way.
Our Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition. The attendance has been fine all summer. Our churchhouse is very inadequate for our present needs. Southern Ohio could do nothing better, in view of the Forward Movement, than to erect a commodious church building in the near future, so that the work could go forward as it should. Our pastor is preaching a series of sermons on the general theme: "The New Order of Life That Jesus Came to Establish," being based on the Sermon on the Mount. Six have confessed Christ since our last report.—Mrs. J. C. Inman, 734 W. Columbia Street, Springfield, Ohio, August 30.

Swan Creek church met in council, with Bro. D. W. Stutzman presiding. Our communion service will be held Nov. 1, at 2 P. M., at the West house. We are in the midst of an interesting revival meeting, conducted by Bro. Myers, of Goshen, Ind.—Nancy Smith, Wauseon, Ohio, August 30.

Woodworth.—August 23 members and friends of our church enjoyed a day of spiritual as well as temporal blessing in the form of a joint Sunday-school picnic. A splendid program had been arranged by the three Sunday-schools—Zion Hill, Bethel and Woodworth. The following Sunday we held our council, with Eld. J. F.
Kindler, of Canton, present. Bro. John B. Royer has consented to give us several meetings in the near future. We have also secured Bro. Jesse J. Anglemyer, of Williamstown, Ohio, to hold a series of meetings in October. Six have been baptized since our last report.
—Ruth Garver, Pelmel, Ohio, August 27.

PENNSYLVANIA

Annville church held her Harvest Meeting August 16. Ministers from adjoining congregations were with us. An offering was lifted for the Nefsville Orphanage. Our regular council convened in the Annville house Sept. 1, with Bro. A. B. Grosnickle presiding. Three certificates were received and one granted. Our love feast will be held Oct. 25 and 26, at 10 A. M. The Annville Sunday-school will have a Children's Meeting Sept. 14. The South Annville Sunday-school will have a Children's Meeting Sept. 21.—Fannie Kreider, Lebanon, Pa., Sept. 2.

Back Creek church met in council August 16 at the Upton house, avenue to the mind. Children want to do things. We would say to others: "By all means have a Vacation Bible School next year."

Brother and Sister Wampler gave another illustrated lecture for us on the pneumonic plague. We were made to feel more keenly the unselfishness of the workers on the field, as the deadly disease and the results therefrom were explained to us. Sister Wampler presented the Primary Department with a box of articles from China which, we hope, will prove to be real missionary sermons to the children, and instill in their hearts a longing to help in the saving of China for Christ.

While Brother and Sister Garber have been away, Brethren H. Allen Hoover, C. E. Trout, D. C. Moomaw and I. N. H. Beahm filled the appointments. Sunday morning Bro. Miller preached. His text was "Keep the Heart Right." In the evening Bro. Moy Gwong, of Bethany Bible School, preached for us. We were glad indeed for his coming and the information given us about the people of China.

Sister Kathrine Royer has been doing some very effective work at the Tinker Creek Mission this summer, and we hope to report some of the results of her work later.

The main church and mission Sunday-schools went to Coyners Springs for an outing August 20.

HUNTINGTON, INDIANA

Sunday, August 24, was a day of mountain-top experiences for the Salamonie church. Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, Pa., preached a Harvest Sermon in the forenoon on the text, "Occupy Till I Come," and in the afternoon a missionary sermon which was a powerful appeal for a personal consecration for Christian service. The pastor, Eld. E. L. Heestand, then took charge and called for volunteers for definite Christian service. Twelve, of which number some were from other congregations, responded to the call and expressed a full surrender. Three of these had previously been volunteers. Several are looking forward to the foreign field, and the others hope to do home mission work. An offering of $132 was taken.

Previous to the Harvest Meeting Bro. Ober assisted us in afternoon conferences for Sunday-school workers, and gave four lectures, beginning on Wednesday evening, on the subjects: "Tragedies," "Living Beyond the Law," "Child Rights" and "Orange Blossoms." He has helped the community to larger visions of usefulness and deeper concern for the Lord's work.

In October our congregation will have the pleasure of entertaining the District Meeting of Middle Indiana.

Cora L. Heestand.

Several are looking forward to the foreign field, and the others hope to do home mission work. An offering of $132 was taken.

Previous to the Harvest Meeting Bro. Ober assisted us in afternoon conferences for Sunday-school workers, and gave four lectures, beginning on Wednesday evening, on the subjects: "Tragedies," "Living Beyond the Law," "Child Rights" and "Orange Blossoms." He has helped the community to larger visions of usefulness and deeper concern for the Lord's work.

In October our congregation will have the pleasure of entertaining the District Meeting of Middle Indiana.

A Wonderful Feeder of Faith

WHY does a mother think it worth while to continue efforts in behalf of her sick child after everybody else has abandoned hope? She loves the child more than anybody else. Love is a powerful faith builder.

Some people do not have much faith in the possibilities of reclaiming the sin-defiled and downtrodden. Their interest in such people is not great enough. That's the main trouble. They do not love enough.

Some persons do not have much faith in the possibility of saving very many people. Can it be that they do not realize the importance of salvation? Perhaps they think it does not amount to much anyway. Love, you know, is not easily dissuaded from the attainment of its object. It hangs on wonderfully.

Do you see why we do not dare to expect great things in the extension of the Kingdom? Why we hesitate to make large plans involving heavy expenditures of energy and money? We do not love enough. They who love much, try much. They who love much, believe much.

"Tribulation" and "Good Cheer"

THE purpose of that farewell discourse of Jesus, he said in the closing words, was to enable his disciples to have peace. And that purpose it has accomplished for many disciples besides those in the little group that heard the discourse. But how?

By removing them from the realm of peace-disturbing things? By taking them out of a world of tribulation? By promising to take the tribulation out of the world, for their sake? Not thus did Jesus seek to blind their eyes to facts. He had a better way.

"In the world ye have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

That's the true philosophy of peace. The road to it leads through trouble, not around it. Some things, indeed, we can escape; many, we can not. But we can overcome them. Jesus overcame, and his resources are available for us. "In me ye may have peace," he said.

In him—that's the only cure. For then we take life and its problems in his way and in his strength.

"In the world ye have tribulation." Granted. What of it? We would not minimize the fact. It is big and serious enough. "But be of good cheer. I have overcome the world."

The Church Boards and the Forward Movement

IT was one of the most significant meetings ever held in the Publishing House. Isn't that just what you would expect it to be? Consider what it was. The church Boards were assembled in joint session for the purpose of more effectually coördinating their efforts in promoting the Five-Year Forward Movement. With such a cause it could not be otherwise than impressive.

The Mission Board was represented by Otho Winger, Chas. D. Bonsack, J. J. Yoder and A. P. Blough, regular members, D. L. Miller, advisory member, and J. H. B. Williams, Secretary. The Sunday School Board was present in full force: H. K. Ober, J. M. Mohler, C. S. Ikenberry, Ezra Flory, J. W. Cline and J. E. Miller, Secretary. The members of the Educational Board in attendance were D. W. Kurtz, D. M. Garver, D. C. Reber and J. S. Flory. H. C. Early, of the Mission Board, and J. W. Lear, of the Educational Board, were absent. The newly-created Christian Workers' Board was represented by J. E. Miller, Acting Secretary. Eva Lichty Whisler, Vice-Chairman of this Board, was present at the closing of the session. S. S. Blough, a former member of the Sunday School Board, and several representatives of the Publishing House were also in attendance.

The meeting was opened with prayer, led by D. L. Miller.

The Chairman of the Sunday School Board, H. K. Ober, was made Chairman of the meeting, and the Secretary of the Mission Board, J. H. B. Williams, was appointed Secretary.

The principal business of the meeting was the consideration of the report of the previously appointed committee of Board Secretaries. The committee offered several recommendations.

One of these pertained to the appointment of a Committee on Evangelism. It was felt that there should be a committee whose special duty would be to promote the evangelistic goal of the Forward Movement. It was also felt, because of the close relation of this field to that of the General Mission Board, that the appointment should be made by that Board rather than by the joint meeting. Such a recommendation, after some discussion, was adopted. The discussion consisted chiefly of suggestions as to how the proposed committee might do its work most harmoniously with already existing machinery. A committee was appointed, we understand, at a final brief session of the Mission Board.

Probably the most important recommendation adopted was the one looking toward the employment of a Field Worker who is to devote all his time to the promotion of the Forward Movement. He is to be responsible to a committee consisting of the Secretaries of the four Boards and the Secretary of the Publishing House. An apportionment of the expense involved was agreed upon, and as soon as the man can be secured he is to be put into the field. Under the control of the Boards, through the Committee of Secretaries just indicated, he will be a kind of Campaign Director. With such a Director or Field Worker, whose time and energies are wholly given to this cause, it is believed that much greater success may be attained in realizing the suggested goals.

The question of a general budget system was discussed at some length. The advantages of such a system are so great that it is a pity the practical difficulties are so hard to overcome. It had been recommended that, while no general budget system seems feasible, the State Districts should be encouraged to adopt a budget system, including such items as Home Missions, Old People's Homes and Orphanages, Schools and Colleges, Sunday-schools, Christian Workers' Societies, etc. The whole question was referred to the Committee of Secretaries and the Field Worker.

The same disposition was made of a suggestion which came to the meeting with reference to the organization of Volunteer Bands in the local churches.

The fine temper of the meeting—its determination to be both aggressive and conservative—was nowhere displayed to better advantage than in the attitude taken toward the Interchurch World Movement. Since this Movement is an existing fact and its surveys of the field are already under way, the question of the attitude of the Boards and of our church in general could not be evaded even if there had been any disposition to do this. We quote verbatim from the minutes of the meeting:

"(a) The General Boards of the Church of the Brethren endorse the Interchurch World Movement and decide to coöperate with it in so far as it is consistent with the spirit of our people. (b) The Presidents of our Boards are appointed as our Committee on this Movement. (c) The Boards submit this action to Conference for its approval."

The work of the Movement will go on in our midst, regardless of what we do about it, but it was recognized that the advantages accruing to our own church will depend upon our coöperation. The benefits to any coöperating church from such a thoroughgoing survey as the Movement is making, will be very great. Yet it was also recognized that measures might be undertaken which we could not approve. Hence the decision to limit coöperation to what is "consistent with the spirit of our people." And the final decision to submit the matter to the next General Conference would seem to afford all needful protection to the interests of the church.

Our Church Boards are made up of consecrated men. You can not attend such a meeting as this was without feeling that strongly. They are careful. They have at heart the welfare of the church. And they are aggressive. They want the work to go forward. Under God's blessing, it will go forward.

The next joint meeting of the Boards is to be held in Elgin on Thursday, April 15, 1920.

Deal Gently with the Morons

You need not feel at all disgraced if you do not happen to be familiar with the word. It is a rare dictionary that contains it. The Chicago newspapers recently brought it to public attention in connection with the discussion of a certain crime.

A moron is a person with defective mental development, a grown-up with the understanding of a child. Most of the unfortunates of this class are harmless. A few are dangerous.

Isn't this the word we've lacked to complete our classification of church members? There are so many kinds, you know. And how we have wished for some simple, inoffensive label for those good people who never "put away childish things," whose conceptions of God and salvation and Christian life are exactly the same as those which they had in their spiritual infancy, whose ideal Christian, in short, is one who can belong to church for thirty years without learning anything.

Now we know where they belong. They are spiritual morons. But are they blameless? Did they try? Is the defect inherent? Anyway, better handle them gently.

Religion a Universal Instinct in Man

BY ALBERT C. WIEAND

MAN is incurably religious. Religion is an instinct, and it is universal among men, the same as any other instinct.

This has been at times denied. Charles Darwin, the scientist, once reported that the savages of the Tierra del Fuego Islands, of the extreme southern part of South America, are utterly devoid of religion in any form. But he was proven to be entirely mistaken, for when missionaries went among them they found religious beliefs and ceremonies. So also it was once reported that the Maoris, of Australia, were the lowest type of men, and that they were entirely devoid of any religious performances or rites. But John G. Paton reported investigations which again proved that these superficial observations were mistaken. He also explains the reason for such mistaken reports. Many savage peoples are very suspicious when men of another race come among them and the most sacred things and secrets of their tribes they guard most jealously from the stranger. And so the white men coming among them failed sometimes to see or learn about their sacred rites and secret ceremonies—not because they are so rare or uncommon, but because they are so sacredly guarded.

So it is sometimes said that all men in great emergencies will sometimes pray. It has been remarked that there were no infidels or atheists at the battle-front during the late war. Many of the soldiers professed to be, but at the crucial hour, which tries men's souls, the superficial and artificial creation of modern thought were swept away and burned out in the fire.

I am the more inclined to believe that these statements are true because of some incidents with which I have come in rather close contact. April 1, 1911, my wife and I were homeward bound from India and the Bible Lands. We were at Beirut, Palestine, and we decided to take the overland journey from Constantinople across Turkey, Bulgaria, Serbia, Austria, Germany, and Belgium to Southampton, England. Accordingly, from Beirut we took a steamer for Constantinople.

On the same date another steamer also left the same port, but sailed southward, by way of the Mediterranean, to Marseilles, France. After a day or two in London, we left again from Southampton for New York, on board the good ship Oceanic, which was about the first ship to be sunk during the late war. On this voyage we became acquainted with a young man from Beirut, Syria, who had left there the same day we did, but who traveled by the Mediterranean route. He related to us how on that voyage, for three days and three nights, their ship was caught in a terrific storm. Without ceasing, for that period, the waves were beating over the top of the boat, which was crowded to the limit with passengers, both in the state-rooms and on all the deck. So severe was the storm that even the sailors despaired of ever reaching shore again.

Now, perhaps, there is no more cosmopolitan or picturesque scene in all the world, in so small a compass, as on the deck of a Mediterranean steamer. All races, all religions, and all languages—more perhaps than anywhere else—are represented. There are Mohammedan, Jewish, and Catholic pilgrims. There are men from Siberia, Turkestan, Russia, all parts of Asia Minor, Syria, Persia, and Egypt, with many representatives of our Western civilization also—from Central and Western Europe, as well as from the North, and many also from America and the Western world.

Now, during this storm—our friend said—when every one had given up all hope of reaching land, there was not one who did not appeal to the Almighty to save him. Mohammedans, Atheists, Christians, and Saints were all mixed together in one great prayer meeting. The men who had learned to curse, but not to pray, would curse in one breath and pray in the next, but every one was crying to his God.

And so one is prepared to believe the story that is commonly reported about the infidel, Tom Paine—famous in Revolutionary days for atheistic lectures and writings throughout the United States, as Robert Ingersoll was later. Of him it is told how, in crossing the Atlantic, in the midst of a great storm which threatened the life of all aboard, even Tom Paine was brought to his knees in prayer to God.

During a series of evangelistic services I was once invited into the home of a notorious infidel of the community. He had read all the popular books on atheism, and infidelity of every kind, and had thoroughly posted himself. There was nothing he delighted in more than to invite every new preacher who came to the community into his home, and then argue with him all day and all night, if possible. Of course, I prayed earnestly—knowing the character of the man—for guidance and blessing from the Lord. It was late at night, after the meeting, when we arrived at his house, so we retired immediately. The next morning, as soon as breakfast was over, he picked up a chair, and said: "Now you bring that chair and let's go out in the yard and talk." And so we did—all the forenoon. Stopping only long enough for our noon meal, we continued our discussion the greater part of the afternoon. But all through the day I was insisting on one point: "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching." I insisted that if he was thoroughly sincere and willing to pay the price, to do the right and the truth at any cost, to lay aside every sin and evil of which he was conscious, and to pray God for more light, and pledge himself to follow the light, as fast as it would come to him, he, too, would find the light which he then disclaimed.

Finally the man admitted to me: "Now I am going to tell you something that I have not told other people. I often lie on my bed at night and pray to the Creator that if I am mistaken he will show me the true way."

The fact is that, down in the accumulated rubbish of years, from thought and experience of life, deeper than all our superficial philosophies, lies the religious instinct of the human heart, woven into the very warp and fiber of our souls, and there is no ultimate escape from it. God has made us for himself, and our hearts are not satisfied with anything else than the divine.

In times of great emergencies, when all superficial structures of thought, and education, experience and sin, are swept away, then the native soul of man cries unto its Maker.

But how sad it is that this native instinct and religious soul of man becomes so sorely perverted, and men are left to follow merely the light of their own conscience and reason! "Canst thou by searching find out God?" "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit, neither can he know them." They are revealed by his Spirit to us. The state in which the natural man falls, guided by his instincts and experiences alone, is described in the first chapter of Romans. To rescue us from this state, there must be a revelation from God. It is only under the corrective guidance, help and culture that revelation gives, that the instinct becomes truly developed, and divinely guided and illuminated. What a challenge it is for us to take the Gospel to the ends of the earth!

To Be Like Other People

BY S. Z. SHARP

ONE of the strong, natural propensities of human nature is "to be like other people." We find this trait of human character in every age, in every nation and among all classes of people. Sometimes it acts as a great power to lead people into evil ways and often it forms a great obstacle in preventing people from accepting Christ.

A good example of wanting "to be like other people" is found in 1 Sam. 8: 15, where it is stated that the people of Israel said to the prophet Samuel: "Make us a king to judge us like all the other nations." They had no just cause for wanting a change of government. For about four hundred years the Lord had been their Supreme Ruler, represented by judges. He led them out of the land of bondage, gave them "a land flowing with milk and honey," and furnished them with elaborate laws, both civil and religious. He supplied them with everything to make them a happy and contented people. They enjoyed blessings which only a benign sovereign could bestow, yet with all these great advantages the Israelites were not satisfied unless they could be governed like the nations around them. They preferred to follow the customs and worship the idols of the surrounding nations, which could profit them nothing, rather than to serve the true God who could bless them so greatly. Five times they had forsaken Jehovah and served other gods, and suffered by the act each time, yet the propensity to be like other nations overbalanced all other influences.

It is this desire, to be like other people, that causes so many nations to be formed from old ones, and so great an unrest to take place generally. Taking advantage of the great world war, and "the principle of self-determination," Russia has been torn into six divisions, and Austria into five, while the whole map of Europe is being changed by cutting sections from one country and adding them to another. Ireland wants no longer to be attached to England, but be an independent republic. Korea is making a desperate effort to gain her independence. Even in the United States, where people have enjoyed the best of Government and a wonderful uplift, and have no reason to complain of their condition, some want to become more independent, simply because they want to be like other nations. Such are the people of the Philippines, who have developed more during the last twenty years, under the benign Government of the United States, than during the previous four hundred years under Spanish rule. What is said of the people in the Philippines is largely true of the people in Porto Rico.

The spirit of unrest, which disturbs nearly every nation in the world, is due to the desire of people to be on an equality with those above them. It is owing to this desire of a certain class, to be like those above them, that the United States is now struggling with the greatest economic revolution in all its history. The various unions, connected with our railroad system, numbering nearly two millions of workmen, have combined to tie up the traffic of the whole country unless the Government will comply with their demands. It is this desire for equality that causes so many strikes and walk-outs in every department of industry. The workmen see that the capitalists live in luxury, while they are cramped by reason of the high cost of living, hence they demand higher wages, shorter hours of work and better conditions of living, or they will strike. Although wages have been increased from one hundred to five hundred per cent, in the various industries, yet the workmen still demand more, and the Government and the public are perplexed how to deal with the situation.

Nearly every class of industry is disturbed by the same spirit of unrest. There is hardly any kind of labor that is not organized to obtain power to compel compliance with the demands of the workmen. Mechanics, clerks and employés, in manufacturing establishments, want to live in fine houses, eat expensive food, and ride in automobiles, like the capitalists who own the industrial plants. There is hardly any question but that the desire to be like other people is one of the most universal sentiments of this age.

This feeling has been an obstacle to civilization in some countries. Until recently, the people in Palestine lived, farmed and manufactured as they did in the days of Abraham, just because they wanted to be like their ancestors. The same thing is true in China, where nearly one-third of the human race conformed to the customs and habits of their ancestors for hundreds of years. Men wore their queues and women bound their feet that they might be like other people.

This desire to be like other people is a barrier to the advancement of Christianity. In India it holds the people to their castes with tenacity. Though they admit the superiority of the Christian religion, yet they find it hard to give up the habits and customs of their relatives and friends and the people by whom they are surrounded.

The desire to be like other people is a fruitful source of evil habits and improper fashions in our own country. It is this desire which has led millions to form the drink habit. This has caused an enormous number of crimes, and more deaths annually than were recorded in the American army in France during the late war.

The habit of using tobacco is formed by the same desire as the drink habit. It is not that persons enjoy the taste of tobacco at first, that induces them to use it, but because they see others use it, and they wish to be like them. The drink and the tobacco habits are mostly confined to the sterner sex, but women are not free from the same evil propensity which leads men astray. They are the victims of undesirable habits.

In some parts of Africa women wear rings in their noses. In India rings are worn by the women around their ankles. In America rings are worn by people on their fingers and wrists—all impelled by the same force. Just now it is the fashion in America for women to go out with bare heads, exposed necks and short dresses. Those who follow these fashions hardly know that they are imitating the style originated by the undesirable women in Paris to attract attention to themselves. So common is this great evil that even some of our sisters are caught in its meshes. They are probably not aware that they are imitating the worst class of women in Paris, where the fashions originate. Besides, the exposure of the bare head and neck is a fruitful source of taking bad colds, starting tuberculosis, and sending those thus exposing themselves, to an early grave.

This evil of trying to be like other people has the direct condemnation of Jehovah, as he expressed it to the Israelites. It is in direct opposition to the Word of God which says, "Be temperate in all things," and to Rom. 12: 2, "Be not fashioned after this world," and the language of Jesus, "If any one will come after me let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow me."

The Healing of the Lord

BY JOHN E. MOHLER

When I think of the Scriptural doctrine of the healing of disease, through the laying on of hands and prayer, in the Church of the Brethren, my mind drifts to the origin of Sunday-schools in our beloved church, and the decadence of the institution with us, while others took it up and again led us into what we had first begun. And I write this article as a spoke in the wheel that must move us forward, if we would not have other churches lead us into the power of a doctrine which we have held from the beginning of our organization. This doctrine is the church ordinance of anointing with oil, with prayer, for the healing of the sick.

The present-day movement is for individuals, who possess the "gift of healing," to use this gift as individuals, or as representatives of one of the newer church denominations, which hold to the doctrine of divine healing in answer to prayer. The power to heal through prayer and the laying on of hands, is regarded by them as a gift of the Spirit, referred to in 1 Cor. 12: 10, which they feel impelled to use whenever and wherever the occasion presents itself, under authority of the declaration of the Savior in Mark 16: 18.

Far be it from me to say that they who use the gift of healing in an orderly and becoming manner, giving God the glory, are out of the order of the Lord in these days, for the need is such that, if the Spirit can not work in one channel, in blessing with health, he will turn to another. No doubt the rule of the church of Christ, in the days of St. James, was that the healing of the Lord should come through the eldership, according to James 5: 14. The power was great then. It was proper that the power should be vested in the church eldership, which office naturally represented the highest development of Christian character, together with the authority and wisdom necessary to direct the power in harmony, and above censure, to the end that the work of God in this ministry should be blameless.

When, in the course of time, the elders of the church failed to maintain that perfection of spirituality or wisdom whereby the Spirit of God could use them to heal all who came, as recorded in Acts 5: 16, and the Spirit used other vessels, not of the eldership, to bring the healing of the Lord, what man may criticise the wisdom and love of God in so doing? And if, in these days, we see a steadily-increasing number manifest the gift of healing, who have not the spiritual character to glorify God upon all occasions and in all ways, does it not show the great love of Christ in the readiness of the Spirit to use vessels of much weakness and imperfection, to bring relief and healing to the suffering ones of earth?

Now we, who hold the church ordinance of anointing the sick with oil, in the name of the Lord, for their healing, as a sacred rite given to the eldership of the church, should not be satisfied simply to remain "sound in the faith," but we should, rather, weep that the eldership of the church of Jesus Christ ever failed in the perfect power of healing the sick, which she had in the days of the apostles. And instead of condemning individuals who, here and there, rise up to minister in their gift of healing, we should rejoice that they are being used to relieve pain and distress, though it be in ever so imperfect a manner.

More than this, if we but realize the importance and the greatness of power to heal, which is vested in the eldership of the church, we will not leave a stone unturned, in the future, to regain the power of the primitive church of Christ. For the power followed laws of the Spirit which are as perfect and effectual now as then. It can not be otherwise. Our God is the same, "yesterday, today, and forever." It is but a question of our meeting the conditions of the Spirit, and God will surely work now as then.

When the eldership regains the lost power to heal, which is surely the heritage of the church of Christ, this church will then lead all others into the true healing of the Lord, even as she has led in holding to the doctrine of healing from the beginning of our organization. But the healing should not be flaunted before the people in a way that may subject the work to just criticism. This would defeat the Spirit's aim.

I have faith that the Holy Spirit will yet lead us into a work of healing, perfect before God and man, and blameless in the eyes of all, as when the early church had "favor with all the people" (Acts 2: 47). I have faith in the church to yet awake and become a true leader of humanity, in the power of healing. I have faith in an eldership which shall again receive this trust, in power, such as should have continued from the days of the apostles.

I am not speaking wildly, nor at random, but with clear knowledge of the laws of the Spirit for this perfect work, and that the time is here for the power to act. Nor do I mean that the Spirit of God will withdraw the gifts of healing from the laity and place it solely into the hands of the eldership. Instead, rather, when the church awakens to her rightful heritage to heal the sick, we shall doubtless see gifts of healing manifested through many in our midst, of men and women, officials and laity, as we now see in increasing numbers in other churches that honor this gift. And a wise and tender eldership shall lovingly draw these forces together, directing the individuals as one united, harmonious whole, all things fitly and in order, until no ailment of the body can resist the power brought to bear.

When I thus speak, I do not mean that modern surgical and medicinal healing shall be ignored, as some advocates of divine healing think. But I perceive a law of the Spirit which will compel the church to give full honor to the sciences of healing, if she would have the perfect power of the Lord to heal also. She must work with them, giving them preference in their respective spheres, until both physicians and patients desire the church ordinance for the healing.

Only thus, and in modesty and humility of spirit, can the greatest power of the healing of the Lord go forth without criticism or in harmony. I feel deeply that this power is surely for us, and that we should pray for its perfect working.

Recognition After Death

BY T. A. ROBINSON

Perhaps there is no question of more general interest than the one mentioned above. For all that, I have no remembrance of ever hearing it preached on, nor have I read articles on that topic. Many times I have wondered why such should be the case, as assurance of it from God's Word might induce many to walk closer with God, in order to have a happy reunion with loved ones after death.

I question whether any one who has lost dear friends, does not wonder if he will ever meet them again.

Persons have asked me whether we will recognize each other after this life. A mother once said, while grief-stricken over losing her babe: "Will I ever see it any more? If I knew I would not, I don't believe I could live." My own grief has caused me to search for proof for my hope, to meet again and know, those who seemed dearer to me than my own life.

There is nothing more trying than to give up loved ones. Even our farewells for brief absences are sad. For aught we know, it may be the last farewell, though we aim to part for a short while only. A year ago, Dec. 7 last, when we bade farewell to those we loved in Idaho, we thought: "Will we meet again on earth?" Our question was answered some days later when a message came, stating that a dear one had passed away. Such things occur frequently. Hence this article. We wish to consider the subject from a reasonable, Scriptural view-point:

When Jesus came to comfort Martha, in the loss of her only brother, he said: "Thy brother shall rise again." Yes, Martha expected him to rise at the resurrection, but what comfort would she gain from that knowledge unless she would recognize him? Is it reasonable for us to live, love, and walk together here for a life-time, if, upon parting, we shall never know each other again? No, the similarity of earthly and heavenly things is so great that we can not afford to lose sight of it.

In some respects, at least, eternal life begins here on earth. As in the case of our first parents, might we not walk with loved ones and with God in this life, and continue in such close association in the glory world? Is not the earthly Eden a type of the heavenly paradise—heaven—and was not the former life of Adam and Eve before the fall a type of our future spiritual life with God?

When the two angels came to Abraham they knew him and his wife by name, and they, in turn, recognized the angels (Gen. 18). Why should we not know those whom we love when we pass beyond the portals? Why should we know less in the world beyond than we do now—less than angels do? Nay, we shall have a more perfect knowledge, and will rank higher than angels, for Paul, in 1 Cor. 6: 2, 3, teaches us that saints shall judge the world. He assures us that we shall judge angels. In 1 Cor. 13: 9 and 12 Paul tells us: "Now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known."

Yes, when we reach that glorified state we will have perfect knowledge of all things, and we will know each other by divine revelation. To my mind the narrative that Jesus gives (Luke 16) means much to us, as information on this subject, for it substantiates our hope of future recognition. It also teaches us that we will still retain a knowledge and remembrance of things here in this life. It teaches relationship and communication, a realization of different abodes, a knowledge of separation, and the difference between peace and torment. Let us see:

1. We find the rich man and Lazarus in close prox-unity in this life. They had a good knowledge of each other. Lazarus was poor and needy, but he did not ask for the bounty of the rich man—only crumbs. His pitiful cries, however, did not touch the heart of the rich man, so poor Lazarus had to die for lack of help. The dogs endeavored to show their sympathy, but could not bring him food. Finally the angels came and took him away to Abraham's bosom. When the rich man died he found his abode in Hades. Knowing where father Abraham and Lazarus were located, he cried out, and Abraham answered. The rich man pleaded for help, but now the conditions had changed. The rich man felt that a very small administration from Lazarus (only a little water placed on his tongue) would give relief, but it could not be done. Abraham reminded him of several things, all of which show a complete recognition of the various participants in the discussion. The incident clearly teaches that there will be full recognition, both of the righteous and unrighteous, in the great beyond.

2. If there is no future recognition, how did Peter, James and John know Moses and Elias during the transfiguration of Christ? Moses died 1,419 years before this occasion and Elias was translated 864 years before this time.

In Luke 16: 9 Christ tells us: "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail [die] they [those we have been the means of saving] may receive [welcome] you into everlasting habitations." The question may arise: "How will they know that I am the means of their salvation, or how will I know that they are the ones I was the means of saving?" I answer: "It will be divinely revealed."

How did Job know 1,520 years before Christ came into the world that his Redeemer lived, that he would, in the latter day, stand upon the earth, and that his eyes would behold him for himself and not another? How could Job know his Redeemer from any other glorified saint or angel that will come with him? Only by revelation (Job 19: 25-28).

Jesus says (Matt. 8: 11): "Many shall come from the east and the west, and sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, in the Kingdom of heaven." But how will we know them from Brethren Quinter, R. H. Miller, J. R. Gish, Daniel Vaniman, J. H. Moore, D. L. Miller, or hundreds of others whom I might name? It must be by revelation.

Again, in 2 Sam. 12: 23 we read that David mourned, fasted and wept while his child lay sick, but after it died he arose and changed his raiment, anointed himself and went to the temple and worshiped. When questioned why he did so, his answer was: "I shall go to him, but he shall not return unto me." He could get no comfort from that knowledge unless he would recognize his dear child. What joy or comfort would it be for me to go to Idaho, to see my dear aged mother, and others whom I love, if I could not know them from those that are strange to me?

How did John, the revelator, recognize the souls under the altar in heaven, who had been beheaded and slain for a testimony of God and his Word (Rev. 6: 9 and 20: 4), if there had been no recognition?

Comparing Matt. 18: 10, Heb. 1: 14 and Psa. 34: 7 with many other scriptures I must conclude that my angels and your angels are God's ministering spirits that watch over us and encamp round about us to deliver us. They know us, and when our time comes to leave earthly scenes they will be present to bear our souls to glory, as the angels bore Lazarus to Abraham's bosom. I am sure we will recognize each other there.

How blessed that we can welcome death with such a hope of a sweet reunion with loved ones and all the blood-washed throng of God! Brother, sister, does not such a hope demand the most faithful service of this life to God?

Meeting of the General Sunday School Board

BY J. E. MILLER
Secretary of the General Sunday School Board

THE General Sunday School Board met in joint session with the other General Boards of the church, at Elgin, Ill., Sept. 4, at which time such problems as were of mutual interest to the several Boards were thoroughly discussed. The Forward Movement has emphasized the necessity of an occasional joint meeting and of a closer coöperation between the several Boards so that the work may be systematically and thoroughly done. The newly-created Christian Workers' Board also had a representative at this meeting. By special arrangement the Boards have set their time for the next spring meeting, so that they can be together in joint session, April 15. By slight shifts it was possible to agree upon this date mutually.

At the meeting of the Sunday School Board proper the first item of business had to do with the Christian Workers' Board. The Vice-president of this Board, Mrs. S. L. Whisler, was present and after proper arrangements were made, as to printed matter, plates and finances, the following resolution was passed: "Resolved that we extend a hearty welcome to the General Christian Workers' Board and assure them of our readiness to coöperate at all times in this important work."

With reference to Graded Lessons, the Board decided to use the second year of the Standard Junior Course, beginning with January, 1920. It was also decided to arrange for a Junior Course of four years, to be prepared by our own people, the first year's work to be ready for use in 1921.

A third year of the Teacher Training Course was revised and simplified. For the present the Junior and Adolescence Units will be offered, and those interested in this work should write the Board for the new circular which will give them complete information.

Since the International Sunday School Association has ceased issuing certificates of recognition for organized classes in schools under denominational control, the Board is having certificates printed for both the Intermediate and Adult divisions, which may be secured for 25 cents.

A special committee on field workers reported a number of experienced men and women who are available for Sunday-school work. These will be put into fields where most needed, so as to bring our schools to the front and help them more nearly to do their part in the Forward Movement.

The Daily Vacation Bible School was given serious consideration and a committee was appointed to get out literature for this work, so as to push it in the future. During the present summer a number of these schools have been held, and as a rule the reports are favorable for continuing them in succeeding years.

The Board is exceedingly anxious to have our schools and colleges, as well as local congregations and Districts, give short terms of several weeks for special training in teacher training, missions and religious education.

The Sunday School Standard for 1920-23 was revised so as to read as follows:

1. A live Cradle Roll and Home Department.
2. Teachers' or Workers' Meeting at least monthly.
3. Teacher Training.
4. The Bible used during recitations by the teachers and at least 50% of pupils above Primary Grades.
5. An average attendance not less than 70% of the enrollment of main school.
6. (a) Systematic giving for missionary and benevolent purposes. (b) Systematic missionary and temperance instruction.
7. (a) Contributing liberally to the General Sunday School Board. (b) At least one organized class registered with the General Sunday School Board.
8. School represented by delegate at District Convention, Sunday-school Institute, Special Bible Term, or Training School.
9. Definite decision for Christ and church attendance urged by superintendent and teachers.
10. (a) General use of Brethren Sunday-school literature and church periodicals. (b) An earnest effort to bring the unreached into the main school regularly.

In view of the large amount subscribed by our schools and churches for Armenian and Syrian Relief during the spring campaign, on recommendation of the Secretary, who made a special investigation of conditions in the Near East, it was decided to allow the executive committee to determine the object for which our schools should make their Christmas offerings this year. This announcement will be made later, after a very thorough investigation.

The book, "Studies in Doctrine and Devotion," has been meeting with a ready sale. Our people are enjoying it and are being helped by it. Calls have come in for this book to be published in three separate parts, and the Board has decided to issue the parts separately in the near future so that those who wish to make a special study of one part and desire a small book, that is easily carried, will have their wishes satisfied. Announcement of this will be made later, when the books are ready.

Some who have been taking the supplementary reading work find that the expense is a little more than they desire, as they will be required to buy so many books, and in some cases the schools are not furnishing these books for their teachers, as they should. In order to help those who are interested it was decided to keep copies of this supplementary reading course in the office at Elgin, and those desiring to read any particular book may have the same forwarded to their address on payment of postage both ways. As the books are small the postage will not be a large item, and it is the hope of the Board that in this way our teaching force may improve its knowledge and methods, so as to make its work more acceptable.

The Board is arranging, in connection with the other general Boards, to work out a system of slides that deal with the Sunday-school and its work, so that our field workers, District Secretaries and local schools may be able to give to their constituents lantern slides that will help them in their general Sunday-school work.

The larger work upon which the Board is entering will call for the expenditure of larger sums than in past years. For this reason it will be necessary to call upon the schools for larger and more frequent contributions. At the same time it is the aim of the Board to render such help that no school will need to feel that it is paying for anything for which it does not receive manifold more than it has contributed.

At this meeting the new member of the Board, Brother J. W. Cline, from Los Angeles, was present. Brother Cline has for nine years been the District Sunday-school Secretary for Southern California. He is wide-awake on Sunday-school problems and comes to the Board with a stock of information and a zeal for Sunday-schools, that will prove helpful. Brother S. S. Blough, who retired from the Board in June, was present at this session and gave a very good report of his work in Southern Indiana, where he was laboring in behalf of the Sunday School Board by special arrangement.

General Educational Board Meeting

BY D. C. REBER
Secretary-Treasurer of General Educational Board

ALL the members of the General Educational Board were present at the meeting at Elgin, Ill., Sept. 3. The organization resulted in the election of the following officers for 1919-20: President, D. W. Kurtz; Vice-President, D. M. Garver; Secretary-Treasurer, D. C. Reber. As the Secretary does not reside at Elgin, Bro. H. Spenser Minnich, of Elgin, was elected Assistant-Secretary.

The books of the second year of the Home Study Course for ministers were selected. A descriptive circular of the Two-Year Course, thus prepared, will soon be published. The Board is now ready to enroll those who wish to take up the first year's work. Apply for a registration blank. Examinations may be taken as soon as any book has been completed.

The treasurer's report shows a balance of $1,454.45 on hand. Owing to the liberal Conference offering at Winona, the Board is in a position to print educational tracts, and pay for them. Dr. J. S. Flory's historical address at the Winona Conference, and Dr. D. W. Kurtz's address, entitled, "Need of Christian Education," will be printed in pamphlet form for free dis-ditions in the Near East, it was decided to allow the ecutive committee to determine the object for which schools should make their Christmas offerings this ar. This announcement will be made later, after a ry thorough investigation.

An- uncement of this will be made later, when the books e ready.

Some who have been taking the supplementary read- g work find that the expense is a little more than they sire, as they will be required to buy so many books, d in some cases the schools are not furnishing these oks for their teachers, as they should. In order to lp those who are interested it was decided to keep pies of this supplementary reading course in the fice at Elgin, and those desiring to read any particu- r book may have the same forwarded to their address payment of postage both ways. As the books are all the postage will not be a large item, and it is the pe of the Board that in this way our teaching force ay improve its knowledge and methods, so as to make s work more acceptable.

The Board is arranging, in connection with the other eneral Boards, to work out a system of slides that eal with the Sunday-school and its work, so that our eld workers, District Secretaries and local schools ay be able to give to their constituents lantern slides at will help them in their general Sunday-school ork.

The larger work upon which the Board is entering ill call for the expenditure of larger sums than in ast years. For this reason it will be necessary to call pon the schools for larger and more frequent contri- utions. At the same time it is the aim of the Board o render such help that no school will need to feel that is paying for anything for which it does not receive manifold more than it has contributed.

At this meeting the new member of the Board, Brother J. W. Cline, from Los Angeles, was present. Brother Cline has for nine years been the District Sun- ay-school Secretary for Southern California. He is vide-awake on Sunday-school problems and comes to he Board with a stock of information and a zeal for Sunday-schools, that will prove helpful. Brother S. S. Blough, who retired from the Board in June, was resent at this session and gave a very good report of his work in Southern Indiana, where he was laboring n behalf of the Sunday School Board by special rrangement.

General Educational Board Meeting

BY D. C. REBER

Secretary-Treasurer of General Educational Board

ALL the members of the General Educational Board were present at the meeting at Elgin, Ill., Sept. 3. The organization resulted in the election of the following officers for 1919-20: President, D. W. Kurtz; Vice-President, D. M. Garver; Secretary-Treasurer, D. C. Reber. As the Secretary does not reside at Elgin, Bro. H. Spenser Minnich, of Elgin, was elected Assistant-Secretary.

The books of the second year of the Home Study Course for ministers were selected. A descriptive circular of the Two-Year Course, thus prepared, will soon be published. The Board is now ready to enroll those who wish to take up the first year's work. Apply tribution. Booklets on the "Forward Movement in Education" also may be had.

The question of standardizing our colleges was fully considered. The Board aims to procure the standards of the various "Associations of Colleges and Universities" in whose territory the colleges of the Church of the Brethren are located, and furnish the Boards of Trustees and Faculties of the same with this information, so that they may try to meet these requirements for an "approved college," within their bounds, within the next two years. Four or five of our colleges have already attained State standardization. This means that the graduates of these approved colleges receive recognition by the State Board of Education, in the matter of granting licenses to teach, without examination, when they have completed certain required courses of study. But in certain sections of our country it is very desirable, and in fact necessary, to receive wider recognition, by the college being admitted into the Association of Colleges within whose territorial area it is located, for the reason that standard high schools within these areas of "College Associations" require, as teachers of these high schools, graduates of standard colleges and no others. Hence to teach in a standard high school, our children must receive their training and diploma from a standard college, and if they can not attend such a college in our church, they must attend the State institutions.

As to the matter of standardizing credits, the Board calls the attention of our colleges to the necessity of adopting the recognized units, required for academic work and for college work, so that when students, having done work in one of our schools, wish to transfer their credits to another school, they will receive full credit. Work done in the academy under academic teachers can not be accepted for credit on the regular college course. Schools not complying with this standard credit system, will be discredited by the standard schools and the student suffers loss and disappointment. Hence, for the sake of uniformity and fairness, the Board kindly urges our colleges to conform to the standard of credits as outlined by the "Associations of Colleges and Universities."

This year the Board expects to visit all the schools recognized by Annual Conference. The Eastern Group of colleges, consisting of Juniata, Elizabethtown, Blue Ridge, Bridgewater and Daleville, is to be visited by Brethren Kurtz and Lear. Those of the Central Group, composed of Manchester, Bethany and Mt. Morris, have been assigned to Brethren Garver and Reber. The Western Group, which includes McPherson and La Verne, will be visited by Brethren Flory and Kurtz.

The General Mission Board has requested the General Educational Board to study and advise in the matter of Bro. John Stump's proposition to establish, jointly with the District of Texas and Louisiana, an Industrial School and Orphanage at Corpus Christi, Texas, for the education of Mexicans between the ages of six and twenty years. The Board has accepted this task and appointed two of its members to investigate and report.

Another question, which the General Mission Board has invited the General Educational Board to study is: "What Can Our Schools Do to Coöperate More Fully with the General Mission Board in the Preparation of Missionaries?" Any one having suggestions or illuminative information on this question, may present it to either Secretary of these Boards, by whom it will be considered and incorporated in a report to the General Mission Board at its next meeting.

Sept. 4, a joint meeting of the General Mission Board, the General Sunday School Board, and the General Educational Board was held at Elgin, for the purpose of considering a plan offered to it by their

The Secretary of the Publication Board and the Secretary of the General Educational Board have been designated as a committee to secure a successor to Bro. H. A. Brandt as Bookman of the Publishing House.

June 27, 1920, has been selected as the next General Educational Day, and April 14, 1920, as the date for the next meeting of the Board.

Growing in Christ

BY IDA M. HELM

"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1: 7).

SINCE we are cleansed from sin in Christ's blood, we are new creatures. Old things have passed away, all things have become new. Shall we go on, willfully sinning and repenting day after day? If we do, are we any better than the sinners who do not profess to love God? True, we have an Advocate with the Father, who is interceding in our behalf, and if we confess our sins he is faithful to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. But we must remember that God is not mocked. We must obey the Word from the heart if we would please our Maker.

Has God power to keep us from becoming defiled with sin after we have been washed in the blood of Christ? 1 John 3: 9 says: "Whosoever is begotten of God doeth no sin, because his seed abideth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is begotten of God." The germinal principle from which the new life has sprung excludes sin.

1 John 5: 4 reads: "For whosoever is begotten of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith." In the strength of the Lord we can have an overcoming faith. If we are faithful, and obey from the heart all the truth, it will manifest itself in the outward form and conduct. We know it is not right to give way to anger and hatred and malice and tale-bearing and slander, and to have an unforgiving spirit, for these things are not the fruit of the Spirit of Christ.

True, we are but mortals and the Bible warns: "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Perhaps every one of us can remember the sad day when, Peter-like, we fell through the weakness of the flesh and afterward repented in deep grief and bitter tears. It was under the pressure of deep provocation that we stumbled. Then we found no relief until we cast ourselves on the great Burden-bearer, and found forgiveness and sweet peace.

I believe we have all had more or less experience of this kind, for Satan is ever going about seeking to deceive and devour, if possible, the very elect. Even fearless, strong-hearted Paul says in Rom. 7: 20: "But if what I would not, that I do, it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me." It is the old man of sin; he has been bound but not cast out. He is seeking to rule us and the struggle to keep him down is sometimes hard. Read Paul's words in verse 24: "Wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me out of the body of this living death?" In our own strength we can not overcome the enemy, but Paul says: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

But are we not stronger than we were a year ago? Surely we will not always remain babes in Christ. Read the whole eighth chapter of Romans and see how Paul grew, and how strong he became. Hear his triumphant words: "We are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Let us live

THE ROUND TABLE

The Busiest Busy

BY M. M. ESHELMAN

In these days of stress, one rarely gets a letter or hears others talk, without hearing: "I'm so very busy," as an excuse or reason for something else. It covers a vast range of ground. It is a splendid word. Though sometimes it covers a business in which no one ought to be busy.

It is right and just that every one should be busily engaged in doing some good; but what about being busy in sin and making distress? Happiness comes from being busy in visiting the sick, the shut-ins, cripples and oppressed. Busy is the word-action here. Gathering boys and girls for Sunday-school, taking food to the poor, handing out flowers for good cheer, comforting the feeble-minded, kindly warming the unruly, and calming the boisterous—here is place and time for the word "busy."

Prosperity Is Ours

BY MARGARET DUDTE

Prosperity is sought by the majority of people in the universe. They really want to possess it, but some do not know how. They do not know that the divine possibilities are implanted in their own souls and minds. They look for prosperity to consist in the possession of so much silver and gold, or stocks and bonds. Through their minds many ideas might originate which would give them wealth untold. Their Father's substance is ever ready for them. It is their inheritance. They should claim it.

Prosperous persons are not really those who have abundance, but those who feel abundance. "As a man thinketh so is he." I know men who have farms, stock, liberty bonds, etc., and they are always talking poverty. Are they prosperous? No. They are poor. They have poverty in their minds. They are continuously worrying. Prosperity should give them ease and comfort instead of fear, and enable them to live in spiritual freedom. I have seen people rise out of poverty into prosperity. This was done by a change of the attitude of their minds. They claimed riches as theirs.

Not a week ago I heard a man testify to the fact that he had a change of mind from the negative state to the positive state; everything was going fine, and he had a better offer for his business than he ever expected to get. He had carried a pistol a few weeks before, but now he was glad to be in the world and claim his own, and make the world better for his having been here. He had caught hold of the vital word passed out to him, and that word was prosperity. His thought vibration had changed from poverty to prosperity. Yours can do the same. Try it!

Jesus the Hero

BY WM. J. TINKLE

Every normal, wide-awake person can point to some one whose life thrills him with a desire to follow. This person is his hero. When a little fellow sees a performer walk a rope, high over the heads of the crowd, he thinks he would give anything if he could do the same. When, a few years later, he reads of Daniel Boone and his fellow-pioneers, he thinks that is the ideal life for him.

Military leaders are often the heroes of their men. When Napoleon was banished to the Island of Elba, but later escaped from his guard and came back to France, his former soldiers received him with joy. Marshal Ney was sent to arrest him, promising to bring him back in a cage; but, instead, he fell into his former commander's arms and promised to fight for him as before. Likewise, when the Christian young man reads of the exploits of the missionary, David Livingstone, he feels that no hardship would be too great to keep him from following such a man.

If we look at the elements of heroism we shall see that Jesus is better fitted to be our Hero than any other man. A hero must be fearless. Jesus showed this quality when he said to those of the highest social standing: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Likewise he drove the grafters out of the temple when they had the sanction of the priests. If we are to follow this Brave Leader, we must not fear to make enemies, if it be a result of standing for the right.

If people find that a leader is working for self, when he is supposed to be in an unselfish cause, they will not follow him. But this was not true of Jesus. He had not so much as a place to lay his head, and went about doing good. We should accept this Unselfish Leader from an unselfish motive. Let us not regard Jesus as our servant, that he may minister to us, but as our Master, that we may serve and help him.

A heroic leader also perseveres. Jesus adhered to his purpose to the end, even though it led him to Gethsemane and Calvary.

But some one says: "Such an ideal is too difficult; I want an easier religion." Are the easy tasks the ones which we like best? When I was a little boy I had to drive the cows out on the road in the morning. Then I had to just sit on the fence and watch them eat until noon, and drive them back—an easy task! But did I like it? I would rather have done anything else! In the school room, if I should give the second grade some special work, intended for the first grade, they would say: "That is too easy; we want second grade work." Following Jesus is not an easy task, but a man-sized job—one that appeals to our highest powers.

Peter regarded Jesus as his Hero when he vowed: "If I should die with thee I will not deny thee in any wise." This was a noble stand, and he only failed because he followed afar off. Let us follow our Leader fearlessly, unselfishly and every step of the way!

A Bit of Real Faith

BY ROSE BROWER

There was a fire in a certain section of this city recently. A business block was burning. There was no adequate water supply—the main part of the town being a mile and a half away. A bakery, hotel, barber-shop and two stores were in flames. There was the usual excitement attending a fire—men rushing here and there, women with overstrained nerves, street-boys doing their bit in the general uproar—everything to heighten the tension, as the flames mounted higher and the walls began to give way with a crash.

Right in the path of the fire, almost amid the showering sparks, stood a tiny house. Other houses near were being emptied of their furniture. A group of men from a factory near, approached this house, asking the housewife if they should carry out her furniture.

She coolly answered: "No, I don't think my house will burn."

"But you are right in the path of the fire! The wind is bringing it right to you!"

"No," came the answer, emphatically. "There is no use. When I first saw the fire I prayed to God to save my home. So you see it will not burn and we won't need to carry anything out."

Meanwhile the wind was rising and the flames almost towered over the little house. The woman's husband became excited and added his arguments to those of the men. She finally said: "Well, if you must carry it out, go ahead, but it will have to be carried back, for my house will not be burned."

So a dozen pairs of muddy feet tramped over her shining floors, carrying out her piano and other things. But—shall we say it was strange or not?—the firemen finally got their hose connected up with a big saw-mill, nearly half a mile away, got water to the burning buildings and her house did not burn.

Perhaps it was a small incident. However, it made an impression on some who could not be reached by arguments from Christian professors, or even by forceful sermons from the pulpit. Here was a woman —of what denomination we know not—who had the living faith to trust God in the face of the almost certain destruction of her home. And behind the few quiet words she spoke and her calm bearing, we caught the glimpse of a strong and beautiful soul that could witness to that trust before a crowd of men, too many of whom were skeptical in regard to religion.

Surely, there is still faith in the midst of us, sometimes where we least expect to find it. And would that we all had a greater portion, that we might have the experience more often, of knowing that Jehovah's hand still is not shortened that it can not save!

Sacrifice

BY EDNA PHILLIPS

Some of the definitions of sacrifice, found in the dictionary, are: The act of sacrificing or giving to a deity, giving up one thing for another, to offer in worship, to destroy or surrender to gain some other object, or a victim offered on an altar. Not only in the dictionary is there a difference of meaning as to the word "sacrifice," but also in the hearts and minds of people is there a diversity of opinion as to the real significance of the word.

We often hear Christian people say: "We must learn to sacrifice," or "We must teach our children the joy of sacrifice," meaning, as Webster says, to give up one thing for another. They give a certain amount of money or time in order to gain a blessing. They give up one pleasure for another, because the pleasure they receive from the consciousness of having sacrificed for some good thing outweighs the pleasure of which they deny themselves. It means just as much to them as if they had traded a good horse for a better one.

There is another class of people who consider it their duty to abstain from pleasures, luxuries and sometimes necessities, for the sake of duty or to ease their consciences. They have heard the cry of perishing souls in heathen lands or seen the hand of famine stretched out to grasp in its clutch many women and children, and they have been made to feel that because of their great blessings, they are responsible, in some measure, for these conditions. Consequently they begin to estimate the value of their possessions and to figure up how much they must give in order to pay off their indebtedness, and after having given the amount decided upon, they go their way, rejoicing in the thought that their debt is paid and they are free to use the principal as they please.

There are other people who sacrifice to "offer in worship." They believe that a certain per cent of all they possess rightfully belongs to the Lord, and they hand over to the church the tenth or the twelfth, or whatever amount they feel is due the Lord—not because they receive any particular pleasure from doing so, or not because they consider it their duty, but because they are honest and give the Lord his own in the same manner that they would divide with a partner in business his portion of the increase. This class of people is living two thousand years behind their time. They belong in the old Jewish dispensation.

There is yet another class of people who consecrate everything, and life itself, to God's service. They do not feel, in the least degree, any element of what is called sacrifice. They recognize that body, intellect, talent, health and wealth are gifts from the Kind Father—not to be used selfishly, but to be contributed to those who are in need of such things.

A consecrated Christian girl, who spent the hot summer months at her post of service at a mission point in the crowded districts of one of our large cities, wrote to her girl friend: "Some people commend us for the sacrifice we are making for doing this work. I am sure that I do not feel it to be any sacrifice whatever, but a glorious blessing and privilege to do what I can to help these poor people." This girl has struck the key-note of real Christian service, not sacrifice.

Indeed, when one studies the idea of sacrifice from a New Testament standpoint, he is made to wonder if such a doctrine can really be found. Where does Christ admonish any one to sacrifice? True, he says: "He that would follow after me let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." And very iet words she spoke and her calm bearing, we caught or the sacrifice we are making for doing this work. I plainly and frequently in his teachings he made his disciples understand that the Christian life was not a life of ease or pleasure, but one of toil and often hardship. Many times he urged them to abandon the wealth and pleasures of the world, and to live very, very simply, but these teachings did not contain the idea of sacrifice as part of the Christian religion, but the underlying principle in them was that this life of toil and cross-bearing was the one of greatest usefulness and blessing, and that the accumulation of worldly things was burdensome, weighing man down to earth, hindering his soul's development, and preventing him from living his best.

Very few times, in the New Testament, do we find the word "sacrifice." Only once (Rom. 12: 1) is sacrifice on the part of men urged, and this sacrifice is not a sacrifice of external things but a living sacrifice of the body and all its faculties. Several times sacrifice is mentioned indirectly. At times we are told that sacrifice, as understood in the Old Testament, is of no avail to a Christian.

The most direct and definite teachings concerning sacrifice are given in the Book of Hebrews, and these teachings clearly show that Christ has already made the supreme sacrifice for us (Heb. 9: 26). And this sacrifice, which has been made already, is the only one necessary for us, and our part is to keep God's New Covenant (Heb. 10: 12-16). Any sacrifice on our part will have no redeeming quality (Heb. 4: 4-6).

Again, in Heb. 10: 26 it says: "If we sin wilfully there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin." To sin is to break God's covenant. This covenant implies that, having received forgiveness from sin by the sacrifice of Christ, we are to live a life of consecration and service to him. This involves no sacrifice on man's part, because he has been bought with a price (1 Cor. 6: 20); he and all his possessions belong to God already, so he has nothing to sacrifice. The only sacrifice he is capable of, is the sacrifice of praise and prayer to God (Heb. 13: 15, 16).

The idea—not of Christian sacrifice but of Christian giving—has been expressed by the poet Longfellow in the following lines:

"All I have is the Lord's, not mine to give or to withhold it,
I but distribute his gifts to the poor and to those of his people
Who in journeying often surrender their lives to his service.
His are the gifts, not mine, and only so far can I make them mine,
As in giving I add my heart to whatever is given."

The problem of establishing high ideals of Christianity in the hearts of mankind does not involve a question of greater sacrifice but of greater love. When people once get a vision of Christ's love and of the world's great need of that love it will become their highest aim and holiest joy to spend their lives revealing this great Gospel of love to humankind and the question of sacrifice will be forgotten.

Singing and the Bible

BY J. C. BEAHM

EVANGELISTS tell us that singing has much to do with the success of a revival meeting. It, indeed, seems woven into the religious history of the race that the song element of the human voice is a great factor in praising and pleasing God.

There is a sort of spiritual psychology in securing attention and softening the sensibilities by well-directed singing, and then drop into the heart the seed of truth. Still greater than this, it makes flexible the human will and attunes it to the will of God.

Now, since good singing is such a gentle yet potent special training for leadership, and an especially well-adapted instructor for a forward movement in good religious singing.

Then I should like to suggest to the Sunday-school and our other local organizations to send at least one exemplary young brother or sister to these Music Bible Terms annually, the purpose of it being to prepare leaders of song, and thus give each community a healthy growth and development of talent in our own church ranks.

This step, wisely taken, will at once add a great charm to Bible work and make its teaching more precious and more effective.

Let Down Your Bucket

BY PAUL MOHLER

ONCE a ship asailing was hailed by another with an urgent request for water. Inimediately it answered: "Let down your bucket where you are." The request was repeated, and so was the answer. Finally the perishing sailors did let down their buckets, drawing them up full of fresh river water. They were in the mouth of the Amazon River.

I have been in church after church that was looking for a minister. There may be a few churches yet that do not realize that we are approaching a famine of ministers, but I think the majority of us know that we are.

It is the rule, I think, when a church feels the need of a pastor, to send for a man from a distance. This may be because there are several local ministers and the church is afraid that if one is made pastor, the others will become jealous and make trouble. That is a real danger in some congregations, but it is a difficulty that ought to be overcome.

It may be because the local minister has never had a chance to do his best, because he has had to make his own living. It is unfair for a congregation to send outside for a pastor until it has given its resident minister a chance to show what he can do. Often, indeed, he is doing remarkably good work and is just the logical man for the place, needing only to be given a chance. Let down your bucket where you are.

Then, again, churches are calling for pastors from a distance because they have neglected calling young men to the ministry. This is a very great mistake. Let down your bucket in time! Call your young men to the work before the world has called them. Real men—the kind that come out of our good homes—are in demand in every calling. Don't let them get away from the church before they hear God's call to the ministry. Let down your bucket now!

The Power of Hope

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

THERE is an instrument in the form of a receiver which is so constructed that it collects all the rays of light and converts their power into one great power, strong enough to turn the wheels of mighty machinery. Some one, whose experience supports him in making the comparison, has likened this instrument to a great hope in the human soul. Such a hope will collect and concentrate all manner of circumstance and environment into the one great purpose of the life. Through the transmuting power of will, results are accomplished which seem impossible to the observer.

Every inventor, explorer, or pioneer in any great cause, has acted under the influence of a great hope which has burned in his soul, unknown to the world, which sees only the externals of any life. Such a hope animates the soul of Thomas Edison, who is never content to rest on any of the results he has accom-

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Chas. R. Oberlin changes his address from Hartford City to North Manchester, Ind.

Bro. J. Homer Bright and wife, according to latest reports, arrived safely at Tien Tsin, China, Sept. 1, after a very pleasant voyage.

Bro. C. G. Hesse, formerly pastor of the Bethany church, Philadelphia, Pa., has accepted the pastorate of the Norristown church, same State, and entered upon his new duties the first Sunday of this month.

Bro. John Bennett, of Artemas, Pa., has been in the Alleghany Hospital, Cumberland, Md., for three weeks. The latest report states that he is improving slowly. He requests the prayers of God's people in his behalf, that if it be the Lord's will he may be restored to health.

Bro. Wm. E. White, formerly of Fruitdale, Ala., is now located at 1 Owen's Lane, Mobile, same State. Through his efforts a Sunday-school has been started, and church services will also be held later on. Those who have friends in or near the city are invited to inform Bro. White, giving name and street address of all such.

Did you ever know anything about George Spangler and his wife Sophia, members of the Church of the Brethren, who lived many years ago near Wooster, Ohio? If so, Mrs. Perry Cover, 1111 Elden Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., would like to hear from you. For further particulars see the advertising columns of "Our Young People." issue for Sept. 27.

Bro. W. F. Spidle has resigned the pastorate of the Geiger Memorial church, Philadelphia, to take effect Oct. 1, with a view of giving his entire time to evangelistic work. His time for October is already engaged. He is open for calls from Nov. 1 onward. His address, until Oct. 15, is 2541 W. Lehigh Avenue, Philadelphia; after that date, Box 54, East Market Street Exchange, Akron, Ohio.

Bro. J. Harman Stover, of Fresno, Calif., writes us that the building of their new house of worship has been deferred for the present, on account of the high cost of material and labor. That this action is in no sense due to a decline of interest, is evident when we learn that the congregation at that place has increased during the year 1919, about thirty per cent. and the Sunday-school nearly ninety per cent. That new church will surely have to come somehow, before very long.

In answer to many inquiries, concerning the condition of Sister Lear and himself, Bro. J. W. Lear wishes to say that he himself has about recovered. He still feels some slight effects of the shock. Sister Lear has recovered from breaks and bruises, but because of a weak heart, resulting from the "flu" and the shock of the accident, she is still under the constant care of a physician. They ask all who are interested to remember her before the throne of grace. In acknowledgment of the many kind letters, received at the time of the accident, which it was impossible to answer, they wish to thank all for their interest and prayers, and commend them to the Father who will not forget them when he passes out the rewards. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me."

To all the bereaved friends and especially to Sister S. P. Berkebile, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, and her three little boys, the hearts of "Messenger" readers will go out in deepest sympathy. After a long fight with tuberculosis, following his seven years of service in the India mission field—a fight which included amputation of the left foot a few months ago—Bro. Berkebile came to the end of the struggle on last Saturday evening, Sept. 13. Bro. J. H. B. Williams, Secretary of the Mission Board, having already planned a trip eastward this week, in connection with Mission interests, thought he might possibly be able to attend the funeral services, Tuesday, the 16th. Sister Berkebile is particularly well known to our readers through her many valued contributions to our columns. We shall expect to have soon, for publication, a more extended notice of our departed brother's life of consecrated service to the cause of Christ.

The Vacation Bible Schools, which the Brethren in Virginia have been having this summer, are evidently a great success. On page 606 of this issue Bro. Jno. S. If you would like to teach district school in a community where our people are few and there is great need of help in Sunday-school and all-around Christian work, write for particulars to Mrs. Mary A. Cain, Homer, Nebr.

Notice.—All churches of the Southeastern District of Kansas, having queries for the District Meeting, should mail them to the writer at once. Notice to the Churches of Northeastern Kansas.—Having been appointed to fill the unexpired term of Bro. E. E. McCune, as Writing Clerk of the District, we urgently request that all queries and reports from churches be sent to the writer at once. This must be done, in order that the necessary printing may be completed, preparatory to the District Meeting, to be held in the Appanoose church, Oct. 19 to 21.

"The Hutchinson News" for Sept. 8 publishes a very interesting account of a three days' community assembly, recently held at the Salem church, near Nickerson, Kans., of which Bro. W. A. Kinzie is pastor. It is evident that this church has succeeded in making itself not only a center of religious activity as this term is commonly used, but also a center of every healthful community interest. To help make the farm life attractive and wholesome was one of the dominant ideas in the program. This was of a varied nature and enlisted the enthusiastic support of the people for miles around. The time was so arranged as to include a Sunday with its distinctly religious services. The assembly closed with an illustrated lecture by Bro. Virgil C. Finnell. No, the day of the country church is not past. It is just beginning.

In order to meet the demand for stereopticon slides, illustrative of the "Forward Movement," and of scenes in India and China, the General Mission Board has prepared several sets of views for the use of churches, in the furtherance of missionary meetings or "Forward Movement" rallies. The following sets have been prepared, and may be rented on terms as given below:

Set No. 1.—Forward Movement Views.—A set of more than forty pictures, showing statistics, the goals, the song, a few views from India and China and several other charts designed to help the Five Year Forward Movement.

Set No. 2.—Views from Our India Field.—A group of about fifty pictures, showing the work that is being done in the different stations at our India Field—the buildings in which they live; the pupils, native workers and the American missionaries.

Set. No. 3.—Views from Our China Field.—Every church should see this splendid set of views, just received from China. The members of any congregation will have a keener sense of responsibility for our neighbors in China after seeing these pictures.

With each set of views, a typewritten lecture is also sent, which may be read as received, or enlarged upon by the person in charge. Each church should own a stereopticon, but where this is not possible, you are invited to correspond with the General Mission Board regarding the use of one. The rental fee for the slides for each lecture is $2 and express charges both ways. The General Mission Board will be pleased to give further information upon request

Austria Signs the Treaty

In affixing its signature to the Peace Pact, the former Empire of Austria ceases to exist as a great nation, for very little is left of its old-time dimensions. Into the limbo of dead nations and bygone history drifts the proud empire of the Hapsburgs. Vienna, the wonderful city of past centuries, stands isolated now, in a little territory, not big enough to keep it going. The pruning-knife has been applied liberally, but as to what is to become of the several portions, not even the wielders of the knife can foretell. Europe has seen some reckless amputating done, of late. Whether there will be a speedy and healthful recovery, or aggravated cases of blood poisoning, etc., only the future can tell.

Will There Be a New Judea?

According to recent indications, the Zionist movement has entered upon a new era of its progress. Up to a few months ago there was serious doubt whether the Jews would give really cordial support to the rehabilitation of Palestine. Now all that has seemingly changed. In every land Jews are turning their eyes toward the historic seat of their race. Zionism has taken a renewed hold, and so marked is the enthusiasm that it is now believed a great number of young Hebrews will set their faces toward Zion as soon as the political status of Palestine is definitely fixed. Systematic arrangements for the industrial and agricultural development of the country are now being made on a large scale.

Reaching Those in Prison

Whether other denominations have thought it worth while or not, the Salvation Army has made it its special task to reach the 400,000 men and women, confined in the various penal institutions of the United States. Their work among them reminds us of the important fact that God's grace can transmute even the vilest of the scrapheap of humanity, if some one lovingly presents the Message of Salvation. The first systematic efforts for the uplift of prisoners date back to 1885, and the first Rescue Home was opened a year later. So successful have been their labors among the prisoners, that the courts in practically all States of the Union depend upon Salvation Army workers for the redemption of transgressors.

The Language Need in Africa

Much is being said about the vast, unoccupied regions of Africa, but according to a missionary in Congo-Belge, Miss Pauline A. Fraser, the greatest problem, confronting missionary workers, is the need of expert linguists. There is tribe after tribe, throughout Africa that has never had its vernacular reduced to writing. Until that great task is done, the people can not grow spiritually, even if they should hear the Gospel and believe in Jesus Christ. They must have the Bible in their own tongues. Years will be required to accomplish this, but that very fact is all the more reason to begin the work as soon as possible. Practically all previous attempts, to reduce the various vernaculars of heathen tribes to the requirements of a written language, have been sponsored by missionaries.

The Shining Faces

Does the serenity of a Christed heart work out through the countenance, that all may behold the peace that abides within? A Japanese mother must have thought so when she came to a mission school, bringing her two daughters, whom she wanted to enter as pupils. The principal, after asking the usual questions, finally asked: "Well, what do you expect us to do for your girls?" The woman answered: "I live in this city and have often watched the faces of your pupils. They seem to shine more than my children's do. I want you to put some of that same radiance on the faces of my girls." It was her way of saying that the teaching in the Christian mission school had a certain definite effect on the hearts of the pupils, and that this effulgence so worked its way to the surface that all could behold it.

Let Prohibition Be Made Effective

It is claimed by those who know, that habitual drinkers can still obtain whiskey by paying exorbitant prices. If such is the case, a leading provision in the prohibition law should be strengthened. It says that anybody "in-lowing the unfortunate victim of whiskey to denounce and punish—without danger to himself—the man that sells him the poison, you will stop the illegal making and selling of whiskey. It is also being urged that a reward of a hundred dollars, or more, be paid to any man that can furnish information leading to the conviction of the manufacturer and seller of whiskey.

The Need of Real Service

Just now, while the respective claims of labor and capital are being debated pro and con, there is need of rational thought and calm consideration, rather than ill-considered strikes—wasteful and costly to all concerned. Even the most rabid defender of strikes will hardly feel like justifying the deplorable conditions, brought about by the strike of Boston's policemen. A recent utterance by Herbert C. Hoover, the head of the Food Administration, is worthy of consideration by every citizen. He suggests that the patriotism and willingness to serve, that were characteristic of every citizen during the war, should be exemplified during these troublous days of reconstruction.

What Really Counts

A New England business man, who early in life had left his parental home with high ideals, returned to it twenty years later with wealth, renown and influence, only to find, as he sat in his mother's garden, and walked through the familiar rooms—whence her body had lately been taken to her final rest—that all his supposed gain could not atone for his real loss. True, he had gained wealth and power, but of what avail were they, when he had lost his ideals and the faith of his early manhood? Then and there he realized that he must return to the faith he had unfortunately lost sight of, for only thus could the high ideals of his early youth be realized. So, in the world of today, faith once more is becoming the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen.

Why Not Conciliate?

To promote more amiable relations between the United States and Japan, Baron Otori proposes a get-together movement on the following points: (1) "That the diplomatic, consular and other official representatives, Japanese and American, be selected from men willing to give hearty coöperation toward cementing cordial relations. (2) That scholarships, maintained by public funds, be established in the leading American and Japanese universities, devoted to the history and literature of both nations. (3) That Japanese university graduates, thoroughly familiar with English, be allowed to matriculate in American universities for post-graduate work without any qualifying examinations or limitations. (4) That trade and other commissions, composed of leading citizens, exchange visits for the purpose of obtaining first-hand information on public questions."

Why Are Our Soldiers in Siberia?

Recent illustrations in the public press represent American soldiers in Siberia on their hands and knees, drinking from a stream. Whether the water is fit to drink, we are not told, but the environments are not specially invitiug. Just why those men are thus exposing themselves to the dangers of insanitary conditions, does not seem to be generally understood, nor is it known just why they should shoot and wound Russians, with whom this nation has no real contention. Senator Borah's recent arraignment, along the line above referred to, is worthy of serious thought. Russia's debt to certain European nations and to certain Wall Street dealers in Russian bonds, now repudiated, is regarded by some as sufficient cause for armed intervention. But one is made to wonder how such an action can be defended, when Congress never declared war against Russia.

Modern Apostasies

Recent months have revealed some daring departures from old-time principles of Christianity—so much so that one can not but wonder what the end will be. The Unitarian Church of the Messiah, New York, recently dropped Christ and Christianity wholly out of its creed. Its pastor, Rev. John Hayes Holmes, announces that both Congregationalism and Unitarianism are left behind, and the church takes "rank with the school, the library and the community center as a public institution for a public service. We have rewritten our covenant, discarding all theology (including, necessarily, the mention of the name of

HOME AND FAMILY

What a Day with My Lord Revealed

BY FAY ALDENE GRAY

If I should know my Lord would come today,
How wisely I should choose each word to say;
Each act should breathe incense of loving prayer
My spirit's guest-room be made clean and fair.

Ah, be MAY come today, for aught I know;
Oh, would his coming bring me joy or woe?
Give me a vision, Lord, of all the past:
An eye all-searching on each action cast.

Judged by God's standard in his Holy Book
How odious man's best endeavors look!
And I, who blundered often in my task,
In deep contrition his compassion ask.

Each milestone on the stretching, backward way
Bears marks of many a futile, misspent day.
These poison vines, grown rank in earthly dross,
Show where I shunned in weakness Christ's sweet cross.

Here hangs a spray of sunshine under shade,
Where joy led on to bliss, but my feet stayed Self-centered; joy of others moved them not;
Unrighteous anger left this ugly blot.

An impulse, born of envy, words of scorn
Left in a weak heart long a rankling thorn;
Here is a glance of slander; there a shrug of hate;
A service beautiful seen all too late.

Here stands the greed that claimed the highest price
And gave the lowest. Oh, what sacrifice
Of pure integrity and highest gain!
Repentant tears are falling now, like rain.

"Mistakes of weakness"—once regarded so—
In loyal retrospective clearly show
Strong inclinations then unsanctified:
Does nothing good in these past cycles hide?

Ah, yes! I visited the sick sometimes,
And laid rich offerings on altar shrines;
Gave to the poor, wept with the sorrowing,
And with sweet music made the old church ring.

No day passed by without its stated prayer;
My spirit found its peace and comfort there.
The open Bible was my solace, friend:
I longed to have it guide me to the end.

In shaded lives I threw a smile's bright rift,
To travelers along my way uplift.
Ah, yes! I prayed and toiled and smiled and sang:
It all was only a rude cymbal's clang.

For all its good was others'; never mine;
Because my service lacked the soul divine
And ever clamored for its meed of praise:
For ages fools have walked delusive ways.

If Christ SHOULD come, oh, should I be afraid?
Could he forgive the many times I strayed?
And failed so oft in errands kind to bless?
And missed thereby the highest holiness?

Oh, he HAS COME TODAY and whispered low
Of all my quickened spirit ought to know:
The future vail he lifted, let me see
My life shorn of its frail security.

Work, so self-poised, illusive, can not stand!
It is a structure built on shifting sand.
Through light divine I view my walk with him,
So holy, strait, by doubtings, never dim.

Lo, I was blind! I thought my life would prove
The test of judgment by eternal love.
May future days be fit for his pure eyes
And henceforth free from all deceptive guise!

Oh, Master, Christ! These fragments in thy hands
May still be woven new by blood-spun strands
To robe me fitly for eternity!
"What time I am afraid, I'll trust in thee!"

Children's Rights

BY EZRA FLORY

HENRY SABIN says: "Children are living, sentient flesh and blood; they have bodies to be cared for and trained, minds to learn and expand, hearts to love or hate, souls to aspire. They read character as a book; they are quick to respond; they meet distrust with distrust; they greet confidence with confidence; they measure out hate for hate and love for love."

Of all the time in a child's life, the very earliest years are the most important, and the days spent in school are the most precious.

1. The child has a right to be loved. Unless a teacher really loves children, she should retire at once. You may fool the parents, but you can not deceive the children, and any attempt to do so meets with failure. For a little while the teacher takes the place of the parent—not so much in the way of shielding as in directing intelligently the efforts of the pupil. A good teacher will be tolerant of weakness, patient with the slow, hopeful for the wayward, lenient toward the mischievous; impartial and sympathetic with all. The teacher will need to represent the authority of the father and the love of the mother, in trying to bring out the best that is in the child. The unlovable child must be loved.

2. The child has a right to be disciplined. In 1 Kings 1: 6 we read that David "had not displeased him [Adonijah] at any time in saying, Why hast thou done so?" That is, David had permitted his youngest son to do as he pleased. Read the context and you will soon discover what the consequences were. The father had denied to the son the very discipline that had been a benefit to himself. There is too much shrinking from discipline in our modern education. Discipline does not always mean whipping, however. Unquestioned obedience to rational authority, intelligently given, is the mode of procedure with the child. As he matures, this method may be modified. If the child is not to grow up an anarchist to all social law and a breaker of the laws of God, he must have the proper training in the home and in the school. There are times when the child must be made to do things that he will object to, if we expect to have his respect in the future.

3. The child has a right not to be neglected or abused. This is one of the greatest crimes against society. Such expressions as "Every child is a born savage, for no other living creature's offspring is so passionate, noisy and troublesome as a human baby," are absurd. Think how the child has been neglected while crowded into factories because of human greed. Think of the necessity of enacting laws to prevent such crimes in a civilized land! That society pays dearly for such neglect is shown by the crowded court rooms in our land. In a single year 15,000 children have appeared in the juvenile courts of Chicago. Many times the children of the rich are more neglected than those of the poor. Think how few houses are built with a thought of a place for the children to play. What have we done and what are we doing in our church building for the children? The child has been neglected physically, socially, mentally, religiously.

4. The child has a right to a physical development and a moral education from the example of both parents and teachers. We have done much in this day of modern education, to secure this education from books, but that is insufficient. We must endeavor to look at the world from the child's point of view, and not from the point of our years of experience. We should try to know each child, that we may know where to place the emphasis, keeping in mind that the true aim in education is not knowledge but ability to live. Did you ever know of a grown-up who failed to keep an appointment properly? A child has as much right to leniency as an adult, but seldom receives the same treatment.

5. A child has a right to be proud of his parent or teacher. "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but nurture them in the chastening and admonition of the Lord." "Children, obey your parents" ought to be supplemented with "Parents, be worthy of the love of your children."

Not all children are born into the world like Samuel of old—dedicated to the Lord before his conception. We are assured by physicians that fully 98% of children come into their existence by accident. And what a trail of social and moral entailment follows! Yes, a child has a right to be well born. Not being so is a handicap for life and for eternity. Judgment day is now and here. Some children have inherited a physical constitution that is practically immune from tuberculosis, but what shall be said about those who are open to the possibilities of immunity from moral inoculation?

6. All children have a right to look forward to a successful career. I often think of Samuel, of Moses, of John the Baptist, of Jesus, who must have known very early what their career was to be. One pupil wrote in her class paper: "The sorrow of all sorrows, for me was to know that my father was a drunkard." Nothing of this kind should blight the prospects of a child in his development. They should be prepared, through real living, to live a useful life, to withstand temptation and to meet adversity bravely. We must cause our children to think, to feel and to will to do, by calling out the best that is in them and in us. We should encourage natural inclinations along right lines, honesty in play, appreciation of the best in music, and the beautiful in nature and art, good English, good manners, self-control. Let us remember we are teaching the child—not a particular subject.

7. The child has a right to consideration in his questions about the origin of life. Sex teaching belongs to the home and at the proper stage of development he should receive wise and sympathetic instruction from those nearest and dearest to him. He need not be told all the truth, but such truth as he seeks from time to time. Each boy and girl should have a father and mother who are chums.

8. The child has a right to a square deal. We must love the child with a large measure of his makeup—morally, mentally, physically. To this end we must bring the home, school and church more closely together, with the aim to enable him to make the best that is in him.

"Great Expectations"

BY BESS BATES

MRS. MANNERS, Mrs. King and Maude Long were sitting on the porch, discussing, as is the way with women, one of their sex. Said Mrs. Manners: "Julia certainly has changed. Every one can see it. She used to be about the bluest person that ever was. She was always worrying about something."

"She certainly was," agreed Maude. "If the children weren't sick, she was afraid they would get sick. If she didn't have trouble, she was afraid that she was going to have trouble."

"Yes," put in Mrs. King, "You would think she had been converted, if she hadn't always been a good church member. Something has happened to Julia. I wonder what it is."

Just then Julia came around the corner of the house smiling.

"I heard my name. What were you saying about me?"

"We were saying how changed you were," answered Mrs. King, who was not easily embarrassed. "What has happened to you, anyway?"

"I'll tell you," promised Julia. "I'm sure you need to know."

They all laughed, for they well knew that Mrs. King had her own blue spells.

"It was a picnic that made me discover it. You remember Edith Berg who used to stay with us? She dearly loved picnics. She would plan and work for a picnic days in advance, and then go and have a perfectly lovely time. I like picnics myself and I have worked harder, many a day, to get ready for a picnic than I would to stay at home. Then I would go to a picnic, and eat dinner on the grass with the aid of bugs and flies, and not enough dishes to go around. Water might have to be carried from a questionable spring and yet, a picnic always means a good time.

"'Why,' thought I, 'do we always have good times at picnics when it might be lots easier to stay at home?' To tell the truth, I have had the blues a good deal lately. I suppose you have noticed that. It seemed as if I would never get my work done, and there was always something just a little ways ahead that I was longing for, and it seemed so hard to get to it. I always wanted something besides what I had, and when I got that, I wanted something else. I was so thoroughly dissatisfied that I began to look about, to see what the matter was, and how things could be mended. That led me to study Edith Berg and her picnics.

"And this is the discovery I made: Whenever I planned a picnic, I prepared deliberately for a good ould encourage natural inclinations along right lines, onesty in play, appreciation of the best in music, and g the child*—not a particular subject.

7. The child has a right to consideration in his quesns about the origin of life. Sex teaching belongs to

8. The child has a right to a square deal. We must

"Great Expectations"

BY BESS BATES

Mrs. Manners, Mrs. King and Maude Long were tting on the porch, discussing, as is the way with omen, one of their sex. Said Mrs. Manners: "Julia ertainly has changed. Every one can see it. She sed to be about the bluest person that ever was. She as always worrying about something."

"She certainly was," agreed Maude. "If the chilen weren't sick, she was afraid they would get sick.
she didn't have trouble, she was afraid that she was oing to have trouble."

"Yes," put in Mrs. King, "You would think she ad been converted, if she hadn't always been a good hurch member. Something has happened to Julia. I onder what it is."

Just then Julia came around the corner of the house miling.

"I heard my name. What were you saying about e?"

"We were saying how changed you were," answered Irs. King, who was not easily embarrassed. "What as happened to you, anyway?"

"I'll tell you," promised Julia. "I'm sure you need o know."

They all laughed, for they well knew that Mrs. King ad her own blue spells.

"It was a picnic that made me discover it. You re-ember Edith Berg who used to stay with us? She early loved picnics. She would plan and work for a icnic days in advance, and then go and have a per-ectly lovely time. I like picnics myself and I have orked harder, many a day, to get ready for a picnic han I would to stay at home. Then I would go to a icnic, and eat dinner on the grass with the aid of bugs nd flies, and not enough dishes to go around. Water night have to be carried from a questionable spring nd yet, a picnic always means a good time.

"Why,' thought I, 'do we always have good times t picnics when it might be lots easier to stay at ome?' To tell the truth, I have had the blues a good eal lately. I suppose you have noticed that. It time, and determined to have a good time, in spite of anything that might happen to prevent—like ants in the cake, or bread-bugs in the sandwiches. A breadbug or an ant might upset a whole meal for me at home, but I could overlook dozens of them at a picnic.

And in spite of doing a dozen inconvenient things at a picnic and coming home tired out, I was always happy.

"So I decided to make every day a picnic. I decided to work just as hard to have a good time every day as I did for special days. So at night, when I go to bed, I think over the next day for a few minutes and plan it out. I think that tomorrow I am going to smile all day. I plan to do something particularly nice to please my husband, and decide to stop my work long enough, several times, to make the children laugh with me or do some other little thing to make them happy.
And I decide that whatever trouble comes up, I am going to determine immediately what action to take about it, and then not worry about it but smile it through. And do you know, it has been marvelous, the way that has helped me to look on the cheerful side of life, and I have never been so happy in all the years I have lived as I have been lately. Unless you really try it out as I did, you can not imagine how easy it is to get over having the blues."

"Sounds like it might be made into a sort of prayer," commented Mrs. King.

"Well, it is," answered Julia reverently. "It's praying for your own faults instead of some one else's.
I use it as sort of a preliminary to my regular prayers."

The Influence of the Aid Society

BY MARY E. STUDEBAKER

(Read Before the Aid Society of the Southern District of Indiana)

"What Influence Can the Aid Society Have Before the People—As Esther Did in Coming Before the King?"

In the third year of the reign of King Ahasuerus he made a feast which lasted 180 days, after which he had a special feast of seven days, characterized by much licentiousness. He sent his servants to Queen Vashti, to exhibit her beauty to the people. But she, doubtless because of becoming modesty, would not come. This caused some to fear that other women would similarly disregard the preferences of their husbands, so they requested the king to choose another queen. Thus Vashti lost her exalted position.

Several maidens were brought before the king.
Among these was Esther, a Jewess. Because of her beauty the king selected her as queen. Esther had been raised by her Uncle Mordecai. He loved his foster-daughter, but desiring to insure her safety, he requested her not to tell that she was a Jewess. He went every day to the court of the women, to keep in touch with Esther.

One day Mordecai saw two men who were planning to kill the king. At once he told Esther, who promptly informed the king. The would-be murderers were put to death. Mordecai's watchful act found favor in the sight of the king, who caused it to be recorded in the royal archives.

Haman, one of the court officials, became jealous of Mordecai, and, in order to destroy him, planned to have all the Jews killed. He caused the king to make a decree to that end. Mordecai heard of this and urged Esther to plead for her people. At first she refused, but when Mordecai assured her that she also would perish, if the king's decree stood, she at last said: "I will go in unto the king and if I perish, I perish." Then she asked that all the Jews fast three days and nights in her behalf.

When she came before the king, he graciously held out his scepter and asked her what she wanted, saying something for her people, so we are continually bein called upon to be helpers in the "Forward Mov ment" of the church.

An Aid Society should be organized in each churc of our District. Less than two-thirds of the churche have Aid Societies. Like Esther, we should insist th an Aid Society is organized in each church of ou District.

The sisters assembled in the Aid Society Meeting Annual Conference in Hershey, Pa., decided to ca for aid to build a hospital in memory of Sister Mar Quinter. Through this call and by the help of th Mission Board, $10,000 was raised for the hospital an $3,000 for its equipment. Think of the many sou that will be benefited and even brought to the Mast through this marvelous work!

At the last Conference came a call from India an China for $24,000 for a Girls' School—another nece sary institution to carry on the work. Why should w not, as Esther, call on our people to fast and pray tha this great and much needed call may be met? Ou own District is asked to give $200 a year for thre years. Will we do it, sisters? I think I hear you sa
"yes." Jesus told his disciples, when they asked hi why they could not heal a stricken child, that suc could only be done through prayer and fasting.

To increase our influence let each Aid Society hav a program once a month or once a quarter, where w may improve our talents, and better qualify ourselve for the Lord's service.

Every person can do something. Had Esther re fused to do her part, her people would not have bee saved. Let us look around and find some one who we can bring to Christ. Souls have been saved by be coming interested in the Aid Society.

The Aid Society, by being a helper to the needy, wielding a powerful influence for Christ and h church. Eternity alone can reveal the good that accomplished through the Aid Societies of the church Sister, do you not want a part in this great work?

"Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Could we know the powers working
To o'erthrow integrity,
We should judge another's errors
With more patience, charity.

"If we knew the care and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain,
Would the grim, eternal roughness
Seem—I wonder—just the same?
Should we help where now we hinder,
Should we pity where we blame?

"Ah, we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force,
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source.
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
Oh, we'd love each other better,
If we only understood."

The entire congregation received a strong spiritual benefit. Yesterday we baptized ten new members; six of whom were people outside of our church. In families where there are members there are now twenty-nine young people between twelve and twenty years of age. Twenty-seven of that number are in our Sunday-school. Another full number is ready. Petry in charge.—Olive Beck, Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Notice to the Churches of Southern Ohio.—Since the Ministerial Board of Southern Ohio desires to do its part in the advanced work of the "Forward Movement," it has decided to visit during the fall and winter as many of the churches of the District as possible. We hope to inspire them to greater activity in holding out and calling consecrated young men to the ministry; also to assist in the distribution of our forces to the greatest advantage. Dinner was served at the church and a fine social hour was enjoyed. That evening we had our love feast, with twenty-four present. Visitors were present from Stoncfick, Strait Creek and Pechles Station. It has been about five years since we held a love feast, hence it was very much enjoyed. There was a much greater and more splendid attention was given. Our members are very much scattered and we do not have regular services. We wish that other Brethren would come to our vicinity and try homes. We have a nice level country, a fair supply of land, selling at reasonable prices. We live about five miles southwest of the county-seat, three miles from a good market and the railroad. Will some one answer the call to come and help us?—Mrs. Dora Davidson, Lynchburg, Ohio, Sept. 4.

OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City.—August 31 was Brother and Sister Brent's first Sunday with us, but because of much rain only a few were privileged to be out at services. Sept. 3 we invited the Sunday-school scholars to our home, to get acquainted with the new pastor and wife. In response, about sixty came. Refreshments were served, after which some of the smallest children went home and the others went to the church for prayer meeting. After a brief prayer service a number of splendid short talks were given. The work was then turned over to Brother and Sister Brent. The former was appointed correspondent until the next members' meeting. All correspondence intended for the pastor of Oklahoma City church now should be directed to 1035 West Reno Street, Oklahoma City, Okla.—Bro. J. H. Brubaker, Sept. 4.

The Work of the Church and Money

Some people profess to despise money and especially to deprecate its use in church matters. When properly done the raising of it may as well be a means of grace as the spending of it. Many methods have been tried for raising money, some of them good, but the best, in the opinion of men who have studied the matter, is the Every Member Canvass with Duplex Envelopes.

The Every Member Canvass is conducted once a year. Each member is strongly urged to pledge a weekly amount for the use of the church. The cause of missions is presented at the same time and a weekly pledge for them also is solicited. The weekly gift is in accordance with I Cor. 16: 2.

The Duplex Envelopes are put up in cartons, each envelope numbered and dated, one for each Sunday of the year. One side of the envelope provides for the contribution to the current local expense of the church. The other side is for missions or such other benevolences as the donor may designate.

The time to install the envelopes and weekly offerings is the beginning of your fiscal year, or if there never has been any time set for the fiscal year, at the beginning of the calendar year. Bring it up at the next quarterly council and decide for the new system.

The supplies needed are: Pledge cards (enough for each member), price, 40c per hundred. A carton of envelopes (1 for each member), Manila, per set, 11c. White, per set, 12c.

The Sower Church Financial Record. No. 1, for 200 names, $2.25; No. 2, for 300 names, $3.00; No. 3, for 500 names, $3.50.

You may think the cost of such an outfit is prohibitive, but this is not the case. The increased offerings will far more than repay the charges. The experience has been that practically every one will give more, and that a greater number of people will contribute something, so that the total will exceed the amount given by any other method.

You may order direct from this advertisement, or if more information is wanted write for samples and fuller descriptive matter.

It takes a little time to print these, so order as soon as possible.

Where to Find the Difference

WITH your mind's eye take a look at the Christian people of your community, the church folks, I mean. Then take another look through the same community—this time picking out the people who make no profession of religion. Is there any difference? Any difference in the daily life? Any difference, outside of the fact that the one set goes to church and the other does not?

The other day I read a statement to the effect that war chaplains generally agree that no difference in personal life was noticeable between the church and non-church soldiers. I wondered if that was true. And then I wondered if a like comparison, in any community, would justify a similar conclusion.

Surely that isn't true, is it? But, frankly, aren't you afraid it is too nearly true? And if it is, what then? What would that imply as to the merit of our Christian claims?

If the only difference between the Christian and the non-Christian lies in what the former does at church, then the claim, sometimes put forth by the non-Christian, that he is as good a Christian as the "Christian," is correct. The place to find the difference that counts is in the common walks of life. If there is no difference there, there might as well be none anywhere.

What is Christianity? The kind that has the brand of Christ upon it?

Making Old Commandments New

AT the last supper Jesus spoke of a new commandment he was giving his disciples: "That ye love one another." Years after that John said it was no new commandment he was writing to his readers, but an old one they had always had. Then in the very next verse he said it was a new commandment after all.

Christian experience is a great solvent of such contradictions. How often do old forms and formulas light up with such a volume of new content that it seems you must never have heard of them before. To fulfill "the law and the prophets"—to fill them full—is the very genius of Christian teaching.

How peculiarly true this is of that new-old commandment, love. It is always taking on new applications. And it always will be. Just try to imagine how our grandchildren will understand: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." It will surely tax their charity to admit that we were Christians.

More About That New Challenge to the Church

WELL, have you got it studied out? The answer to that "why"? Or was it so clear at once that no study was required? It really is self-evident, isn't it? What other answer could there be?

But before you go further with these observations turn over, please, to page 610 and see what Bro. Moore has to say about that "Good Samaritan" that failed to materialize. And the "thief" that did materialize. No, Bro. Moore does not call him that. His gracious manners would not let him. Neither does he intimate, nor would I, that every case of mortgage foreclosure belongs in that class. But read it for yourself, if you have not done so already. Does it call to mind anything that ever came under your notice in which the same fine regard for the Golden Rule was exemplified? Interesting story, don't you think?

Now let me tell you something a returning prodigal said lately, one who gave every indication of thorough repentance and the deepest desire to be of the greatest possible service to the Master's cause, but who met mostly rebuffs and closed doors. These are the words, for substance, if not exactly: "I have about made up my mind that the returning prodigal will have to be satisfied with the Father's welcome, and can not hope for real reconciliation with the elder brother."

If any keen-scented reader detects in this line of inquiry a plea for a lowering of moral standards in this age of moral laxity, he is entitled to another sniff. But I do think it is time we should begin to see the amazing inconsistency and lopsidedness which have characterized our standards of Christian loyalty. How can such things be? Because, somehow, we have been reading and repeating, over and over, these greatest truths of the Gospel without getting their true import. The most outstanding teaching of the whole New Testament hasn't "soaked in."

But that is only to press the question farther back. Why hasn't it "soaked in"? How could we miss seeing anything so big and plain? Is it because our minds have always been preoccupied? Did we know, even before we began to read, what the "plan of salvation" is? That is, in what chapters and verses to look for it? Is it because, for generations back, we have inherited a certain body of teaching which has so completely filled our thought that a fresh and open and unprejudiced reading of our Bibles has been impossible? And is it, too, because our innate selfishness has made it easy not to see in what we read anything that would cross our selfish wishes?

Perhaps there is a little comfort in the knowledge that we are not the only ones. It's true of Christendom in general. But that is really a sad sort of comfort when you think of the urgency and bigness of this challenge which is facing us.

Perhaps, also, if you can explain why some people can look at Niagara Falls without seeing anything but water, you can tell why so many of us have looked so long at "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" without seeing anything but words.

To the charge that Christianity has failed, a charge we have heard so often since the war began, we have replied that it has not, because it has not been tried. Very true indeed, so far as it goes. But it goes only half way. It leaves the main question still unanswered: Why has it not been tried? It is part of the business of Christianity to get itself tried and if it has not been tried, it has so far failed.

Herein lies the essence of the challenge. "Come on with your Christianity," it says, "and prove your claims, if you can. We do not believe them. We deny your hypocritical professions of interest in others. We make no pretense to such visionary doctrines. We believe in individuals and nations looking out for themselves. We have no use for your impossible theories and dare you to put them to practice." Few would put it quite so bluntly, but this is what it comes to.

A complete reply to such a challenge would show that in many important respects Christianity has not only been tried but has succeeded nobly. But we are not concerned with that side of the case just now. It is the other side that bothers us. There is too much truth in the allegations to permit us to feel comfortable. The field in which Christianity has not been tried is so accusingly large, and that "why has it not been?" haunts us. No, we have not yet learned the meaning of self-denying love. Some things we have stressed well, but not this. The biggest thing in Christianity we have touched very lightly. Hardly hard enough to make anybody notice it.

Can we ignore this challenge? Shall we try to meet it? How? Will you be thinking hard about that "How"?

Christian Rites and Christian Life

To give life, and to give it in abundance, was the mission of Jesus. And the secret of life, he said, was to be found in eating his flesh and drinking his blood.

His disciples, accustomed as they were, by this time, to being taught in parables, nevertheless found this "a hard saying," and many of them "went back and walked no more with him." He had tried to explain to their materialistic minds that "the flesh profiteth nothing," that "it is the spirit that giveth life," but they got little out of it.

Later he gave the twelve another lesson on this subject. It was at one of the most solemn moments of his life, and of theirs. He took some bread from the supper they had been eating, broke it into pieces and told them that was his body, his flesh. Let them eat of that. He also took a cup containing some fruit of the vine and asked them all to drink of it. That, he said, was his blood.

So this is how we are to eat the flesh and drink the blood of Jesus? O no, no. Shall we be as dull of hearing as that crowd in the Capernaum synagogue? This is how we are to learn how.

Certain literalistic souls have felt obliged to think, when taking the bread and cup of the holy communion, that they were eating and drinking the physical flesh and blood of Jesus. Why? Because Jesus said they were his body and his blood, and for those who can see reality in nothing but material substance, there could be no other interpretation.

And certain others, though scorning such absurdities, have nevertheless supposed that in the literal eating and drinking of the bread and cup they were fulfilling the condition of life laid down by Jesus in John six fifty-three. Whereas, they were only embracing (or missing?) a fine opportunity to learn how to fulfil that condition.

Symbols can only nourish the soul by impressing the spiritual facts which they symbolize upon the mind. As the bread and cup are symbols of his flesh and blood, so his flesh and blood are symbols of his Spirit. That is what we must feed upon. That is where the life is.

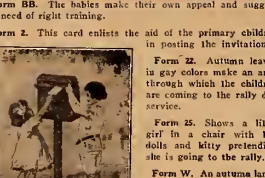
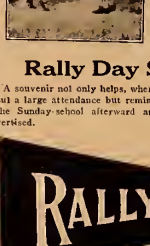
which holds all its members until death or removal does not need to observe this day. Every other school should make the most of it. In this life we usually get what we want if we are willing to pay the price. So every school can have a rousing Rally Day. To do this you will want to advertise it. A personal invitation by word of mouth or by post is a most effective way. Note the attractive cards available. Printed invitation with blank space for date. The price on cards is 75c per hundred assorted as desired.

Form AA. Effectively combining the open Bible, the Cross and the flag.



Form BB. The babies make their own appeal and suggest the need of right training.

Form 2. This card enlists the aid of the primary children in posting the invitations.



Form 22. Autumn leaves in gay colors make an arch through which the children are coming to the rally day service.

Form 25. Shows a little girl in a chair with her dolls and kitty pretending she is going to the rally.

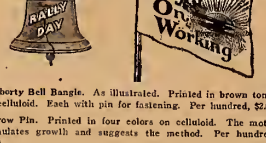
Form W. An autumn landscape in gay colors suggesting the time of the year when the service is held.

Form 17. A landscape card in beautiful colors.

Rally Day Souvenirs

A souvenir not only helps, when properly advertised, to bring out a large attendance but reminds those who receive them of the Sunday-school afterward and so keeps the school advertised.

Felt Bannerettes. These are the size of the illustration, printed in white on felt of assorted colors. Each 3c, per hundred, $2.50.



Liberty Bell Bangle. As illustrated. Printed in brown tones on celluloid. Each with pin for fastening. Per hundred, $2.00.

Grow Pin. Printed in four colors on celluloid. The motto stimulates growth and suggests the method. Per hundred, $2.00.

but how about seeing your brother go to the wall and all the full-handed members playing the role of the priest and Levite? Then how about a religion that turns out priests and Levites by the score and makes so few Good Samaritans? Is there not something the matter with that type of religion?

We have heard of congregations rallying around an unfortunate brother and putting him on his feet again. Such conduct reminds us of the scriptural incident, referred to in the beginning of this article, and prompts us to say that if we would plan for more work of that sort we might be in position to offer better reasons for opposing membership in secret societies.

Fundamentals in Education

BY JOHN S. FLORY

THE order in which one takes his school-work, that is the relation of the general to the specialized work, and the kind of school in which the work is done, are important considerations. But there is another matter of more vital significance, it may be, than either of these. That is the spirit of the institution and the teachers—their attitude towards Christianity, their personal faith or lack of faith, their reverence for God's Word or their lack of reverence. To be the constructive force in the lives of young people that it ought to be, education must be Christian.

It is but fair to state frankly that there are many very learned men, great authorities in their subjects, who are positively unfit to teach young men and women, because their whole attitude towards some of the most important things in life is wrong. They see everything only in the dry light of established scientific fact. In their thinking there is no room for such a thing as divine inspiration. Even in teaching secular subjects they often undermine the very foundations of faith in young people who have been brought up under Christian influences. I have known a young man, carefully reared in a Christian home, to have his faith in divine things so shocked, by a teacher of history, that he for a time meditated suicide. There is reason to believe that instances of this kind are much more numerous in schools in which the claims of true Christianity are not carefully safeguarded than is generally known.

If education is to give young people preparation for complete living, it must train their hearts to sympathize and feel as well as their intellects to think. So any educational system that does not put Christianity in the foreground and diffuse the spirit of God's Word through all of the teaching, must lack one essential element in its preparation of young people for the right attitude towards life and the greatest usefulness to the world.

One is tempted to speak historically here. In the golden days of Greece education was practically universal. Every person received its benefits. And such a volume of poetry, history, romance, oratory, eloquence as this age produced has probably not been duplicated at any other time or place. Yet this universal learning lacked one essential element—it lacked morality, it lacked vital heart religion, it lacked all that makes life noble, and sweet and pure and holy. And despite all the refinement and taste and art that this culture possessed, it led this most gifted race into a state of moral corruption and decay that terminated in darkness, ignominy and shame.

In our day the most thoroughly-schooled people, doubtless, have been the Germans. But their educational system, too, lacked the one element of most fundamental importance—it lacked God. The people forgot him. And ninety-eight per cent of the highly educated classes, it is said, are atheists. They have taught speculative philosophy instead of revealed religion. They have forgotten Christ and the Holy Spirit, and the result has been the awful vortex into which their erroneous teaching has plunged the world.

Education is power, but if that power is to be used for the support of things that are right, it must be directed by the Spirit of Divine Wisdom. If we want our boys and girls to be constructive forces in society, standing for principles of right and honor, for clean living, good government, right ideals, it is important that we keep them under the influence of the only perfect code of moral teaching in the world—the Bible.

If education is to be truly helpful it must be Christian. Our Brethren colleges are built upon the Bible. In all of them God's Word holds an important place. The teachers are God-fearing men and women, often sacrificing a great deal for the cause that our colleges stand for. Under their tuition our young people receive safe guidance. For our own people to be satisfied to send their boys and girls to institutions where their highest welfare is not safeguarded, looks like putting more value on a few dollars than on the eternal welfare of their children. Let it be hoped that we will not continue to make mistakes of this kind.

Our schools are primarily for our own people, but of course for all others who desire to do right and want the help of pure Christian school environment. The greatest blessing any parent can be to his children is to so establish them in right ideals and purposes that they will live noble, helpful and purposeful lives. The greatest factor, outside of the Christian home, for helping to achieve this is our Christian colleges.

The permanent achievements of Christian education are established. It should be a matter of satisfaction to us that, according to carefully-compiled statistics, three out of every four of the men and women who have become famous in this country for solid achievements, which have made them a blessing to the race, have been educated in Christian colleges. Wm. H. Ridgway, of Sunday School Times fame, has had a thousand dollars lying in bank for a number of years, which he is anxious to give away. And only one condition is required. That is, that he be supplied with information about some man or woman in this country who has become famous for some distinguished service, and has not been connected with a Sunday-school. His thousand dollars still remains unclaimed. There is a vitalizing force in Christianity that produces the solid results of character which lie at the foundation of all true and lasting achievement. When your boys or girls go away to school this fall, see to it that they are not deprived of the chief essential to success, that they are to receive from their college course.

The Benefits of Suffering

BY S. Z. SHARP

(1) Why is there so much suffering in this world? (2) Why is it said in Rom. 8: 22: "The whole creation groaneth in pain until now"? (3) Why is it decreed that the entrance into motherhood must be through suffering? (4) Why had Job to suffer so greatly, though God himself declared: "There is none like him in all the earth, a perfect and an upright man"? (5) Why is it said, in 2 Tim. 3: 12: "All who would live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution"? (6) Why is it that Christ himself, though divine as well as human, and without sin, yet had to suffer? These questions have perplexed the mind of many a wise philosopher; can you answer them?

1. LET us begin at the beginning. There was a time in this earth when there was no suffering, travailing or pain. God pronounced every creature good. All in creation was in peace and harmony. No wind lashed the sea into waves and billows. The ravages of the storm and the destruction of the tornado were unknown. In paradise "the wolf dwelt with the lamb, the leopard lay down with the kid and the lion ate straw like an ox." All was harmony, life, love and liberty. What brought about the stupendous change? Why, evil came into the world.

We assume that evil always was, as well as good. No one can mention a single quality that does not have its opposite. If there always was good, or God, there must have been always evil, or the D-evil. Where evil is, there are war, suffering, destruction, pain and death. Once evil was even in heaven—"There was war in heaven" (Rev. 12: 7). As good is stronger than evil, the latter was cast down to the earth (Rev. 12: 9). He is called "The deceiver of the whole world," hence there is so much suffering found here. This answers the first question.

2. So far as we know, the deceiver's first act of deception, when he came to this earth, was to deceive Eve, using the serpent as his instrument. Evil was thus injected into God's creatures. All creation received the shock. Like an epidemic, every creature was affected. Evil passions were aroused. Discord followed. All the inhabitants of paradise were driven out. Even the ground was cursed and brought forth thorns and thistles. "All creation travaileth in pain till now" (Rom. 8: 22).

3. "Every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward" (Heb. 2: 2). For her disobedience it was said to woman: "I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children." When Eve submitted her body to evil, her body became changed, and subject to pain and death, and this quality was transmitted to her offspring; hence, woman still suffers.

4. Why should Job, who was righteous above all others in this world, suffer so greatly, though he served God so faithfully? We, from our narrow view-point, and not knowing all the circumstances, would expect that God would protect him against the attacks of the evil one. This much, however, we learn from the Scriptures, that Satan has certain power on earth at present, and he uses this power and privilege to the detriment of God's children. He is called, in the Scriptures, "The prince of this world," "The prince of the power of the air." We read, too, that when Satan tempted Christ and showed him all the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them, he said: "It hath been delivered unto me and to whomsoever I will, I will give it." Christ did not dispute this claim of Satan, hence we must conclude that Satan has great power on earth and is the source of all suffering, destruction and death, and that he uses this power to the detriment of God's people, but God sees to it that his people will not lose anything by their suffering, but will reward them manifold. To Job he gave twice as much as he had before his loss, and Christ promises that they who suffer for his sake shall receive "a hundredfold more in this life and in the world to come, life eternal." We conclude, therefore, that, according to the eternal standard of justice, there must be given to Satan certain powers and privileges to harass God's people, but that God will abundantly rectify all the damage that Satan can inflict.

5. Why must "all who would live godly in Christ Jesus suffer persecution"? Why must we "through many tribulations enter the kingdom"? Why is it decreed that the saints are subject to "fiery trials"? All these things are the result of the conflict between good and evil, between Christ and Satan. As Christ is the embodiment of "the way, the truth and the life," so is Satan the embodiment of tribulation, pain and death. The conflict between these two powers must go on until evil shall be overcome and good made triumphant. "Christ must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet." "The last enemy that shall be abolished is death" (1 Cor. 15: 25-26). "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end" (Isa. 9: 7). It is a long and slow process, but all will be right at last. "The devil that deceived the nations shall be cast into the lake of fire."

6. "Why had Christ to suffer though he was without sin?" In the first place he was human and divine. His human nature was subjected to suffering like all other human natures. His divine nature could not suffer. He was the Son of man as well as the Son of God. The eternal decree made no distinction of persons. Christ "in all points was tempted like as we are." His suffering, in the first place, was in consequence of his human nature.

In the next place, Christ, to be our Mediator and High Priest, "was made perfect through suffering." "It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren, that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make propitiation for the sins of the people." "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin." He suffered and died to redeem the human race. "As in Adam all died, so in Christ all shall be made alive." "There is no other name [or power] given in heaven or among men by which we must be saved."

Again; his suffering was a prelude to the immeasurable glory and honor which were given to him. Because he "emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being rother could not borrow money to cancel the old ortgage and to give a new one.

There was just one thing left for him to do, and hat was to sacrifice his farm, his home and much f what he had saved. There was no Good Samarian in the neighborhood to help relieve him in the ad hour of need. He may not have fallen into the ands of thieves and robbers, and yet the rich hurch member, who had the mortgage stored away i his fire-proof safe, was not an angel of mercy nd probably not made of the material of which ngels are formed. The mortgage held tight, had a eath-grip on the farm and grew stronger and eavier as the months passed.

Finally the heart-broken brother bowed his head humble submission. The good wife wept and the earts of all the children were filled with sadness.
was agreed that the mortgage might be foreosed and the farmer receive what little the rich an might see proper to give him. In this way me of his earnings were saved, but the farm, the vely home and the well-constructed barn and other uildings all went to the rich man. The farmer and is family tried to make another home, but their pirits were broken. The strength and courage of e farmer seemed to have deserted him. The een disappointment was too much for the devout nd devoted wife and mother. The burden was too eavy for her and soon erushed her mind and body.
Vith sad hearts her weeping friends gathered ound her lifeless form and laid her to rest in the ld grave. The brother struggled on a few years nd was finally placed by the side of his wife at the xpense of the church that he had honored by the ttient and godly life that he had lived. There were vo pathetic funerals, some flowers, two touching rmons, dealing with the triumphant faith of the ghteous.

By and by the rich man died, and there was an-her funeral, some nice singing and another funer-sermon. We can not follow the story of either rty any further than the grave. But the property the rich man was divided up among the children, nd not all of them were members of the church at e time. What happened when the spirits met on e other shore is not to be reported back to earth.
he curtain dropped at the grave and that is the nd of our part of the narrative.

It is a story without a Good Samaritan playing s part of the role. There were plenty of Levites nd priests. There always are. It is easy for them see a poor man go to the wall while they pass by, n their way to the bank to deposit goodly sums of oney. They may go to church, pray long and ud for the poor, and sing: "Help somebody toy," and yet pass by the poor brother a half dozen mes the next week, without offering to turn a nd to help him out of a tight place. The man is ot a beggar. He is not even asking for charity.
e is in a close place and could easily work his way ut if some of his rich brethren would stand by him r a short time.

Where is the trouble? There are too many Le-tes and priests on the church roll and not enough Good Samaritans. There is plenty of money to crease the bank deposits, but not enough to help t the poor man on his feet. We may write and lk about the fine conduct of the Good Samaritan, it there is no one who wants to play his part of e role. Men by the thousand will act the part of e Levite and priest, with no blessing in sight, but ot one will volunteer to show half of the kindness splayed by the Good Samaritan.

but how about seeing your brother go to the wall and all the full-handed members playing the role of the priest and Levite? Then how about a religion that turns out priests and Levites by the score and makes so few Good Samaritans? Is there not something the matter with that type of religion?

We have heard of congregations rallying around an unfortunate brother and putting him on his feet again. Such conduct reminds us of the scriptural incident, referred to in the beginning of this article, and prompts us to say that if we would plan for more work of that sort we might be in position to offer better reasons for opposing membership in secret societies.

Fundamentals in Education

BY JOHN S. FLORY

THE order in which one takes his school-work, that is the relation of the general to the specialized work, and the kind of school in which the work is done, are important considerations. But there is another matter of more vital significance, it may be, than either of these. That is the spirit of the institution and the teachers—their attitude towards Christianity, their personal faith or lack of faith, their reverence for God's Word or their lack of reverence. To be the constructive force in the lives of young people that it ought to be, education must be Christian.

It is but fair to state frankly that there are many very learned men, great authorities in their subjects, who are positively unfit to teach young men and women, because their whole attitude towards some of the most important things in life is wrong. They see everything only in the dry light of established scientific fact. In their thinking there is no room for such a thing as diviue inspiration. Even in teaching secular subjects they often undermine the very foundations of faith in young people who have been brought up under Christian influences. I have known a young man, carefully reared in a Christian home, to have his faith in divine things so shocked, by a teacher of history, that he for a time meditated suicide. There is reason to believe that instances of this kind are much more numerous in schools in which the claims of true Christianity are not carefully safeguarded than is generally known.

If education is to give young people preparation for complete living, it must train their hearts to sympathize and feel as well as their intellects to think. So any educational system that does not put Christianity in the foreground and diffuse the spirit of God's Word through all of the teaching, must lack one essential element in its preparation of young people for the right attitude towards life and the greatest usefulness to the world.

One is tempted to speak historically here. In the golden days of Greece education was practically universal. Every person received its benefits. And such a volume of poetry, history, romance, oratory, eloquence as this age produced has probably not been duplicated at any other time or place. Yet this universal learning lacked one essential element—it lacked morality, it lacked vital heart religion, it lacked all that makes life noble, and sweet and pure and holy. And despite all the refinement and taste and art that this culture possessed, it led this most gifted race into a state of moral corruption and decay that terminated in darkness, ignominy and shame.

In our day the most thoroughly-schooled people, doubtless, have been the Germans. But their educational system, too, lacked the one element of most fundamental importance—it lacked God. The people forgot him. And ninety-eight per cent of the highly that we keep them under the influence of the only per fect code of moral teaching in the world—the Bible

If education is to be truly helpful it must be Chris tian. Our Brethren colleges are built upon the Bible In all of them God's Word holds an important place The teachers are God-fearing men and women, ofte sacrificing a great deal for the cause that our college stand for. Under their tuition our young people receiv safe guidance. For our own people to be satisfied t send their boys and girls to institutions where thei highest welfare is not safeguarded, looks like puttin more value on a few dollars than on the eternal welfar of their children. Let it be hoped that we will no continue to make mistakes of this kind.

Our schools are primarily for our own people, bu of course for all others who desire to do right and wan the help of pure Christian school environment. Th greatest blessing any parent can be to his children is t so establish them in right ideals and purposes that the will live noble, helpful and purposeful lives. Th greatest factor, outside of the Christian home, for help ing to achieve this is our Christian colleges.

The permanent achievements of Christian educatio are established. It should be a matter of satisfactio to us that, according to carefully-compiled statistic three out of every four of the men and women wh have become famous in this country for solid achieve ments, which have made them a blessing to the rac have been educated in Christian colleges. Wm. E Ridgway, of Sunday School Times fame, has had thousand dollars lying in bank for a number of year which he is anxious to give away. And only one con dition is required. That is, that he be supplied wit information about some man or woman in this cou try who has become famous for some distinguishe service, and has not been connected with a Sunday school. His thousand dollars still remains unclaime There is a vitalizing force in Christianity that produce the solid results of character which lie at the founda tion of all true and lasting achievement. When yo boys or girls go away to school this fall, see to it tha they are not deprived of the chief essential to succes that they are to receive from their college course.

The Benefits of Suffering

BY S. Z. SHARP

(1) Why is there so much suffering in this world? (2 Why is it said in Rom. 8: 22: "The whole creation groa eth in pain until now"? (3) Why is it decreed that the e trance into motherhood must be through suffering? (4 Why had Job to suffer so greatly, though God himse declared: "There is none like him in all the earth, a pe fect and an upright man"? (5) Why is it said, in 2 Tim 3: 12: "All who would live godly in Christ Jesus mu suffer persecution"? (6) Why is it that Christ himsel though divine as well as human, and without sin, yet ha to suffer? These questions have perplexed the mind o many a wise philosopher; can you answer them?

1. LET us begin at the beginning. There was a tim in this earth when there was no suffering, travailing o pain. God pronounced every creature good. All i creation was in peace and harmony. No wind lashe the sea into waves and billows. The ravages of th storm and the destruction of the tornado were un known. In paradise "the wolf dwelt with the lamb the leopard lay down with the kid and the lion at straw like an ox." All was harmony, life, love an liberty. What brought about the stupendous change Why, evil came into the world.

We assume that evil always was, as well as good No one can mention a single quality that does not hav its opposite. If there always was good, or God, then must have been always evil, or the D-evil. Where ev

COLORADO

Denver church met in council Sept. 3, with our elder, Bro. G. W. Burgin, presiding. One query was sent to District Meeting. Sisters H. C. Long and Mary Culler will represent us at the District Meeting and Sunday-school Convention, to be held at Spinner, Kans. Our elder will also be present. Bro. Emery, over ninety-eight years of age, passed away recently. Bro. Conrad Pitz gave us a splendid sermon on Sunday evening. An all-day meeting, with a well-arranged program for the upbuilding of the church and Sunday-school, will be held next Sunday. These meetings are always looked forward to with interest. A good offering was also taken up. Love and union prevailed throughout the meeting. Several members have moved into our midst lately. We decided to hold our love feast in the near future, as well as a series of meetings. Any inquiries regarding the church or our country will be cheerfully answered.—Mrs. R. Cline, 1070 Gas Building, Denver, Colo., Sept. 11.

Sept. 6 we met in council, with Eld. Keim presiding. At this meeting five letters of membership were granted, four being to young members who are leaving for McPherson College. Bro. J. H. Graybill, of Nampa, officiated in the installation service. Sept. 3 and 4 Bro. Baxter Mow, of the Brethren Bible School, talked in the interest of the "Forward Movement." Zimmerman, Meridian, Idaho, Sept. 10.

Twin Falls.—Since our last report Bro. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson College, has given us two splendid talks on "Christian Education," which we enjoyed very much. One of our young people is now at this college, as a result of his presentation of the matter. We met in council Sept. 12. We took up the matter of building an addition to our churchhouse and raised nearly $3,000 for the same by subscription. Our building committee estimated it would cost $5,000. We hope to have the work finished before the Sunday-school Convention, which will be held here Nov. 27 and 28, closing with our love feast, Nov. 28. We are still without a pastor and would be glad to hear from some one wishing to come and help us. Sunday evening, after hearing Bro. Baxter Mow, of Weiser, Idaho, on the "Five-Year Forward-Movement," Bro. S. S. Neher, of Kingsley, Iowa, formerly of this church, is with us for a two weeks' visit among the old members and friends. He also is a strong advocate of the "Forward Movement." We appreciated having these brethren with us.—Alice Swab, Twin Falls, Idaho, Sept. 15.

Beckner, of McPherson, Kans., gave the address, which was well received by a large audience. At noon dinner was served in the basement. In the morning we had special music and an excellent missionary sermon by the pastor. An offering of $180 was given for foreign missions. In the evening we had a short program by the children, with special music and an exhibition of machinery, used sixty years ago, such as the sickle, cradle and plow. Talks were given by several of the older brethren, who in bygone days had farmed with such implements, showing us the wonderful improvements made up to this time. We took up the matter of building an addition to our churchhouse and raised nearly $3,000 for the same by subscription. Our building committee estimated the work will cost $8,000. We hope to have the work finished before the Sunday-school Convention, which will be held here Nov. 27 and 28, closing with our love feast, Nov. 28. We are still without a pastor and would be glad to hear from some one wanting to come west. We also had the pleasure, this week, of hearing Bro. His correspondents will do well to note his new address—90 North Bell View Place. Any of the "Messenger" readers who have friends or relatives in the city, whether members or not, will please advise the writer or Bro. S. S. Grever, 90 North Bell View Place. CALIFORNIA

Chico.—August 3 Bro. Frederick Hollenberg gave us two splendid addresses on the "Forward Movement Gospel." August 10 Bro. A. Dickenstaff, a member of the District Mission Board, gave us a sermon. Our pastor, Bro. C. E. Davis, and wife have left for La Verne, where Bro. Davis will attend school. This leaves us without a resident minister. The brethren from Live Oak will fill appointments for us until a minister is secured. Bro. J. P. Wright, of Oakland, was with us on Sunday, Sept. 7. We greatly enjoyed his sermons by our visiting brethren and also the lectures on the book of Revelation by Bro. Davis. Any minister desiring to change location, or to come west, should write Bro. Arnie Wright, R. D. 2, box 32, Chico, Calif.—Sarah E. Rife, Chico, Calif., Sept. 15.

Empire.—Since our last report fifteen have been received by letter, one also have had come very inspiring meetings by Bro. Fred Holsberg. Today Bro. Ernest Davis preached for us. Next Saturday our regular council conferences. Much work will come up relative to the District Meeting of Northern California, which convenes here early

A Very Important Claim Not Fully Provided For

BY LEANDER SMITH

In looking over the program of our "Five-Year Forward Movement" of the Church of the Brethren, I am well pleased. I feel that it has been well arranged. But when I look again at our program I see one thing lacking, and that is a provision for an "Aged Ministers' Relief Fund."

Why should not the claim of the retired minister be regarded as a sacred obligation? It was a part of the understanding between him and his church, when the hands of ordination were laid upon him, to give himself wholly to God, and to hold himself in readiness to go where the church thought he was most needed, to preach the Gospel, administer the ordinances, to visit the sick, to comfort the sorrowing, and to shepherd his flock in the light and teaching of the New Testament.

When he laid his life on the altar of service, was there not an implied promise, on the part of the church, to give him a comfortable support? But is not this promise too often neglected and forgotten?

Some of the sweetest memories of your life point back to the days of a never-to-be-forgotten minister. He was the friend of your childhood. He led you to Christ. He stood by your side through some Bethany shadow, and his tears fell with yours on the grave of your dead.

The noble Christian layman says: "When a minister, by his ordination vows, has voluntarily closed the avenue by which men ordinarily achieve a competency, and afterwards becomes mentally or physically disqualified for his office, or is laid aside by the infirmities of age, he has a right to claim support from the church. We can not afford to break our solemn pledge. Our names are on the bond, and our Master is our Endorser. Do we propose to let his note go to protest?"

The claims of those who have spent their lives in the service of our Master and ourselves should receive attention. Cruelly such have been called "worn-out ministers," and yet their plight should appeal to the best that is in us—not as a charity, but as a moral obligation. While a minister may indeed be poor in purse, he is rich in experience that the noble might covet. The unwritten history of the aged minister would, if presented to our view, disclose such a record of self-denial as to make his appeal almost the first in its worth and sacredness. And when he dies, how sad and perplexing, often, is the lot of his widow!

There are numerous objects of benevolence, and all must receive their just share of attention, but no appeal will move more deeply the tenderest sympathy of the people than the one which has for its object the claim of those ministers of Christ who have sunk under the burden and heat of the day. Many of them are slow to make their wants known, and they travel on through patient, anxious months, waiting for the unbidden ravens, which come on noiseless wings from above.

I once knew a minister whom I tenderly loved. He was content to occupy a comparatively humble field. There he did a noble service for God and souls. He was a good preacher, and a loving, sympathetic elder, but sickness came. He resigned his charge and went to live in a quiet place, where he hoped to be restored to health and to resume his work. His good, consecrated wife opened a school in the room adjoining that in which the invalid lay, and ministered to him as fully as she could while thus seeking a means of support. But by and by the dying husband required all her attention. Her school was disbanded and her revenue ceased. A few days later the last handful of meal was taken from the barrel. The members just then discovered that his means were exhausted, and asked him why he had not sought assistance from the church. He answered: "I did not, because I knew the provision was scant and I thought there might be some of God's dear servants in greater need than I."

In a little while relief was obtained. His brethren and friends carried him a supply of good things. He thanked them, and looked upward, his eyes filled with tears, and he exclaimed in trembling voice: "Surely God is good." He could say no more.

In a few hours his friends made his way smooth, and brightened it by the ministration of love. Not many days after, the Master called him, and they laid his emaciated body in the grave. Tenderly they put him to rest in the narrow house, with sweet thoughts of him who said: "I am the resurrection and the life."

Yes, help came at last, but why that long night of waiting? Here and there and everywhere, in our beloved Brotherhood, are to be found those who have carried the burdens of others and brought light to many a darkened home, who themselves are traveling weary and darksome passages on their way home.

Oh, brethren and sisters, let us give and give quickly! Let us raise an ample fund for those who make a pathetic picture as, in the twilight of age, they sit in silent places and often in the shadows.

"Whoso hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him" (1 John 3: 17)?

Educational Notes From India

Jalalpor.—I can do no better than let Sister Shumaker report to you in her own words, concerning the difficulties that confront her there: "I have been waiting to send a few notes concerning the school-work here. It is surely the hardest proposition that I have yet struck. The opposition is fierce from without, and now—read between the lines. Thus far we have been able to keep both the Day-school and the Boarding-school going. The 'enemies of the cause' are many, and they attack us from every source and from every angle. Yet we have been having, as a rule, twenty-four boys and girls from the outside at our day-school. They are as fine a lot of children as I have ever seen. We are on our knees a great deal about these children. We long so much to have them 'kept for the Master's use!' The opposers are trying equally hard to take them from us. I have been told, over and over again, that the school at this place has been torn to pieces every time it was started. Feeling greatly concerned for the Lord's work, I can not see why the 'cohorts of Satan' should be the victors in this fight each time. If it means the giving of a life for the sake of the cause here, I am ready to lay mine down. The children are getting on so well, and are so happy, that it nearly breaks my heart when the people try to 'scare them away.' I have gone through that experience at Bulsar, but this is even harder. The enemy here is even more cunning and subtle. I have faith enough to believe that in the end God will win out.

"The same thing is true of our Girls' Boarding-school. We have had twenty-two of the very nicest children. One of them—a little Dubla girl—came to us as an orphan. Another little Dubla girl—whose mother was so poor and weak she could scarcely be on her feet, and whom we sent to the 'Widows' Home'—we took in from the street, so to speak. Then, our non-Christian mali (gardener), who is a Dubla, brought us three little Dubla girls from Vighpore—his village—but one of these we had to send away. She was afflicted with a 'loathsome disease.' Then the father, who brought us his little girl—and she was such a sweet child—had to come and steal her away. His wife made it so hard for him because he allowed her child to come to us. We felt sorry for both father and child. She was so happy here, and he did want her to stay so much, but the little child had to go. The rest of the girls were the Koli girls from Maehad. These were really stolen from us. You know the building is so near the road. The 'women' from Maehad, who do not believe in the education of the girls, did their part in getting them away from us in a quiet manner. The really sad thing about it is, that the 'mothers-in-law' of these girls 'rose up in arms' and made it so 'hot' for the parents of these girls that they were forced to keep them at home after the mothers-in-law once stole them away, and hid them when we came for them. The fathers are quite eager to have these girls in our school for training. It is not their fault. They did their part, as far as they could go. Here, again, it is the women, and the 'awful curse of child marriage.' We would have no trouble to keep the girls. They were so happy here. We are to get a few more Dubla girls—so our mali says. I do hope we can get more. Now, after all I have told you, we still have eight girls in the Boarding-school—four Kolis and four Dublas. I am told, however, that we are soon to have five of the Maehad girls back again. We need your prayers in their behalf, and in ours."

Ahwa.—Sister Ebey reports as follows, of school work in the Dangs: "We have now nineteen girls and thirty boys in our Boarding-school. Thirteen girls have come in since February. We have eight schools besides the Boarding-school. The biggest part of an educational report from the Dangs is what should be done for the ignorant people here, but we trust, under the favor of God, that some bigger things may grow from the small beginnings."

Bulsar.—The Bulsar Boarding-school has nearly doubled

Good Counsel

Psalm 37: 1-9

For Week Beginning October 5, 1919

1. Introductory.—Though the nine verses of our lesson do not, by any means, comprise all that might be named by way of counsel, their teaching of the blessedness of absolute trust in God's providence is ever fresh. Its prophecies of triumph for the afflicted who trust, and of confusion to the evil-doer, need only be verified by experience and observation, to be completely established.

2. "Fret Not Thyself Because of Evil-doers."—(Verse 1.) Why be envious at the ungodly, even if you do see the prosperity of the wicked (Psa. 73: 3)? "Be content," as the apostle suggests, "with such things as ye have," knowing that "all things work together for good to them that love God." All things are ours, for we are Christ's, and he is the Father's Only-begotten.

3. "Trust in the Lord, and Do Good."—(Verse 3.) To be content, without trusting in the Lord, is no virtue—it is foolishness or even madness. God's "Amen" is given to our faith: "Verily, thou shalt be fed." Faith is an active grace, therefore we should not be "slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises" (Heb. 6: 12).

4. "Delight Thyself Also in the Lord."—A cheering promise is given in the second clause of the verse: "And he shall give thee the desires of thine heart" (verse 4). We may well question the completeness of our trust, if it fails to lead us to "delight in the Lord." We can not delight in him, unless we believe he is the "Chief among ten thousand" and "the One who is altogether lovely."

5. "Commit Thy Way Unto the Lord."—(Verse 5.) Where there is perfect trust and delight in the Lord, there will surely be a perfect committal of ourselves, and all our ways and purposes, unto him. The life that is wholly committed, will be free from all anxious thoughts (Matt. 6: 25). We are encouraged to cast ALL our care upon him, for "he careth for us" (1 Peter 5: 7).

6. "Rest in the Lord."—(Verse 7.) This rest is the result of a whole-hearted committal. In this quietness and confidence even the weakest Christian will find abounding strength (Isa. 30: 15). The child of God can well afford to "rest in the Lord," for the battle is not his own, but the Lord's.

7. "Cease from Anger and Forsake Wrath."—(Verse 8.) This admonition is a most needful one for most of us. If our trust is in the Lord, we must not become impatient with our environments, nor must we assume a critical attitude towards others. Wrath and strife are the works of the flesh (Gal. 5: 19, 20). "He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down, and without walls" (Prov. 25: 28).

8. "Wait Upon the Lord."—(Verse 9.) After having committed all to him, and having ceased from insisting upon our will and way, there is a danger of growing weary in well-doing. Well may we heed the words of the apostle: "Ye have need of patience, that, AFTER ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise" (Heb. 10: 36). They "that wait upon the Lord," shall have such manifestations of his wonderful power, as shall renew their strength.

9. Suggestive References.—The dangers of prosperity (Deut. 10: 10-18). "All things work together for good to them that love God" (Rom. 8: 28). "Godliness with contentment is great gain" (1 Tim. 6: 6). Being content with such things as we have (Heb. 13: 5). Patient waiting brings delight in doing God's will (Psa. 40: 1, 8). Those that seek the Lord (Psa. 70: 4). Whole-hearted service (Psa. 119: 2, 10). Searching for true knowledge (Prov. 2: 3-5). Those whom the Lord loves (Prov. 8: 17, 34). Paul's counsel (Philpp. 3: 12-14).

Enforced Military Training

BY W. J. SWIGART

AMONG the unfortunate consequences of the war is e fact that the minds of nearly all people have been ore or less impregnated with war. The delay in con- rming the Treaty of Peace and the clashing about the roposed League of Nations have served to augment e suspicion that war will again arise, and hence reparation and training for war are necessary. The ar "that was carried on to end wars" has left the nman mind well fecundated with war.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania, during its extend- session, from Jan. 1 almost to midyear, entertained veral bills providing for enforced training, military d physical, in the schools. Adjournment of that dy came, however, without any final action.

During the last Congress, measures were introduced, oking toward military training. The Central Service ommittee met in Washington to make inquiry, and re assured that no such legislation would be accom- shed during that Congress.

Since the special Congress has been in session, sev- l bills have been introduced and are now pending. r. Chamberlain has introduced Senate Bill No. 2,691; d Mr. Kahn, House Bill No. 8,068. These bills are ry similar in text and purpose. They require six onths' enforced training on the part of every youth— ch training to be taken between the ages of eighteen d twenty-five, and to extend over a period of six onths. The bills follow, almost verbatim, the Selec- e Draft Laws of 1917. They provide for registra- n, medical examination, Local and District Boards, emptions, etc., in nearly the same words as set forth the Draft Law. The service specified is, of course, ly for training in camp and for six months; unless oluntary enlistments shall be insufficient to maintain regular army, navy or marine corps, . . . en numbers may be 'selected' from those complet- the training period, . . . to serve one year in army." The identical provisions for exemption m military training in the Selective Draft Law for embers of churches whose tenets forbid its mem- rs fo engage in war" are named in these bills, with additional statement: "But no person, so ex- pted, shall be excepted from service in any capacity t, by regulation, shall be declared to be noncombat- ."

The War Department has also prepared a bill and sented it to Congress. The required Standing my is less than in the Kahn-Chamberlain bills, ac- ding to Secretary Baker's request, and the time of uired training is three months instead of six.

The latest is a bill prepared by Mr. Dent, and re- red to the Committee on Military Affairs, August

This bill provides for considerable reduction in future Army of the United States and has no re- rement for enforced military training. Mr. Dent is an of advanced views on the subject of peace and itration, and the cultivation of peaceful methods l sentiments among men and nations. He is a mem- of the Committee on Military Affairs and until this sent Congress, was Chairman of that Committee. nst what will be the outcome of it all is uncertain. shall all hope that Mr. Dent's bill which is House l No. 8,870 may prevail. If it comes to an issue, ers and telegrams and personal interviews with the mbers of the House and Senate may be necessary. probable that some legislation will be passed affect- the status. So far as your Committee can see now.

A Very Important Claim Not Fully Provided For

BY LEANDER SMITH

IN looking over the program of our "Five-Year Forward Movement" of the Church of the Brethren, I am well pleased. I feel that it has been well arranged. But when I look again at our program I see one thing lacking, and that is a provision for an "Aged Ministers' Relief Fund."

Why should not the claim of the retired minister be regarded as a sacred obligation? It was a part of the understanding between him and his church, when the hands of ordination were laid upon him, to give himself wholly to God, and to hold himself in readiness to go where the church thought he was most needed, to preach the Gospel, administer the ordinances, to visit the sick, to comfort the sorrowing, and to shepherd his flock in the light and teaching of the New Testament.

When he laid his life on the altar of service, was there not an implied promise, on the part of the church, to give him a comfortable support? But is not this promise too often neglected and forgotten?

Some of the sweetest memories of your life point back to the days of a never-to-be-forgotten minister. He was the friend of your childhood. He led you to Christ. He stood by your side through some Bethany shadow, and his tears fell with yours on the grave of your dead.

The noble Christian layman says: "When a minister, by his ordination vows, has voluntarily closed the avenue by which men ordinarily achieve a competency, and afterwards becomes mentally or physically disqualified for his office, or is laid aside by the infirmities of age, he has a right to claim support from the church. We can not afford to break our solemn pledge. Our names are on the bond, and our Master is our Endorser. Do we propose to let his note go to protest?"

The claims of those who have spent their lives in the service of our Master and ourselves should receive attention. Cruelly such have been called "worn-out ministers," and yet their plight should appeal to the best that is in us—not as a charity, but as a moral obligation. While a minister may indeed be poor in purse, he is rich in experience that the noble might covet. The unwritten history of the aged minister would, if presented to our view, disclose such a record of self-denial as to make his appeal almost the first in its worth and sacredness. And when he dies, how sad and perplexing, often, is the lot of his widow!

There are numerous objects of benevolence, and all must receive their just share of attention, but no appeal will move more deeply the tenderest sympathy of the people than the one which has for its object the claim of those ministers of Christ who have sunk under the burden and heat of the day. Many of them are slow to make their wants known, and they travel on through patient, anxious months, waiting for the unbidden ravens, which come on noiseless wings from above.

I once knew a minister whom I tenderly loved. He was content to occupy a comparatively humble field. There he did a noble service for God and souls. He was a good preacher, and a loving, sympathetic elder, but sickness came. He resigned his charge and went to live in a quiet place, where he hoped to be restored to health and to resume his work. His good, consecrated wife opened a school in the room adjoining that in which the invalid lay, and ministered to him as fully as she could while thus seeking a means of support. But by and by the dying husband required all her attention. Her school was disbanded and her revenue ceased. A few days later the last handful of meal was

In a few hours his friends made his way smooth and brightened it by the ministration of love. No many days after, the Master called him, and they lai his emaciated body in the grave. Tenderly they pu him to rest in the narrow house, with sweet thought of him who said: "I am the resurrection and th life."

Yes, help came at last, but why that long night o waiting? Here and there and everywhere, in our be loved Brotherhood, are to be found those who hav carried the burdens of others and brought light t many a darkened home, who themselves are travelin weary and darksome passages on their way home.

Oh, brethren and sisters, let us give and give quickly Let us raise an ample fund for those who make pathetic picture as, in the twilight of age, they sit i silent places and often in the shadows.

"Whoso hath the world's goods, and beholdeth h brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion fro him, how doth the love of God abide in him" (1 Joh 3: 17)?

Educational Notes From India

Jalalpor.—I can do no better than let Sister Shumak report to you in her own words, concerning the difficulti that confront her there: "I have been waiting to send few notes concerning the school-work here. It is sure the hardest proposition that I have yet struck. The opp sition is fierce from without, and now—read between t lines. Thus far we have been able to keep both the Da school and the Boarding-school going. The 'enemies the cause' are many, and they attack us from every sour and from every angle. Yet we have been having, as rule, twenty-four boys and girls from the outside at o day-school. They are as fine a lot of children as I ha ever seen. We are on our knees a great deal about the children. We long so much to have them 'kept for t Master's use!' The opposers are trying equally hard take them from us. I have been told, over and over aga that the school at this place has been torn to pieces eve time it was started. Feeling greatly concerned for t Lord's work, I can not see why the 'cohorts of Sata should be the victors in this fight each time. If it mea the giving of a life for the sake of the cause here, I a ready to lay mine down. The children are getting ou well, and are so happy, that it nearly breaks my heart wh the people try to 'scare them away.' I have gone throu that experience at Bulsar, but this is even harder. T enemy here is even more cunning and subtle. I have fai enough to believe that in the end God will win out.

"The same thing is true of our Girls' Boarding-scho We have had twenty-two of the very nicest children. O of them—a little Dubla girl—came to us as an orpha Another little Dubla girl—whose mother was so poor a weak she could scarcely be on her feet, and whom we se to the 'Widows' Home'—we took in from the street, to speak. Then, our non-Christian mali (gardener), w is a Dubla, brought us three little Dubla girls fr Vigilpore—his village—but one of these we had to se away. She was afflicted with a 'loathsome disease.' Th the father, who brought us his little girl—and she was sm a sweet child—had to come and steal her away. His w made it so hard for him because he allowed her child come to us. We felt sorry for both father and child. S was so happy here, and he did want her to stay so muc but the little child had to go. The rest of the girls we the Koli girls from Machad. These were really stol from us. You know the building is so near the road. T 'women' from Machad, who do not believe in the educ tion of the girls, did their part in getting them away fr us in a quiet manner. The really sad thing about it that the 'mothers-in-law' of these girls 'rose up in arm and made it so 'hot' for the parents of these girls th they were forced to keep them at home after the mother in-law once stole them away, and hid them when came for them. The fathers are quite eager to have the girls in our school for training. It is not their fault. Th did their part, as far as they could go. Here, again, it the women, and the 'awful curse of child marriage.' W would have no trouble to keep the girls. They were

Praiseworthy Action

At their session of Sept. 17, the Convention of the United Mine Workers of America denounced militarism and compulsory military service. According to the press reports, the delegates of that large gathering are not in favor of any plan which, by its ever-ready preparedness for hostility, will be productive of war rather than peace. Strange as it may seem, there is a greater effort being made in the United States, to commit us to a policy of militarism, than in any other country. A large and powerful organization is trying to commit this Government to a militaristic policy, not only infinitely greater than anything we have had in this country heretofore, but more extensive than that of any other nation. It is a situation that should be given serious consideration by every lover of peace.

Some Interesting Information

According to reliable statistics the State of Ohio, with its 6,152 country churches in 1,200 townships, has an average of 278 people per church. Less than 40 per cent of these 278 are church members, and the attendance is rarely half of the membership. Of 6,000 Ohio churches, 4,000 have less than 100 members; 3,000 less than 75; 2,000 less than 50. Four thousand churches, or two-thirds of the total, have no resident minister. Twenty-six per cent of the townships have no resident minister. Less than 1,000, or one-sixth, have the full time of a minister. More than 2,000 churches have one-quarter, or less, of a minister's services, while 3,000 churches command only one-third, or less, of the minister's time. Seven hundred churches have no regular minister. The figures given are startling, to say the least. If, in a like ratio, they apply more or less accurately to other States of the Union, the outlook is far from cheering.

A Test of Principle

Our readers have seen references to Sergeant Alvin C. York, who has been acclaimed "the war's greatest hero." Since his return to his mountain home at Pall Mall, Tenn., it has been his full resolve to give himself to evangelistic efforts among the mountaineers of his native State. Of late, however, his decision is being severely tested. He is almost overwhelmed by offers from lyceums and theatrical and moving picture shows, few of which mention less than $1,000 a week as their promised compensation. To a boy who has, up to his army experience, struggled for the barest necessities of life, these liberal propositions are positively dazing, and yet York's rugged nature revolts against them. "I want to do something for Christ and his cause," is his plea. But will his ideal stand the intense strain? The entire congregation to which he belongs is praying earnestly that his faith be equal to the test. Will he be able to hold out?

Industrial Accidents

In a recent address by Mr. C. W. Price, general manager of the National Safety Council, the following statement was made: "It would be necessary to dig a grave forty-eight miles long, to bury the men, women and children, killed by accident in the United States, during the nineteen months of our participation in the war with Germany." Mr. Price further said that more than 2,000,000 men, women and children were so seriously injured that they lost over four weeks of time, or were permanently maimed, and that the casualties from accidents each year are twice as great as were the casualties among the United States soldiers, sailors and marines during the war. It has been demonstrated that at least three-fourths of all accidental deaths and cases of serious injury might be prevented by greater watchfulness and care on the part of the employé, as well as by better safety appliances on the part of the employer.

The Deadly "Sleeping Sickness"

Previous reference has been made in these columns to the African "sleeping sickness," caused by the germs distributed by the "tsetse fly" of that continent. In some way a few of these germs must have been brought to the United States, for Mr. Theodore K. Long, of Chicago, a member of the Illinois Legislature, was stricken by sleeping sickness, and has just recovered from a six months' attack of the dread disease—one of the very few persons ever known to recover from it. During the protracted siege of the disease Mr. Long had but few wakeful periods, and even these were characterized by a series of weird hallucinations. His recovery was due only to the best medical treatment. Very similar to the threatening illness, above alluded to, is the destructive lethargy and drowsiness of sin. If the adversary of souls can succeed in having his victims yield to the sleep of utter neglect, he has gained his point: there is slight chance of recovery.

Protestant Churches to Have a Special Building

In order to meet the new responsibilities devolving upon the churches as a body, since the close of the war, a movement is on foot to build a large structure in New York City, as a general headquarters of Protestant agencies of national scope. The estimated cost of the large edifice is placed at $3,000,000. The Federal Council of Churches, representing about thirty Protestant bodies, has named Fred B. Smith as chairman of a committee in charge of the undertaking. The new "Inter-Church World Movement," now having quarters in three separate office buildings, will be located in the new structure, when finished. If the extensive plans of the "Inter-Church Movement" can be carried out as now outlined, it will be a work of stupendous magnitude, and the proposed structure will be none too large for its varied needs.

Turks Renewing Attacks on Armenians

Under date of Sept. 16 a cablegram relates that the Turks have resumed their attacks upon the Armenians, and that the very existence of the nation is in danger. Mustapha Kemai, arrested last January by the British, and charged with the massacre of Greeks in Asia Minor, is at the head of the Turkish forces. At latest reports they were endeavoring to surround the Armenian republic. Armenian troops have been obliged to retire from the Nakh-Itchevan Province after a hard struggle, being confronted by a munition shortage and an overwhelming preponderance of the enemy. The population of this province only recently returned to its homesteads, under the auspices of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East. Now they are at the mercy of the invaders, and occupation of this and other districts by the Turks is imminent.

Wonders of the Wireless Phone

Christiania radio reports say that the Government wireless station at Bergen, Norway, has been called up twice, recently, by a voice from a wireless station on the American coast. The voice transmission is said to have been perfectly clear. According to Mr. Cooper Hewitt, an electric expert of considerable note, talks with Europe by wireless phone will soon be perfectly feasible—for business purposes—just as readily as cable messages are sent and received at this time. Wonderful as these achievements are, there is not the least hesitancy, on the part of any one, to accept them as established facts. How strange, however, that many who readily give credence to the latest triumphs of science, fail to see, in all this, the Benign Providence of the Great Creator, and neglect to render unto him the honor and reverence to which he is justly entitled!

China's Remarkable Strike

Strikes, as a rule, are prompted by motives more or less selfish or mercenary. Not so the strike, originated and carried on by young Chinese students. Moved by patriotism, and determined to drive out, if possible, the grafters who have been in control of the new Chinese republic, the strikers—both boys and girls—make these demands: "(1) That the militarists who, as a party, were pro-Japanese and practically controlled the Government at Peking, be put out of office. (2) That Shantung be returned to China. (3) That the twenty-one demands made by Japan in 1915 be cancelled. (4) That there be freedom of speech and of the press." So effective was the moral pressure thus brought to bear upon the "powers that be" that within a week they had driven the militarist pro-Japanese party out of office, and had caused the Japanese Government to sit up and take notice that China is waking up and might become dangerous.

A Marvelous Transformation

India's most striking example of Christian evangelization—in the opinion of Sherwood Eddy, just returned from a preaching tour in that land of wonderful opportunity—is the work founded ten years ago by Bishop Azariah at Dornakal, in the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad, Central India, and still in that minister's charge. Before entering upon this work, Bishop Azariah had already given evidence of his ability as an organizer and as secretary of the National Missionary Society of India, whose supporters and workers from the outset have been wholly Indian Christians. Feeling impressed to enter upon active missionary labors himself, he chose Dornakal as his home and center of work—not because it was the most congenial field, but because it was the most hopeless and needy. The degradation of the people and the disorganization of community life were appalling, even in comparison with India's sadly depressed conditions at large. The people were sunk in the darkest ignorance, and debauchery was common. There was no security for either property or life. Into this abyss of sin and distress Bishop Azariah brought his well-trusted Gospel, and with what sort of results? Mr. Eddy visited the bishop at the end of his first decade. He found 3,000 native Christians, leading lives visibly transformed from vicious barbarism to enlightened respectability. The village congregations, surrounding the central town, are under the pastoral care of exemplary Christian men—natives of the neighborhood. Only a few years ago they were besotted drunkards, among whom no foreign missionary cared to work. Their congregational activities now are wholly self-supporting. The children of these late illiterates are receiving thorough primary education in schools which the parents themselves are maintaining. The economic condition of this remarkable Christian community is just as noteworthy as its improvement in morality and spirituality. As may be readily inferred, the influence of these earnest believers is a most salutary one—a light in a dark place.

Is the British Navy to Go?

Admiral Fisher, formerly at the head of the British navy, advocates "scrapping" the greater part of the British war fleet, on the theory that now, since the German navy has virtually been destroyed, there is no need for Great Britain to keep up a great and expensive fleet. This is the most significant and encouraging statement from a military source, so far issued since the close of the war. It has been steadily asserted that Great Britain intends to keep up a great navy in order that she may dominate the commerce of the world. This statement of Admiral Fisher would indicate that there is a growing sentiment in England in favor of a general disarmament both on land and sea.

A Chinese Philanthropist

Those who have been unkind enough to ascribe largely mercenary motives to Chinese converts, may well revise former conceptions, and be heartily ashamed of their uncalled-for aspersions. Referring to but one instance of many other munificent givers in China, we mention the case of Mr. Ma Ying Pin, manager of the large "Sincere Department Store" of Canton. This "cheerful giver" has donated $50,000 to provide homes for aged preachers and evangelists. Especially praiseworthy is his unselfish act in making his beneficence available to all denominations, though he is a Presbyterian. While there have been other gifts made by Chinese Christians, this is the largest donation thus far given, and surely it is worthily bestowed.

A Colored Man's Estimate of Himself

A young colored man, a professor at Talladega College and a graduate of Yale College, was asked to give, in 200 words, his reasons for being thankful. His reply is worthy of note: "I can not answer in 200 words, nor even in 2,000. And yet I might indicate the answer in a single word: I am thankful that I am one of the LOWLY. Being one of the lowly, I have the gracious opportunity of interested struggle, if I would rise even a little way. I am glad that I was not born on the top of the hill, but must climb. Thus I have at least a chance to learn the whole way of life, in that the whole way is before me. I thank God that I have an enlightened sympathy for the lowly, and a faith in the friends of the lowly. I am learning to look at the worst deeds of my fellow-men as sad mistakes, rather than monstrous meannesses—and in consequence I hate no man. Pity is more reasonable than hate."

When Prayer Was a Vital Factor

In connection with the recent observance of "Constitution Day" (Sept. 17), it is of decided interest to recall that it was only by recourse to fervent prayer, that the framers of the ever memorable Constitution did succeed in bringing that important document to a successful consummation. Here was a remarkable body of men, from the standpoint of physical vigor, mental acumen and moral courage. For nearly five weeks they had met day after day without deciding upon a single word or sentence. On the last morning of the fifth week, in the midst of a heated discussion concerning a National Constitution, they were about to give up in despair, when Benjamin Franklin arose and, addressing President George Washington, said: "The small progress we have made, after almost five weeks' close attendance and continual reasonings with each other, our different sentiments on almost every question . . . are, methinks, a melancholy proof of the imperfection of the human understanding. . . . In this situation of this assembly, groping as it were, in the dark to find political truth, and scarcely able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding? . . . I have lived a long time and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. . . . I therefore beg leave to move that hereafter prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessings on our deliberations, be offered in this assembly each morning, before we proceed to business." From that moment rapid progress was made in the framing and adoption of the Constitution, which Gladstone said "is the greatest piece of work ever struck off by the brain and purpose of man." And might not prayer, in these days of national perplexity, still prove to be the one really essential factor in the solution of vital problems?

Bro. C. S. Ikenberry, Vice-Chairman of the General Sunday School Board, has been granted a leave of absence by Daleville College, for the purpose of taking graduate work in Boston University. His address is 93 Josephine Avenue, West Somerville, Mass.

Bro. Homer E. Blough and wife closed their pastoral work at Wichita, Kans., August 1. They are now in the midst of an enthusiastic revival at Shannon, Ill. Following this they will enter Bethany Bible School for further preparation. Their address will be 3452 Van Buren Street, Chicago.

Bro. J. A. Vancil, formerly of Continental, Ohio, has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Deer Park church, Minn., and is to assume charge Oct. 1. Bro. W. E. Breon and wife are now in pastoral charge of the Oklahoma City church, and all correspondence concerning the work at that place should be addressed to them. Bro. J. H. Morris and wife, who have so earnestly cared for the work for some time, have returned to Chicago and should be addressed at 3435 West Van Buren Street.

The Mission Rooms report that landing permits have now been secured for all but nine of the India missionary party of twenty. Some of the applications were returned for more complete information, and further delay is unavoidable. The time of sailing can not be given at this time. Concerning the landing of the China missionaries at Tien Tsin, mentioned last week, it is to be understood, of course, that while the message came from Bro. Light, the "safe arrival" included the entire party of seven members.

At their session of Sept. 17, the Convention of the United Mine Workers of America denounced militarism and compulsory military service. According to the press reports, the delegates of that large gathering are not in favor of any plan which, by its ever-ready preparedness for hostility, will be productive of war rather than peace. Strange as it may seem, there is a greater effort being made in the United States, to commit us to a policy of militarism, than in any other country. A large and powerful organization is trying to commit this Government to a militaristic policy, not only infinitely greater than anything we have had in this country heretofore, but more extensive than that of any other nation. It is a situation that should be given serious consideration by every lover of peace.

Some Interesting Information

According to reliable statistics the State of Ohio, with its 6,152 country churches in 1,200 townships, has an average of 278 people per church. Less than 40 per cent of these 278 are church members, and the attendance is rarely half of the membership. Of 6,000 Ohio churches, 4,000 have less than 100 members; 3,000 less than 75; 2,000 less than 50. Four thousand churches, or two-thirds of the total, have no resident minister. Twenty-six per cent of the townships have no resident minister. Less than 1,000, or one-sixth, have the full time of a minister. More than 2,000 churches have one-quarter, or less, of a minister's services, while 3,000 churches command only one-third, or less, of the minister's time. Seven hundred churches have no regular minister. The figures given are startling, to say the least. If, in a like ratio, they apply more or less accurately to other States of the Union, the outlook is far from cheering.

A Test of Principle

Our readers have seen references to Sergeant Alvin C. York, who has been acclaimed "the war's greatest hero." Since his return to his mountain home at Pall Mall, Tenn., it has been his full resolve to give himself to evangelistic efforts among the mountaineers of his native State. Of late, however, his decision is being severely tested. He is almost overwhelmed by offers from lyceums and theatrical and moving picture shows, few of which mention less than $1,000 a week as their promised compensation. To a boy who has, up to his army experience, struggled for the barest necessities of life, these liberal propositions are positively dazing, and yet York's rugged nature revolts against them. "I want to do something for Christ and his cause," is his plea. But will his ideal stand the intense strain? The entire congregation to which he belongs is praying earnestly that his faith be equal to the test. Will he be able to hold out?

Industrial Accidents

In a recent address by Mr. C. W. Price, general manager of the National Safety Council, the following statement was made: "It would be necessary to dig a grave forty-eight miles long, to bury the men, women and children, killed by accident in the United States, during the nineteen months of our participation in the war with Germany." Mr. Price further said that more than 2,000,000 men, women and children were so seriously injured that they lost over four weeks of time, or were permanently maimed, and that the casualties from accidents each year are twice as great as were the casualties among the United States soldiers, sailors and marines during the war. It has been demonstrated that at least three-fourths of all accidental deaths and cases of serious injury might be prevented by greater watchfulness and care on the part of the employé, as well as by better safety appliances on the part of the employer.

The Deadly "Sleeping Sickness"

Previous reference has been made in these columns to the African "sleeping sickness," caused by the germs distributed by the "tsetse fly" of that continent. In some way a few of these germs must have been brought to the United States, for Mr. Theodore K. Long, of Chi-

Protestant Churches to Have a Special Building

In order to meet the new responsibilities devolving upon the churches as a body, since the close of the war a movement is on foot to build a large structure in New York City, as a general headquarters of Protestant agencies of national scope. The estimated cost of the large edifice is placed at $3,000,000. The Federal Council of Churches, representing about thirty Protestant bodies has named Fred B. Smith as chairman of a committee in charge of the undertaking. The new "Inter-Church World Movement," now having quarters in three separate office buildings, will be located in the new structure when finished. If the extensive plans of the "Inter-Church Movement" can be carried out as now outlined it will be a work of stupendous magnitude, and the proposed structure will be none too large for its varied needs.

Turks Renewing Attacks on Armenians

Under date of Sept. 16 a cablegram relates that the Turks have resumed their attacks upon the Armenians and that the very existence of the nation is in danger. Mustapha Kemal, arrested last January by the British and charged with the massacre of Greeks in Asia Minor is at the head of the Turkish forces. At latest reports they were endeavoring to surround the Armenian republic. Armenian troops have been obliged to retire from the Nakh-Itchevan Province after a hard struggle, being confronted by a munition shortage and an overwhelming preponderance of the enemy. The population of this province only recently returned to its homesteads, under the auspices of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East. Now they are at the mercy of the invaders and occupation of this and other districts by the Turks is imminent.

Wonders of the Wireless Phone

Christiania radio reports say that the Government wireless station at Bergen, Norway, has been called up twice recently, by a voice from a wireless station on the American coast. The voice transmission is said to have been perfectly clear. According to Mr. Cooper Hewitt, an electric expert of considerable note, talks with Europe by wireless phone will soon be perfectly feasible—for business purposes—just as readily as cable messages are sent and received at this time. Wonderful as these achievements are, there is not the least hesitancy, on the part of any one, to accept them as established facts. How strange, however, that many who readily give credence to the latest triumphs of science, fail to see, in all this, the Benign Providence of the Great Creator, and neglect to render unto him the honor and reverence to which he is justly entitled!

China's Remarkable Strike

Strikes, as a rule, are prompted by motives more or less selfish or mercenary. Not so the strike, originated and carried on by young Chinese students. Moved by patriotism, and determined to drive out, if possible, the grafters who have been in control of the new Chinese republic the strikers—both boys and girls—make these demands: "(1) That the militarists who, as a party, were pro-Japanese and practically controlled the Government at Peking, be put out of office. (2) That Shantung be returned to China. (3) That the twenty-one demands made by Japan in 1915 be cancelled. (4) That there be freedom of speech and of the press." So effective was the moral pressure thus brought to bear upon the "powers that be" that within a week they had driven the militarist pro-Japanese party out of office, and had caused the Japanese Government to sit up and take notice that China is waking up and might become dangerous.

A Marvelous Transformation

India's most striking example of Christian evangelization—in the opinion of Sherwood Eddy, just returned from a preaching tour in that land of wonderful opportunity—is the work founded ten years ago by Bishop Azariah at Dornakal, in the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad, Central India, and still in that minister's charge. Before entering upon this work, Bishop Azariah had already given evidence of his ability as an organizer and as secretary of the National Missionary Society of India, whose supporters and workers from the outset have been wholly Indian Christians. Feeling impressed to enter upon active missionary labors himself, he chose Dornakal as his home and center of work—not because it was in size during the last six months. There are now eighty-five boys in the Boarding-school. Eleven of these are from Jalalpor. There are several boys in this Boarding-school from nearly every station of the mission. In the day-school there are one hundred and forty, of whom fifteen are girls from the community. Because of the large increase, a third industry—tailoring—is to be started soon, besides the gardening and carpentry.

"I liked that sermon," said Lyle Thomson. He did not say any more, but he brought two boys with him to church on the next Sunday. Others must have liked it too, for there was a large attendance on the next Sunday. The minister said nothing about being discouraged, for he, too, had learned to build in the wilderness.

Wankel.—In the Wankel Boarding-school there are twenty-two boys from the Bulsar and the Chikhli Division; ten boys and one girl from Jalalpor; nine boys and one girl from villages near the Boarding-school. This makes a total of forty-three, but before an abnormal condition arose, there were fifty-five in this Boarding-school. Mention was made of four baptisms here, in a previous report. Because of these baptisms, the "enemy" made many of the boys believe they all would be baptized if they stayed, hence twenty of them ran away. Some of them have returned, and in time most of them, if not all, will come back. The school is having a very good influence in breaking down caste prejudice and in getting the people ready, so that increasing numbers of them will turn to Christianity.

Vyara.—There has been some growth here in the Boarding-school, but not a large increase. In the Girls' Boarding-school there are now fifty-six, an increase of twelve. In the Boys' Boarding-school there are ninety, counting night pupils.

Dahanu.—The village schools here have suffered from the influenza and hard times. At present there are six cases. On account of deaths, and lack of good management, upon the part of the master in charge, the boys in the Boarding-school have decreased in number. At present there are but nine. In the new Girls' Boarding-school, for which a new building has been completed, there are twelve girls, all of whom are small. Sister Ella Ebbert is in charge.

Vada.—In the Boarding-school at Vada there are thirteen girls—an increase of four since January. This increase came from the surrounding villages. Owing to four deaths, there has been no increase among the boys. At present there are fifteen, all but two of whom are from outside of Vada County. There are six village schools.

Vali.—The largest Boarding-school of the mission is at this place. The boys come from the Rajpipla and Anklesvar districts. There are one hundred and thirty in the Boarding-school, of whom fifty-seven are from Anklesvar. Five new rooms have recently been added, to accommodate these boys. Somabhai, who formerly had charge of the Boys' Boarding-school at Anklesvar, before it was moved to Vali, is Bible teacher for all the classes in the Vali school. There are nine village schools in the Rajpipla State.

Rudha.—It is the plan of the District Mission Board to close the little Boarding-school at this place after a time, but at present there are eight boys there. Besides this there are two village schools in charge of the Mission Board.

Anklesvar.—Here is the largest Girls' Boarding-school in the mission. Most of the girls come from the Bulsar, Vali and Anklesvar districts. A new building, one hundred and fifteen feet long and thirty-two feet wide, has just been completed, which will relieve the crowded state of the one hundred and twelve girls now in the Boarding-school. There is an enrollment of one hundred and twenty in the day-school. Several weeks ago the Educational Inspector, a Hindu, was here and expressed himself as being much pleased with the quiet and orderly conduct of the school, and with the girls for their clean and neat appearance. He says he usually can tell whether a school is in session some time before he reaches it, because the pupils study out loud, but he failed to hear that noise when he came here, and at first supposed the school was not in session. Later word came that he advised the head-mistress of the Anklesvar Girls' School to visit the school on the mission compound, and to adopt "its methods."

In June there were three deaths among the girls—probably due to something they had eaten, sent in from the outside. But for fear it might be cholera, the school was closed for two weeks. Yesterday, a girl on the compound, who was intending to enter school soon, died of cholera, and at present there are one or two other cases. Then, too, quite a number of the Boarding-school girls are sick with fever. We trust they may be kept free from cholera. It makes busy days, indeed, for Sister Miller, and also for those who are helping her.

Now we have four hundred and eight boys and two hundred and twenty-two girls in our Boarding-schools. During the past six months the number of boys has increased sixty-eight, and the number of girls, eighty-two—a total of one hundred and fifty. The increase during the past six months has been equal to that of the year 1918, making a total of three hundred for the past eighteen months. During the year 1918, the increase of boys was one hundred and that of girls only fifty. The encouraging feature of the increase, during the past six months is, that while the gain of the boys has been sixty-eight, that of the girls has been eighty-two—a hopeful sign for the future. Eighteen months ago we had only ninety girls in our Boarding-schools; now two hundred and twenty-two—the attendance has more than doubled in that time.

ECHOES FROM SIDNEY, OHIO, AUTO DAY

Our Auto Day, Sept. 7, was the most remarkable of all other such days. First, it was a beautiful day, and we had advertised the occasion thoroughly. Second, the citizens of Sidney and the surrounding towns are becoming enthused more and more each year about the occasion. Our city ministers gave it their recognition by announcement in their churches the previous Sunday. They recalled their services on the same evening and gave us their presence, with many of their people. Third, the subjects announced for the afternoon and evening, by Dr. Kurtz, were wholly appropriate to events of the present day.

At our Sunday-school, at 9:30, we had an attendance of 400. Because of the unavoidable absence of Bro. Van B. Wright and wife, their part was assigned to Bro. John R. Snyder, of Bellefontaine, who gave the exposition of the Sunday-school lesson. His thought and presentation of the subject were highly appreciated by all. Sister Sadie Stutzman, of North Manchester, Ind., was called to direct the song service during the day, in the absence of Sister Nora Shively-Wright. Our citizens and our own people were delighted with her efforts. She also rendered several solos. The male quartet, known as the "Cousers," from Dayton, Ohio, formerly from the Southern part of our State, rendered several most charming selections.

Dr. Kurtz was at his best on all three occasions. At 10:30 A. M. the Brethren church was overcrowded. His theme, "The Symphony of Life," was a masterpiece. This was classed as the best sermon of its nature the people had ever heard. The lectures of the afternoon and evening, by Dr. Kurtz, were given at the high-school auditorium, so that all could be accommodated. These were attended by some of our leading merchants, physicians, and other business men. It was universally regretted by these men that not every citizen of Sidney heard the messages. "The Present World Crisis and Christianity" was admitted, in a very general way, as being the best ever given in Sidney. Our citizens are urging that we invite Dr. Kurtz back next year. We are safe in saying that two-thirds of all the churches of Southern Ohio were represented by one auto load and some by several. A few autos were driven nearly one hundred miles—some from Indiana and Eastern Ohio.

These were great feast days for our members and others in this city. Better than by any other method it has made the city cognizant of the Church of the Brethren. We have succeeded in having Bro. Ezra Flory, of Bethany Bible School, as one of the instructors at the Shelby County Sunday-school Convention, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. The Sidney church is becoming a community church.

THE VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

"Neither the first to embrace the new, nor the last to drop the old," is a policy which should receive much attention in the Church of the Brethren and especially so in these days of such unusual opportunity for Christian growth and service. The basic principles of Christianity never change, because righteousness is of God and is eternal, but the methods of application, by which these principles are incorporated into the daily relations of a practical life, must and should change just as they do in agriculture or in education.

One of the very recent developments in the line of aggressive Christian work is the Vacation Bible School. This type of work has been tried out at length by some of our sister denominations and with such splendid results as to challenge many of our own workers. As a direct result of this challenge several of these schools have been conducted in some of our own churches this summer. Because of the many inquiries, which are being made as to these schools, and on account of the rare opportunity which they seem to present to our own church, it has been thought wise to present a few facts concerning these schools.

This article attempts to present the work as carried on in the First District of Virginia, and while the work done by this District was pioneer work in our Brotherhood, we present our report with no spirit of egotism or elation, but with a prayerful desire that our feeble attempt may encourage others to larger activities in this new and promising field of service.

Three of these Vacation Bible Schools have been conducted in our District—one in Roanoke City, one in the town of Selma and one at Troutville. By this plan we were able to get a fair idea of the possibilities of the work both in the city and in the country. The first school was opened at Roanoke July 1, and carried on for four weeks. The second school was opened at Troutville July 14 and continued for two and a half weeks; the school at Selma opened August 4 and continued for four weeks.

There are several types of these Vacation Bible Schools, and the type conducted in our District carried out the following program: The schools were conducted for five days in each week. Each daily program began at 9 o'clock and closed at 12 o'clock. The schools were divided into two departments—the Primary class and the Juniors. The first division included all children from four years to seven, and the Juniors from eight to fourteen. The entire school met together for the first hour, and the time was used in singing, prayer, Bible stories, memory work, health talks, character-forming talks and such other stories and illustrations as would tend to create a wholesome, spiritual atmosphere and give each child a new appreciation of the place, purpose and power of the Bible, and thus to give them a new and more attractive conception of Christianity.

At the close of this first hour the school was divided into classes, with special helpers in charge of each class, and for an hour these classes engaged in making mats, picture frames, napkin rings, hammocks, etc., from raffia, and various articles from thread. The Primary classes modeled clay, played games, sang songs, cut and pasted pictures, flowers, etc., and engaged in various other activities which would further simplify and clinch the stories and talks. For instance, after the story of Moses had been told in the story hour, the beginners made a tiny Moses and a little ark and rehearsed the story in connection with the work.

From the manual work the children were brought together again for further songs, readings and a closing prayer, and the work for the day was over. By this program the children would all be back at home by noon and could have a long afternoon in which to assist with the home work.

Some of the advantages of such a school might be briefly stated. First of all it presents an unusual opportunity for Bible teaching, and more work can be done in a few days by this plan than could be accomplished in many weeks in the Sunday-school class.

Another peculiar advantage is the definite training of future workers for the church. In a school of this type at least one or two experienced workers are necessary and the others are selected from the community in which the school is conducted. Thus from ten to fifteen young people, from fifteen years of age and up, are brought into definite service and are prepared for larger duties in the church.

Still another advantage of such a school is the unusual opportunity for creating and strengthening the spiritual standards of the children at an age when their minds are most susceptible to training.

Then this type of school is a great blessing from a social standpoint. The close touch, made possible by the story hour and the class work, and the common in-sea, its cherubim with wings of gold. He built an ivory palace and made the roads of Jerusalem one of the wonders of his age. But greater than all these, was the project which Solomon conceived after he had been reigning twenty years—' He built Tadmor in the wilderness.'

"The builders and carpenters, the architects and running workmen were set to work. A whole army was told to get ready for the task of building a city in the wilderness of Gilead between the River Euphrates and the city of Damascus. The army of workmen were assembled. Then began the weary march over the hot, dry wilderness way to the hills, where they were to go to work. The very men who had labored faithfully at Mount Moriah, when they set up that mysterious temple, were now called upon to undertake a toilsome journey and then to undertake a task which called for the endurance and patience which is always linked with some great purpose. Do you suppose that any of them complained about being sent away from Jerusalem, where they had their friends and good times? Were any of them ready to rebel and mutiny against their hard fate as they daily drew nearer to the place where the king had planned to build the city of Tadmor?

"And what a location they found! The wilderness. Only a terrible, barren waste, stretching away in the dim distance. The architects looked over the chalky limestone range of hills, on which buildings of all kinds must be erected. Olive and palm trees must be planted, and vegetation of all kinds must be grown there, far away from the highways of civilization. In the midst of a wilderness, Tadmor must be built.

"But when Tadmor was completed and inhabited, it seemed like a miracle to the caravans hastening towards Tadmor, where they could stop long enough to rest and lay in a new store of provisions. Only a great king like Solomon could cause to arise a wonder city of temples and palaces and palm trees like Tadmor.

"'There are pioneer souls, that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran—
But let me live by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.'"

Lyle Thomson was listening now, wondering what the minister was going to make out of all this. Some of the girls who usually paid but little heed to what was being said, were hearing the story of Tadmor and thinking that it had but little meaning for them. Then the minister continued:

"I wish you boys and girls could see that the world is all gates, all opportunities, and that you are the king who can use them. Power and splendor were lying everywhere, even in the wilderness, for King Solomon. These things await the eye that can see, the ear that can hear, the hand that can accomplish. From the same material one man erects a hut and another finds in it the stuff out of which to build a palace. There were many kings on the throne of Jerusalem during the years of her glory, but only Solomon was equal to the wonderful project of building Tadmor in the wilderness.

"In our own hearts there are wilderness tracts—as barren, as deadly, as apparently hopeless as the ground whereon King Solomon set up his wonder city, Tadmor. The Spirit of the Lord can make this wilderness to rejoice and blossom as the rose. What can you do to reclaim the wastes of your mind? The weeds and thistles of evil thoughts and stubborn wills and ugly embers flourish in this wilderness, and only the grace of our Lord is powerful enough to transform it. Will you not attempt to build a city in this wilderness, whose spires shall point heavenward?

"We can build, if we will, a city in the heart, made vironment, to make of our town a place where our children are safe from the worst temptations. You need the fellowship of a church where the pulse of Christian life beats strongly, where we have 'joy unspeakable' in helping one another."

"I liked that sermon," said Lyle Thomson. He did not say any more, but he brought two boys with him to church on the next Sunday. Others must have liked it too, for there was a large attendance on the next Sunday. The minister said nothing about being discouraged, for he, too, had learned to build in the wilderness.

Our Harvest Meeting was held August 24. Bro. J. H. Sidemiller preached the sermon, which was helpful to all. A fund of $79.50 was raised.—Ruth B. Shrnyer, New Carlisle, Ohio, Sept. 13.

Pleasant Hill church met in council Sept. 4, with Bro. C. L. Flory as moderator. Two letters were received. A plan for practical work by the Men's Bible Class will provide a better home for a needy sister and children. We are planning to have a Musical Institute this autumn, conducted by Sister Stahly, of North Manchester. A Bible Institute of ten days will be conducted later by Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, of Chicago. An evangelist has been secured for a revival in 1920. An invitation will be extended for the Midsummer Assembly of Southern Ohio for next year. A communion will be held Nov. 4, at 6 P. M., at the church in Pleasant Hill. Bro. John A. Robinson was chosen elder. Recently a speaker from the Anti-Saloon League was with us and a liberal offering was given for temperance work. Several other ministers preached for us while our pastor was assisting in a revival at the Bear Creek church. The Junior Christian Workers' Society is doing good work under the leadership of Sister Robinson.—Mary West, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, Sept. 14.

IN MEMORY OF SISTER CASSIE MARTIN

A pall of deep sorrow has fallen over the Bloom church and community by reason of the death of Sister Cassie Martin. No bereavement has so keenly touched the hearts of the entire church, and no loss from the working force has been greater. Sister Martin and her husband, Bro. Emry Martin, were charter members of the Bloom church and have been among its staunchest supporters in active work, hopeful enthusiasm and financial aid. They were called to the deacon's office March 5, 1910, and have served the church faithfully ever since.

Sister Cassie Martin

Virginia Catherine, only daughter of Elder and Sister G. W. Weddle, was born in Morris County, Kansas, July 10, 1885, and died August 26, 1919, aged thirty-four years, one month and sixteen days. She was baptized when eleven years old. In young womanhood she attended McPherson College and later moved with the family to Lorned, Kans., where she was married to Bro. Emry Martin. To this union one son was born, who died in infancy.

They have resided in this community eleven years and by their intelligent interest and active participation in the affairs of both the church and community have been a vital factor in the welfare of a large number of people. Sister Martin's health was not good for many years and her suffering was often extreme, yet she was ever patient and hopeful and found many opportunities to help others. She seemed to possess the "Dorcas" spirit. For education and inspiration for her work, especially among the children, she often attended the Annual and District Conferences and Bible Institutes. At the time of her death she was president of the Junior Band, teacher of the Sunshine (Junior) Sunday-school Class, church correspondent, and when health would permit, was quite efficient in song leadership. Her ability in preparing children's programs was unusual. We confidently believe that through her influence lives will be dedicated to the forward work of the Kingdom.

The funeral was conducted at the church by the pastor. Interment was made in the cemetery at their former home, near Larned, Kans.

How the Church Can Save Itself

We have heard a good deal lately about what the new age will demand of the church—what it will have to do in order to survive. Some indeed have intimated that the day of opportunity for the church has already passed. "There is probably nothing now the church can do to save itself."

If only the church would take that hint to heart! And forget about trying to save itself, in its eagerness to become a saving factor in this world of humankind!

That would mean heavy demands upon it, to be sure. But these will be the more easily understood and met, the sooner the church realizes that its business is not to save itself, but to be God's instrument in saving men and women.

Let that be the object of concern! "Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's shall save it." The church can save its life in the same way, and in no other.

The Christian and the Moral Man

They are honest and upright citizens, both of them. They pay their debts. That is, they pay all they ever promised to pay. They keep their word. And they are clean, too, both in outward life and inward thought. They have much in common. And yet there is a difference.

The Christian knows what love is. The moral man does not. Oh, he has heard of it and has played around a little on the surface of it. But the Christian has gone down into its depths.

The Christian knows what love is, first, because he realizes that he is himself the object of the amazing love of God. He knows how it feels to be loved as only God can love a sin-stained life. And he knows what love is, in the second place, because, having tasted of God's searching, seeking, saving love for him, he has felt the same passion surging up through his own soul and reaching out to all his fellows.

The Christian knows what love is because his is the kind that can not be quieted until he has done everything in his power to bring everybody else the good things God has given him.

There are other differences, but they are incidental. We are speaking here of the difference.

A Few Further Observations on That Challenge

We called it a new challenge but, like the new commandment which Jesus gave to his disciples and which the beloved disciple himself said later was new and yet was not, this challenge is new only in the compelling force with which it is being driven in upon us. The conditions of the present day are making it sound out with a new loudness. Then, possibly, our hearing is improving. Perhaps the repeated jab of facts at our consciences is actually increasing somewhat the sensitiveness of our spiritual auditory nerve. Maybe the Holy Spirit has been taking of the things which Jesus said, and showing them unto us. Maybe the truth about Christian living—what it really means—is penetrating the Christian consciousness.

Anyway, the challenge is upon us. It is calling for a more convincing demonstration of the claim that life is truly saved by losing it in service for one's neighbor. It wants to see the golden rule tried out, not merely in hidden corners here and there, but on a scale big enough to make the people see it. "Where is your light?" it asks. "Why isn't it on a candlestick so as to give light to all that are in the house? You say the gospel of brotherliness will solve the problems of the world. Show us a fair-sized sample of it. Show us a body of Christians who believe that love is the greatest thing in the world."

What shall we do about this? Why, show them, of course. What else can Christians do? Where there is only one right thing to be done, why waste time in parley?

We can not do it at once. But we can begin to do it at once. We can not defy the law of the blade, the ear and then the corn. The Kingdom is a growing institution. But we can give it a chance to grow. We can help in sowing the seed. And we can do a little fertilizing.

One of the most urgent needs along this line is a radical revision—in some respects only but radical in those respects—of customary standards of church loyalty. So long as Christian sentiment tolerates such things as were pointed out in preceding articles, little headway can be made. So long as a church member can live a life of self-gratification with no more concern for his fellow-men than is shown in such "benevolences" as do not interfere with his own self-centered plans—so long as one can do this and retain his standing in public esteem as a worthy Christian and a leading citizen—progress will be very slow. Let such be branded as Paul branded them, with the same stigma that attaches to the "gross" offender and the church will soon feel the throbbing impulses of a new state of spiritual health.

In fact, that classification is a little too high for them, if we adopt the standard of Jesus. He put them farther down the scale. For it was to just such "respectable," self-satisfied, self-seeking religionists that Jesus said: "The publicans and the harlots go into the Kingdom of God before you."

He was speaking of penitent publicans and harlots, of course. But the point he was making was that these social outcasts had a stronger affinity for real righteousness, such as John the Baptist had preached, than the deluded "better" classes. They were more easily reached and gave better promise of loyal citizens of the Kingdom.

But we escape from one "how" only by hiding behind another. How is this revision of standards of Christian fidelity to be effected? How is the sin against brotherliness to be branded, in the Christian thought of today, with the stigma that Jesus and Paul put upon it?

It's a matter of religious education. It's a matter of persistent and earnest study and teaching and practice until the whole truth breaks in upon the conscience of the church. There is no way of getting around the universal law of growth in spiritual discernment. Sincere seeking after deeper insight into the Word of God, reenforced by equally sincere practice of every bit of it as the Spirit of God lays it upon the heart—this is the only way.

What an opportunity lies before us! The world situation is a challenge to the church to apply the Gospel remedy. The world has emphatically denied the efficacy of that remedy. That is the logic of recent happenings. But the deeper logic of these happenings is a confession that the Gospel is the only remedy.

Isn't this the Christian contention? Shall we make it good? The world has had enough of hate and selfishness. Its subconscious heart is crying out for a trial of the doctrine, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." To the church is entrusted the championship of that doctrine.

Shall the world have a chance to prove its worth? It will, as soon as the church finds out what it means.

Passing Over of Bishop Steven P. Berkebile

Death is such a common occurrence, in this world of ours, that we hear of it every day many times, and numbers pass away with every breath we draw. We are living in a world of death, with the blessed opportunity of preparing for a world of eternal life. There is a part of one text, in the New Testament, that every one, who has arrived at the age of maturity, fully believes, even if he is a doubter: "And as it is appointed unto men once to die." This includes all men born into this world.

Bishop Steven P. Berkebile

While death is thus so common and such a constant occurrence, it does not always touch our hearts as when our own loved ones pass over the silent river. Then it comes closer to us, touches our inner beings and brings sorrow and sadness to our hearts, for the earthly ties of love, friendship and brotherhood are broken, never again to be united in this world. But there is great joy in the hope given to all who are from the heart living the Christ-life—the blessed hope of a home in heaven, where we shall enjoy eternal life and meet our loved ones when we leave this old world of death.

Not for many, many years has our heart been so deeply touched and made so sorrowful as it was by the coming of the sad news of the passing over of our dearly beloved brother and colaborer, Bishop Steven P. Berkebile. Ever since the return of our brother and his family from the mission field in India, where he lost his health, he has made a most gallant fight against the disease that came to him on the other side of the world, where he labored so earnestly, zealously and faithfully for the conversion of the heathen. His life was given and sacrificed to carry the Gospel to those who know not Christ. His death did not occur on the field, but the field is responsible for it. He came home that he might be healed and we all shared that hope

We have heard a good deal lately about what the new age will demand of the church—what it will have to do in order to survive. Some indeed have intimated that the day of opportunity for the church has already passed. "There is probably nothing now the church can do to save itself."

If only the church would take that hint to heart! And forget about trying to save itself, in its eagerness to become a saving factor in this world of humankind!

That would mean heavy demands upon it, to be sure. But these will be the more easily understood and met, the sooner the church realizes that its business is not to save itself, but to be God's instrument in saving men and women.

Let that be the object of concern! "Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's shall save it." The church can save its life in the same way, and in no other.

The Christian and the Moral Man

They are honest and upright citizens, both of them. They pay their debts. That is, they pay all they ever promised to pay. They keep their word. And they are clean, too, both in outward life and inward thought. They have much in common. And yet there is a difference.

The Christian knows what love is. The moral man does not. Oh, he has heard of it and has played around a little on the surface of it. But the Christian has gone down into its depths.

The Christian knows what love is, first, because he realizes that he is himself the object of the amazing love of God. He knows how it feels to be loved as test of either the best or the most loyal. This is not a parable but can be verified.

It was asked recently, "Does Conference have authority to govern the actions of members in their private lives?" It has, in all matters right and wrong before God. Thus far "all good members will obey its decisions." This touches principle; in matters of method, in reaching the principle, the interrelations of life duties make this, in many instances, impossible and unwarranted.

The Scriptures teach, by precept, "modesty" or simplicity in our dress. Thus far the Conference has a right and authority to ask and expect results, or to feel free, under the Gospel, to discipline. But to make supreme a method or means to this end, to the extent of eliminating some of our finest talent from voice and vote as conferees, may have some prestige in tradition, but is unwarranted in Divine Revelation.

The very same precept, teaching modesty and simplicity, also inveighs against "costly" array. Under the rule, testing qualifications, as we now have it, allowing everything else at par, a delegate dressed in the costliest silk, worsteds or serges "in order," is passed without a word, while a delegate in "hair-and-bone" jeans, though the very embodiment of plainness and simplicity, is, if "out of order," rejected. This enthrones or makes supreme the means to the end, for the end, and dethrones or subordinates the aim and end sought.

All arguments made—"government war uniform," "United States" vs. "Confederate States," "hyphenated German citizens" vs. "true citizens"—drop back upon this hypothesis, preconceived and unchangeably fixed in the "open mind," that "a good member will obey EVERY Conference decision," whether that requires him to abandon his profession for which he has spent years of preparation, or to close up his mission in a vicinity where such decision is foreign to the judgment and standards of the people, or to adopt the life of a recluse and throw to the wind every concession in becoming "all things to all men" to save SOME.

Now the proper question is, Can we improve the rule, prescribing the qualification of delegates, so as to get the BEST results in the deliberations of vital questions in our Conferences? It is true, and concrete verification can be given, that "many congregations are not being represented by the best and wisest counselors and most spiritual members, and when real conditions are better known it will not be thought 'a pity.'" The pity lies in the lack of a remedy.

Among the Mountains of North Carolina

BY J. H. MOORE

It is not often that one has to travel 800 miles to attend a District Meeting, but that is what fell to our lot the latter part of August. Since coming south this was the fourth meeting for North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida—the District to which we belong—and the first gathering for us to attend. This District is one of the largest in the Brotherhood, not merely a State District, but a District of States.

While on the trip, we decided on a short side-trip in order to take in Asheville, N. C., the famous summer resort for the South. The city is located on an elevated portion of an extensive, fertile section of a charming mountain valley, and stands fully 2,250 feet above sea level. It is literally surrounded by lofty mountain peaks, that give to the place a most lovely appearance. The mountain valleys abound in fine springs, sending forth an abundance of water both clear and cool. The city is in the very midst of the most magnificent mountain section of all the great South. Thither people by the thousand, from a dozen States, resort to spent the summer months. Here they find a summer atmosphere, hardly excelled for purity, refreshing and invigorating virtues.

Up and down this great mountain valley are other places of interest and attraction, and at several of these outlying points a few of the leading denominations have established summer encampments and resorts. They erect large tabernacles, numerous cottages, rooming houses and hotels, and often conduct summer conferences, Bible schools and training institutes. Each denomination, thus equipped, makes its point a religious center, from whence radiates an influence that reaches the people far into the mountain sections, and extends to a number of States in the lower altitudes. We look for the time when those of our own people, wishing to spend a few summer months in the higher altitudes, may be permitted to cluster around some common center of our own liking.

The District Meeting, to which we refer, was held in the Brummett Creek church, near Relief, N. C., about thirty-four miles south of Johnson City, Tenn. It, too, is in the very midst of the extensive mountain section of North Carolina. Here the country is practically all mountains, with numerous narrow valleys extending in nearly every direction. The house in which the meeting was held is located at a point where the valley is probably not more than 400 feet wide, and nearly one-half of this is taken up with the house, the dashing mountain stream and the public road.

Passing up this valley one finds a farm-house, and other necessary farm buildings, about every quarter of a mile, and some of the houses are well built and neatly finished. So far as we could see, each family had its spring, and some of the springs are a delight, making spring-houses both common and exceedingly convenient. The narrow valleys and the steep mountain sides are well farmed and it is surprising what crops are often produced. The people live, and they live well.

At some of the services there were probably 300 or more people, and nearly all of them walked, some of them coming from quite a distance. When we, for the first time, viewed the location of the churchhouse, at the foot of a mountain, we wondered where people enough could be found to fill it. But they were on hand all the same, and wore out a hundred per cent more sole leather than automobile tires to get there. We found the people, members and others, intelligent, industrious and the very embodiment of hospitality.

As for the churches, they may not have as many active working agencies as can be found in many other parts of the Brotherhood, but in their way, composed solely of mountain people, they display an activity and a zeal that is to be commended. Possibly, in a way, a more intimate association with the members of some of our active congregations would help them, and in other ways it might prove a detriment. Some of them may need more system in their church work, and their church activities, but the worldly influences that are creeping into some of our congregations would prove a decided detriment in their work among the mountain people. They have a widely-known reputation for the simplicity in life, and to deprive them of this reputation would be greatly to cripple them in their soul-saving and church-training work. Some new blood, as well as some new brains, of the right type ought to prove a blessing to this whole mountain territory.

Possibly the better way would be to educate and train the mountain boys and girls for the work that should be done, and put them to building up the cause in the various churches and communities. There is something commendable about the mountain genius that finds its way into the very flesh, bones and brains of the coming generation. Educate and train these people for the work that is to be done, and you have a force that can be secured in no other way. They understand the mountains, the valleys and the people.

For years much has been said by the public press about these mountain people, their habits, customs and manner of life, some of it to their credit, but most of it to their discredit. Too much emphasis has been placed on the lack of education, the need of culture, the prevalence of superstition and even crime, and not enough on present attainments and the marvelous possibilities of the people and their country. The leaders in society and religious circles are becoming fully alive, respecting the needs of the masses, and considering the condition in which the whole country was left by the Civil War, the progress made for the betterment of all classes is decidedly encouraging. In many places the nine-months school-year has been introduced, not alone in the cities and towns, but in the rural sections as well. It may be a surprise to some of the MESSENGER readers to learn that right in the mountain section, where the District Meeting was held, a nine-month, graded country school is being conducted. Things of this sort mean something. In some of the out-of-the-way places some conditions may exist that are not so creditable, but conditions equally discreditable, and often more so, may be found in every State in the Union.

The congregations composing the part of the District lying in North Carolina and South Carolina, seem to be in three groups, with nearly 100 miles between them. The meeting was held in the center group. In filling appointments, and keeping up the church work, some of the ministers must ride, generally on horseback, many miles each Sunday. A few evangelists are kept in the field much of the time, and where there is an opening they do not hesitate to tackle new points. In fact, nearly all of the congregations have been built up of native material, emigration cutting only a small figure in establishing churches. The members, considering their circumstances, are fairly liberal in their gifts for missions and other purposes. For the year, closing with the meeting, the donations for the three groups of churches did not miss the $1,200 mark very far. Were the churches as persistent and systematic in reporting their contributions as are some of the State Districts, their showing in the published reports would indicate a far higher grade in the scale of giving.

And now, to sum it all up, we know of no section of the Brotherhood where the outlook for evangelistic work and the building up of churches is more promising. We do not mean that class of preaching that simply sweeps people into the church by a magnetic influence, but a type of teaching that leads to a thorough conversion after the New Testament order. There are openings in the District for more than a dozen efficient and energetic, Gospel-preaching evangelists. Really, this whole mountain section is an open field for the Brethren, for their preachers, their literature and their wisely-directed educational influences. The proposition is one that should not be overlooked by the General Mission Board, and especially by the contemplated Home Secretary.

To us it would be a pleasure to work with the members in the mountain sections of our District. We found a people there who are hungry for the simple story of the Gospel, but for effectual coöperation we are too far apart—it being fully 600 miles between the southern group of churches and the group of churches here in Florida. To plant congregations in the unoccupied territory between will require years of hard, well-directed work. Probably the best solution of the problem would be to push our evangelistic work in the Sunny South, and establish enough properly-officered congregations to make the creation of a Florida District advisable. And while working and praying for this, we are also deeply interested in the enlarging of the borders of Zion in the portions of the District visited. In the course of our trip we saw and learned many things about which we would like to write, but our article has already grown to an unusual length.

Learning to Pray

BY ALBERT C. WIEAND

THREE things are necessary to learn to pray—a student, a teacher, and a textbook. The student is yourself. The textbook is the Biblical teaching about prayer. The teacher is the Lord. The Lord will teach us to pray.

Are you dissatisfied with your prayer-life? Do you long for a richer prayer experience, and a better record of answered prayer? Then consider how much or how little you have ever studied the subject. What other subjects of profound importance could one learn with so little study as you have given to this subject? Would not this subject merit a larger share of your time, study, and intensest yearning and desire? If so, then pray as the disciples did, to be taught to pray.

Who has been your teacher in prayer? Where did you learn to pray? Has it been haphazard from cir-reatest in the Kingdom." Could Jesus leave them ithout leaving the profoundest truth of all his teach-g? Could he get them to see the meaning of the agape, the Broken Bread, the Cup, unless they first arn this lesson—humility of service? No, he must ach this lesson at all costs. Telling is not enough. le must demonstrate. So he—the Lord and the Mas-r, showed them the meaning of life—the true way of fe—the way of humility and service—the way of the ross—a day later.

The modern world needs and demands reality. We elieve in democracy. Very few people understand ie term. Democracy rests entirely upon the Chris-an Gospel—the Gospel of brotherhood, which, in rn, rests upon humility and service.

I am sure there would never have been a war if the aiser and the other potentates had washed each oth-'s feet in the spirit of John 13. O, they might have one it in a heathen way, or in a legalistic way, and nen turned at once against each other in war. But ney could not perform this symbol in the spirit of ove, as a means of getting humility and service into eir lives, without growing into a family of brother-ood. Let the capitalists, the employers, and the em-loyés, get together in God's house, and in God's name, nd wash one another's feet, and there will be no more abor troubles. Let the rich and the poor, the high nd the low, the educated and the uneducated, serve ne another in humility and they will become true hristians.

Feet-washing is a pedagogical means to an end. he end is character—a spiritual quality. The means re to be used with the motive of getting a moral and piritual result. And experience shows that the result ill come.

"What doth the Lord require of thee but to do ustly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God" (Micah 6: 8)? The Scriptural aim of feet-vashing is to meet the social and moral needs of the ge. It is up-to-date. But it is out of date if per-ormed in a legalistic or heathen way. No cultus is vorth having that does not create in men the divine ife. "Religion is the life of God in the heart of man." Only that has religious value which gets moral and piritual results. We must have the spirit of humility nd service. Man needs an object lesson—he must be hown. Let us be humble, let us serve, and let us use he symbol so as to become more humble, and more erviceable to the needs of men and the cause of the Kingdom!

Properly-Qualified Delegates

BY J. HARMAN STOVER

All organized bodies, doing business through a delegation of its constituency, prescribe metes and bounds, within which are found qualifications, entitling delegates to seats in conference. This is fundamental. And in such a fraternal organized body as the Church of Jesus Christ, where before God there are no special classes, the only elements, differentiating qualified and unqualified members for delegates, are found in those qualities of deep spirituality and a judgment that indicate either wise counsel or a lack of these qualities. This is also fundamental.

Any other collateral regulation of habit or form, ever so commendable, which grows into the pivot of balancing the scale of qualified or unqualified delegates, making possible the seating of delegates not having the essential qualifications, and the rejecting of delegates possessing those essential qualities, is unwarranted and test of either the best or the most loyal. This is not a parable but can be verified.

It was asked recently, "Does Conference have authority to govern the actions of members in their private lives?" It has, in all matters right and wrong before God. Thus far "all good members will obey its decisions." This touches principle; in matters of method, in reaching the principle, the interrelations of life duties make this, in many instances, impossible and unwarranted.

The Scriptures teach, by precept, "modesty" or simplicity in our dress. Thus far the Conference has a right and authority to ask and expect results, or to feel free, under the Gospel, to discipline. But to make supreme a method or means to this end, to the extent of eliminating some of our finest talent from voice and vote as conferees, may have some prestige in tradition, but is unwarranted in Divine Revelation.

The very same precept, teaching modesty and simplicity, also inveighs against "costly" array. This enthrones or makes supreme the means to the end, for the end, and dethrones or subordinates the aim and end sought.

All arguments made—"government war uniform," "United States" vs. "Confederate States," "hyphenated German citizens" vs. "true citizens"—drop back upon this hypothesis, preconceived and unchangeably fixed in the "open mind," that "a good member will obey EVERY Conference decision," whether that requires him to abandon his profession for which he has spent years of preparation, or to close up his mission in a vicinity where such decision is foreign to the judgment and standards of the people, or to adopt the life of a recluse and throw to the wind every concession in becoming "all things to all men" to save SOME.

Now the proper question is, Can we improve the rule, prescribing the qualification of delegates, so as to get the BEST results in the deliberations of vital questions in our Conferences? It is true, and concrete verification can be given, that "many congregations are not being represented by the best and wisest counselors and most spiritual members, and when real conditions are better known it will not be thought 'a pity.'" The pity lies in the lack of a remedy.

The city is located on an elevated portion of an extensive, fertile section of a charming mountain valley, and stands fully 2,250 feet above sea level. It is literally surrounded by lofty mountain peaks, that give to the place a most lovely appearance. The mountain valleys abound in fine springs, sending forth an abundance of water both clear and cool. The ferences, Bible schools and training institutes. Each denomination, thus equipped, makes its point a religious center, from whence radiates an influence that reaches the people far into the mountain sections, and extends to a number of States in the lower altitudes. We look for the time when those of our own people, wishing to spend a few summer months in the higher altitudes, may be permitted to cluster around some common center of our own liking.

The District Meeting, to which we refer, was held in the Brummett Creek church, near Relief, N. C., about thirty-four miles south of Johnson City, Tenn. It, too, is in the very midst of the extensive mountain section of North Carolina. Here the country is practically all mountains, with numerous narrow valleys extending in nearly every direction. The house in which the meeting was held is located at a point where the valley is probably not more than 400 feet wide, and nearly one-half of this is taken up with the house, the dashing mountain stream and the public road.

Passing up this valley one finds a farm-house, and other necessary farm buildings, about every quarter of a mile, and some of the houses are well built and neatly finished. So far as we could see, each family had its spring, and some of the springs are a delight, making spring-houses both common and exceedingly convenient. The narrow valleys and the steep mountain sides are well farmed and it is surprising what crops are often produced. The people live, and they live well.

At some of the services there were probably 300 or more people, and nearly all of them walked, some of them coming from quite a distance. When we, for the first time, viewed the location of the churchhouse at the foot of a mountain, we wondered where people enough could be found to fill it. But they were on hand all the same, and wore out a hundred per cent more sole leather than automobile tires to get there. We found the people, members and others, intelligent, industrious and the very embodiment of hospitality.

As for the churches, they may not have as many active working agencies as can be found in many other parts of the Brotherhood, but in their way, composed solely of mountain people, they display an activity and a zeal that is to be commended. Possibly, in a way, a more intimate association with the members of some of our active congregations would help them, and in other ways it might prove a detriment. Some of them may need more system in their church work, and their church activities, but the worldly influences that are creeping into some of our congregations would prove a decided detriment in their work among the mountain people. They have a widely-known reputation for the simplicity in life, and to deprive them of this reputation would be greatly to cripple them in their soul-saving and church-training work. Some new blood, as well as some new brains, of the right type ought to prove a blessing to this whole mountain territory.

Possibly the better way would be to educate and train the mountain boys and girls for the work that should be done, and put them to building up the cause in the various churches and communities. There is something commendable about the mountain genius that finds its way into the very flesh, bones and brains of the coming generation. Educate and train these people for the work that is to be done, and you have a force that can be secured in no other way. They understand the mountains, the valleys and the people.

For years much has been said by the public press about these mountain people, their habits, customs and manner of life, some of it to their credit, but most of it to their discredit. Too much emphasis has been prosperity and plenty and peace should fill all the earth! Truly, it behooves those who are wise, to shine in the brightness of their salvation, in righteous judgment towards all men!

The world is not dark where the spirit of Jesus rules, and this spirit should light the whole earth through his ambassadors. "As thou hast sent me into the world so have I sent them into the world," Christ told his Father. When it is "not I that live, but Christ that liveth in me," as Paul said, then may we shed light to the multitude who are too gross to perceive the ascended Jesus, but who will turn eagerly to him when manifested through the flesh of his disciples. And when we are able to judge righteous judgment towards them, as Jesus does, the so-called wise ones of earth, as well as the outcast, and the so-called leaders toward righteousness, as well as the demon-possessed, will open the closets of their hearts to us in their hidden desires and receive, through our holy ministry, him who came, not to condemn, but to save the world. It is the love of Christ and his righteous judgment, and not the condemnation of man, that saves.

But if we would judge righteous judgment we have to begin at home. First, within self, and let Christ's love purge us. Then, within the family circle, until heaven's harmony rules the home. Then within the church, until the spirit of sympathy and helpfulness binds the body into oneness with us. Then in the business world, dealing blamelessly with all men. It is the light of Christ that is to shine in us. And, naturally, light shines from the center out—the brightest and most perfect, the nearer, by nature, to the object it touches.

Let the light but be true upon everything it touches, as it goes out from us, and like a reflecting diamond its gleam is increased with each touch until the darkest region of earth, and the blackest hearts of men may be penetrated in the "righteous judgment" with which Christ shall yet rule all the earth.

Especially are the elders of the church commissioned by Christ to "judge righteous judgment," that in joy they may give account to him, that they have ruled in his own tenderness, as he would have ruled in righteousness. These are they who are counted worthy of "double honor," because they have ruled well in "righteous judgment."

compelled to return home in 1910. He was pastor of the Logan church 1914-15, but his declining health did not permit him to render full service. He spent two years in the Ohio State Sanitarium for tuberculosis. At one time we all had high hopes that he would recover. He seemed better and he decided to take up again the pastorate in the Logan church, but was compelled to give it up on account of his failing health. Even though ill, he kept at work and was elder of the church when the Lord called him home. He leaves his beloved wife, one of our gifted writers, and three sons, John, eleven years old, James six, and Robert four. The bereaved, widowed mother and her three dear boys will have the heartfelt sympathy and the earnest, fervent prayers of our entire Brotherhood. May the Father above, the God of all consolation, richly and abundantly bless them and comfort them, and thus blessing them, make their lives, as the husband's and the father's has been—a blessing to the church and to humanity!

"Righteous Judgment"

BY JOHN E. MOHLER

"Judge not, that ye be not judged" (Matt. 7: 1). "Judge not according to appearance, but judge righteous judgment" (John 7: 24).

ONE of the most natural things of human life is to judge. We begin it while young, and as we grow in years we grow in the habit, and when we approach the end of this life we have not outgrown the tendency to judge others. We can not get away from judging, because it is a prerogative of God, and God lives in us. Jesus, knowing this, commands us, in the end, to "judge righteous judgment." But until we are able to judge righteously, we are commanded not to judge at all. We are restrained from following this inclination of the human until we can judge without calling judgment upon ourselves, much as an earthly parent will command a child not to use a knife until it can do so without hurting itself. Then the child is commanded to use the knife.

And what is righteous judgment? The kind that Jesus exercises. He knows the hopes, the struggles, the obstacles, the despair, the weakness, and the power concerning each, so that, if they fail, he sympathizes with them, and if they succeed he commends them. He does not judge by appearance, as imperfect man judges. And he commands man to rise into his perfection, to judge as he does. This is possible only by taking into consideration the inherent difficulties, the hereditary talents, weaknesses and temptations, and the invisible as well as visible hindrances of the person whose success we judge. Until we are able to do this, we shall withhold judgment, lest we bring judgment upon ourselves. And then, when we are able to judge righteously, we shall so appreciate the work of the ones whom we are watching that we weep in sympathy with them in their failures, and we join with them in thankfulness of heart to God for their successes, for this is the spirit of Jesus, in which we help and not injure the ones we judge.

It is a wonderful privilege to become a blessing to mankind through the exercise of righteous judgment. What soul, bowed with trouble and failure and self-condemnation for sins or shortcomings, until there was no hope of deliverance, but that turned to Jesus and felt the sweetness of his acceptance and the absence of his condemnation? And how great the surprise that he wiped all condemnation away, and how perfect his forgiveness! Why? Because he judged "righteous judgment." That is, he considered all things that humanity has to struggle against. He knows the inherent weakness of man, and his intense prosperity and plenty and peace should fill all the earth! Truly, it behooves those who are wise, to shine in the brightness of their salvation, in righteous judgment towards all men!

The world is not dark where the spirit of Jesus rules, and this spirit should light the whole earth through his ambassadors. "As thou hast sent me into the world so have I sent them into the world," Christ told his Father. When it is "not I that live, but Christ that liveth in me," as Paul said, then may we shed light to the multitude who are too gross to perceive the ascended Jesus, but who will turn eagerly to him when manifested through the flesh of his disciples. And when we are able to judge righteous judgment towards them, as Jesus does, the so-called wise ones of earth, as well as the outcast, and the so-called leaders toward righteousness, as well as the demon-possessed, will open the closets of their hearts to us in their hidden desires and receive, through our holy ministry, him who came, not to condemn, but to save the world. It is the love of Christ and his righteous judgment, and not the condemnation of man, that saves.

But if we would judge righteous judgment we have to begin at home. First, within self, and let Christ's love purge us. Then, within the family circle, until heaven's harmony rules the home. Then within the church, until the spirit of sympathy and helpfulness binds the body into oneness with us. Then in the business world, dealing blamelessly with all men. It is the light of Christ that is to shine in us. And, naturally, light shines from the center out—the brightest and most perfect, the nearer, by nature, to the object it touches.

Deardorff, alternate; Sister Deardorff, delegate to Sunday-school Meeting, with Sister Emma Follis, alternate. Several letters were granted. COLORADO

Bethel.—Bro. C. Fitz, of Denver, has been preaching for us twice Sunday, Oct. 5. Bro. J. B. Moore, our new pastor, will have charge of the services on that day. Coming at the close of the District Meeting, as it does, we hope as many will stay over as possible.—Mary E. Countryman, Atwood, Colo., Sept. 21.

IDAHO

Fayette Valley.—Our church is not dead, even though no report has been made for almost a year. Last Easter the church gave a cantata, which was enjoyed by a full house. The young people's class later in the summer, gave another cantata, entitled "Mary of Bethany." They gave this at the Weiser church in the morning, and at our home church in the evening. It was greatly appreciated by every one. We are enjoying the services of our new pastor, Bro. Chauncey Shamberger, who just returned from North Manchester, from which college he graduated last June. He is to be our pastor for one year at least. Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe began a series of meetings August 31, continuing for two weeks. Large crowds attended all three meetings. We feel that Bro. Jarboe has done a wonderful work here, and has helped the whole community to a higher life. Thirty-three were baptized, three reclaimed and four have not yet been baptized. Almost all of this number were young men and women.—Mrs. Marvel Bowers, Fruitland, Idaho, Sept. 16.

Moscow church met in council Sept. 20, with the writer presiding. One letter was received and one was granted. We decided to hold our love feast on Friday evening, Oct. 10. Arrangements were made for the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Convention to be held here the last of October.—Fred A. Flora, Moscow, Idaho, Sept. 2

Wise and Otherwise

BY VIOLA FRISER

THERE are times when the warning of our Friend is heeded, viz.: "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation." And because we love him we seek to obey not only that command but also the many others that he gave by way of and for the purpose of instructing us, for our own personal welfare and also that we may be able to glorify him who sent us into the world. That is wise.

But there are other times when some of us, at least, become heedless and seemingly forget the kindly advice of him who loves us so, until adversity comes and we are made to realize the truth—we have been doing our own will, instead of the will of our Father who is in heaven. That is not wise, but is otherwise, as we soon learn by the sorrow and disappointment we must bear, as the result.

Transforming Power

BY A. F. HECKER

WE all love power. The small boy likes to dominate and rule his playmates and many a fistic duel has been fought to decide in whom real power is vested. As boys become older, they love to show what they can do and wherein they are superior to their fellows. As men they become greedy for power, and make severe sacrifices, endeavoring to have themselves elected to positions of authority. When elected and backed by law, their wills and decisions must be obeyed.

Above all man-created and established power and authority there is a greater power—a transforming power that has its source with God. But power is useless without a means of transmission. There must be some medium. By the medium, we mean that through which it is transmitted. Having the source and the medium, we must then have the object upon which the power is going to work. With this combination, things are accomplished.

In a material way this may be illustrated by the waterfall, as the source, transmitting the power through the wheel and attached machinery, which is the medium; to the finished product that is being turned out, which is the object. Again, Nature through the mediums of sunshine, rain and soil, concentrates its power upon the little seed and we have it transformed into the beautiful flower. In fact, all finished products are the result of applied power transforming the crude into the finished article.

As we look back through church history, we find that progress has been made in just the same way. The rough, vulgar, uncouth man has been touched through some medium and we behold the zealous, earnest Christian. The disciples were gathered from among the fishermen. After associating with Jesus throughout his ministry, Peter still retains enough of the vulgar to deny his Master with an oath, when accused of being one of Christ's followers. Yet, when the power of God fully came upon Peter, his life was so transformed that he, too, was given power even to heal the sick and to raise the dead. Paul, too, was transformed from a blood-thirsty prosecutor to a soul-seeking disciple. The power of God first, through other mediums, worked upon both Peter and Paul, and changed them into earnest workers for the Kingdom, then they, in turn, were used as mediums through which the power reached out for others.

The Kingdom is being enlarged today in just the same manner. Before joining the church we were the objects of transforming power. When we have confessed and entered the church, we then become the mediums through which the church must be carried on to other peoples and generations. Having become a medium brings us face to face with our mission in life. We are all familiar with electricity and know that the wire is only the medium through which the real power passes. Yet, without the wire the power could not be sent hundreds of miles from its source, and used to operate the wheels of industry. Men's lives are not the sources of power, but only the wires through which spiritual power passes. The transforming power of God worked through the lives of the early church fathers and we see the results in a changed world. Our mission is to still further change the world by putting ourselves in touch with the unsaved, that through us the Divine power may convert them too into mediums through which transforming power may flow. Our duty then is to strive, learn, and seek to become more efficient mediums.

Education is a most potent aid. Our modern church fathers realize and appreciate this fact. They have founded our church schools. With these splendid opportunities within our grasp, let us then—being the Peters and Pauls of today—urge upon our youth the gaining of knowledge, that we may do our share in raising up the Peters and Pauls of tomorrow. When all are transformed, then shall we have his Kingdom here on earth.

Anklesvar News Notes

Bro. W. B. Stover, in July "Prakash Patra," relates a bit of interesting experience: "Last month, in the village of Amratpura, a man was baptized. He had heard of the Lord Jesus, but had not become a Christian. Both he and his wife were taken ill with influenza, and the wife died, whereupon he made a vow to the Lord that if he would let him get well, he would surely become a Christian. The missionary was to come to his village on Sunday. On Saturday night he had a dream that the missionary came and that he was baptized in the river near by, and his dream was fulfilled on that Lord's Day."

There has been much sickness here during the past few weeks. There were two deaths, both outside of the Boarding-school, from cholera, and one death in the school, the cause of which is not known; also, one baby died. One girl in the Boarding-school, whose parents live on the Mission Compound, went home on Saturday, to spend Sunday with her folks. Sunday morning it was found she had cholera. With prompt medical attention and careful nursing she is recovering nicely, for which we are very grateful. There are two cases of pneumonia, and there has been much fever among the girls, but the worst is over. Dr. Laura Cottrell, on one occasion, and Dr. Raymond Cottrell, at two different times, were able to come to our assistance. The Indian doctor, of Anklesvar, has been coming daily to care for the sick. Helen Stover is the only one of the mission family here that has been sick. Now she is quite well again.

Word comes from Vali that there have been eight deaths among the children of the Home during the past two weeks. Most of the victims had not fully recovered from measles and other ailments, prior to the recent sickness among them. A woman—one of Sister Himmelsbaugh's best helpers in the Home—died last week. Other sick ones are reported to be recovering. Dr. Cottrell was called to Vali last Saturday, owing to the sickness of little Raymond Arnold. Word came this morning that while he is some better, still he is not out of danger. Word comes from Dahanu that Sister Alley has been quite sick from fever. Sister Ross has been able to return to Bulsar, as little Evelyn has recovered from diphtheria, which began to develop at the time of the recent Committee Meeting.

Sister B. Mary Royer returned to Dahanu on Monday, after a ten days' visit at Vali and Anklesvar. It was more than a visit, as it gave her an opportunity to get a much needed rest. The sisters at Jalalpor reminded Sister Ziegler of her birthday with an unexpected visit July 25.

The Irish Presbyterians, our sister mission, suffered a serious loss in June by the unexpected death of Dr. J. F. Steele, an educator and scholar of remarkable ability. He was stationed at Broach, just four miles north of us, across the Nerbudda River. At the time of his death he was at a Hill station, nicely recovering, as was thought, from an operation, when he took a sudden turn for the worse and passed over. He has been a missionary in India for thirty-five years, and was able to fill positions of different character, when vacancies occurred, with efficiency and credit to the cause. He is the sixth missionary the Irish Mission has lost in the past three years, owing to the effects of a recent attack of smallpox, he confined to his bed for two months, so it is reported, and it is feared it may be necessary to send him home. In comparison with theirs our loss has been less serious, for which we are grateful to our Heavenly Father! Our friends of that mission have our deepest sympathy!

A few days ago a request, signed by twelve or more men, came from a village situated near the border of our field, in which it was stated that they wanted some one to teach them, as they wished to become Christians. The next day a similar request, signed by twenty-one men, came from a village near the border, but in an opposite direction from the other village. Two men of different villages recently met. After talking a while each learned that the other had recently become a Christian. "Come on," said one of the men, anxious to tell others of his newfound joy, "let us talk to this man about becoming a Christian." So together they went and told another man of Jesus, the Savior they had recently found. Truly, the fields are white unto the harvest! A. T. Hoffert.

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

An Open Door of Opportunity

Revelation 3: 8

For Week Beginning October 12, 1919

1. Introductory.—How sad a world this would be if there were no open door of opportunity for weary, sin-burdened souls, whereby to gain entrance to the love of God or the grace of Jesus Christ! Our Blessed Master was ever opening doors of opportunity for man. Sin had closed the door to every spiritual privilege, but he who has now "the keys of death and of Hades," has set before us some NOTABLE OPPORTUNITIES to gain access to highest privileges.

2. The Open Door of Salvation.—"I am the door; by me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved." This is a DOOR OF ESCAPE from the wrath of God, from the guilt and pollution of sin, from the fear of man, and the tyranny of self. It is for you—a free gift—therefore you may, with boldness, enter in by the blood of Jesus.

3. The Open Door of Instruction.—The privilege of being "TAUGHT OF GOD" is open for all. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask," is a guarantee of Divine Help. The door into the Divine Audience Chamber is now open through the blood of Jesus. He can not only "open to you the Scriptures," but also anoint your eyes with such an eye-salve as shall make you see wonderful things in his Holy Word. He can enable us to comprehend the "deep things of God"—to become wise in Christ.

4. The Open Door of Prayer.—Great victories have been WON BY PRAYER, and the same door, thus entered into fullness of blessing and triumph, is open for you. "If ye ask anything in my name" is the all-sufficient key that opens heaven's storehouse.

5. The Open Door of Fellowship.—This is another glorious privilege that is open to all saints. "If ye draw nigh unto me, I will draw nigh unto you." The Lord needs no very urgent constraint to come and abide with us. The deepest yearning of his loving heart is that we should "ABIDE" in him. His greatest difficulty is in regard to ourselves—our closed door against him. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock."

6. The Open Door of Power.—We can readily see that some have more spiritual power than others. Why? Have they obtained special favor with God through some hidden, private door of entrance? Has not Christ plainly declared: "All power is given unto me. . . . go ye therefore"? He expects us to go TO HIM and FOR HIM. "He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might, he increaseth strength." Here is a door of wonderful possibilities. The promised strength is sure if you meet the Lord's conditions.

7. The Open Door of Service.—If you are a son, prove it by your vineyard activity. The door is open; THE WORK AWAITS YOU. Do what you are told: "Go, work." Christ does not COMPEL us to follow him, but he entreats us lovingly to yield our best service. Who, then, is willing to consecrate himself? Wide doors are open in every mission field.

8. The Open Door of Heaven.—"I go to prepare a place for you." Those who are Christ's need not fear a closing of this door. Christ has opened it, and "no man shutteth." If we are faithful now, taking full advantage of offered privileges, AN ABUNDANT ENTRANCE shall be ministered unto us on that day when we enter through this gate into the city.

9. Suggestive References.—Christ at the door of our hearts (Rev. 3: 20). Our salvation the gift of God (Eph. 2: 8, 9). Christ the Perfect Teacher (Matt. 22: 16). "A teacher come from God" (John 3: 2). When the door of prayer is opened unto us (Rom. 8: 26). Prayer that perseveres (Eph. 6: 18; Heb. 5: 7). The door of fellowship (Matt 18: 20; John 14: 20-23). The door of power (Acts 1: 8; 2 Tim. 1: 7). The door of service (Gal. 4: 18; Titus 2: 14).

ual growth depends upon his being able to come close to us in a real heart relation. We want to walk with him, but how can we unless we know his will? So, if all that is worth while depends so largely upon this heart relation, shall we not desire with the disciples: "Lord, teach us to pray"?

Behind or Ahead

BY PAUL MOHLER

At the close of the Constitutional Convention in 1787, an aged statesman arose and said that he had watched the carving on the head of the chair, occupied by the president of the convention, which represented the sun just above the horizon. He said he was wondering if that were a rising or a setting sun. After the successful labors of the convention, he thanked God that it was a rising sun for the nation.

Some are wondering if the sun is rising or setting for the Church of the Brethren. That all depends upon whether we are behind or ahead of the larger church organizations that are occupying so largely the public eye. If they, with all their strength of numbers and organization, are in advance of us, the best that we can do is to ask them to take us aboard, to travel with them. I don't want to belong to a "tail-ender." Isolation is excusable only in those who lead.

But how shall we know whether we lead or follow? That all depends on our aim or goal. If numbers of adherents is our goal, we are far behind. I think of a number of lines in which we are behind. If I looked at them alone I should give up at once. We do not give as do some others. We are not as active along many lines as are others. They are good lines, too, and we should never be satisfied until we are up on them. But I am not ready to admit that we are really behind on the whole. Churches seem to be like individuals—each strong in some points and comparatively weak in others. We do not say that one man is stronger than another just because he is stronger along one or two lines. We take the whole man and estimate him along all lines. So must we do with the churches.

In the first place, we are ahead if we are teaching and practicing the Gospel more thoroughly than others. People may be baptized without much knowledge of the Gospel. They may live a sort of Christian life with very little of it. They may give liberally and work hard for the enlargement of the church and a number of other good things, but you will never see a full, rich, strong Christian life without a conscientious reference to the Word as the Guide of Life. In this, I know of no other church ahead of ours. We are far above the average.

Then, in the enthronement of Christian ideals, some churches lead the others. The fundamental Christian grace is humility. I know of no church that exalts this grace more than our own. Brotherly love is exalted far more in ours than in many other fraternities. Our church government is more democratic than others. We have a more efficient and practically useful Conference. Our discipline is better and more carefully administered.

Again, the leading church must be a leader in reforms. I know of no other church taking a stand earlier against human slavery, against alcoholism, and against lust-breeding social customs than ours. In this, as in other things, we have been in the lead. Right now, we are in the lead in the reform of dress, and if we stand together, we have a chance to write our name brilliantly on the page of the history of reform.

Finally, we are in the lead in schools. I think we

AROUND THE WORLD

What Bolshevism Did in Hungary

With the opening of the school-year in Budapest, Minister of Education Huzat finds appalling ravages of Bolshevism in the school situation. Previous systems of education were abolished and all textbooks were burned. In their place Bolshevist pamphlets of the most rabid nature were substituted. These were printed at an expense of millions of dollars of the public funds. The Bolshevist doctrine of "free love" was fully emphasized, and the effect on the rising generation may be easily imagined. As a vivid object lesson of the fatal result of sowing pernicious seed, the Bolshevist propaganda stands probably unequaled in the world's history.

Fashion's Foibles Denounced

At the recent International Conference of Women Physicians, in New York, severe denunciations were uttered against the vagaries of prevailing fashions. One speaker truthfully remarked: "Extravagant dress is democracy running riot. There is an inherent snobbishness in overdress. Women who indulge such tastes are aping the fashions of the most corrupt city of Europe." Another speaker said: "All the shrewd manipulators of fashion keep calling out to women: 'Style, style, style,' until the unfortunate creatures can not resist. They are simply mesmerized to fall in line with fashion's behests, and as a result the clothing manufacturers reap vast sums of money."

A Most Important Conference

As arranged by President Wilson, just before leaving Washington on his speaking tour, a "Conference of Labor, Capital and Agricultural Interests" is to be held in Washington between Oct. 5 and 10, for the discussion of the present economic situation. A number of delegates have been chosen out of a list submitted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and one made up by President Wilson himself. It is a most timely move—one that, if given proper consideration, will remedy many unjust discriminations now existing. If, as it is hoped, further strikes can be headed off by the proposed deliberations, the results thus achieved will be most gratifying.

How a Little Chapel Was Built in Korea

Churches in far-away Korea are not the elaborate structures so frequently seen in the homeland. In the case of the one we are here describing, it was but a mud-walled, thatch-roofed building—simply whitewashed. Gifts for the church came from consecrated givers who did not contribute out of their abundance but from the depth of their poverty. In one case an aged woman gathered firewood that she might sell it in the market-place and donate the proceeds towards the building of the church. Another consecrated giver, with wages of only $5 per month, gave $25 toward the chapel fund. A merchant, in commenting on the consecrated givers, said: "Those Christians have worked hard. They have gone hungry so that the church might be built, and yet they are the happiest people in the village."

General Unrest Still Increasing

War defenders would have us believe that hostilities are a good thing, because of the fact that they clear the political atmosphere and quicken a sense of patriotism among men. We are also told that, after the stress of war, men turn with more eagerness and efficiency to the pursuits of peace. Stubbornly these beliefs are cherished, notwithstanding the unvarying historical proofs to the contrary. It is a fact beyond all question that no war can be regarded as a benefit, no more than a destructive tornado can be looked upon as a blessing. The great world war has not caused an increase of patriotism. It has not caused men to turn with eagerness to the pursuits of peace. It has not increased efficiency. On the other hand, it has caused a most deplorable increase of disorder, lawlessness and distrust.

Bibles for the Blind

Should any of our readers happen to be so unfortunate as to be blind, they would doubtlessly appreciate whatever books are available for those who can read by touch only. Books for the blind being necessarily costly, because of the intricate process of manufacture, the amount of literature, printed in raised type, is very limited. The New York Bible Society, however, publishes two editions of the Bible—one the New York point type, the other the American Braille type. These Bibles are not of the convenient size with which Sunday-school workers are so familiar, but a huge set of nineteen volumes which are sold at $50—barely the actual cost of manufacture. The Bible Societies of our country have many calls for Bibles of all sorts from people everywhere, but none of the appeals are as touching as those from the blind. Seemingly, the individuals who are deprived of their natural vision, have a keener relish for the Word of Life than the more fortunate who can see. Apparently many blind persons of slender means economize in every way possible to secure the necessary $50 for the raised-type set of the Bible. Just now the demand is even greater than ever before, since many soldiers have returned from overseas duty with permanently obscured eyesight. The Bible Societies are hoping that it will be made possible to put the Sacred Word within reach of all of these men who specially desire it.

A Powerful Factor

Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent scientist, declared in a recent address at Birmingham, England, that wonderful possibilities of power will ere long be revealed by the proper utilization of so-called "atomic properties of matter." He points out that, by means of this mighty force of nature, wireless telegraphy has been made possible. He maintains that the "atomic energy" of even a very small amount of matter, properly utilized, would be sufficient to raise the German ships, sunk in the Scapa Flow, and pile them on top of the Scotch mountains. As one reads of this and other marvelous discoveries of hitherto unrecognized forces of nature, one is impressed anew with the overwhelming might of the Great Creator. "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom thou hast made them all."

Christianizing the Jews of America

Bishop Thomas J. Garland, of Philadelphia, has given expert consideration to the religious status of the Hebrew race in America, and after exhaustive investigations has come to this conclusion: "Eighty per cent of the American Jews have lost interest in their own religion, and are rapidly becoming atheists." If Bishop Garland's statement is wholly dependable—and there seems to be no reason to doubt it—the "go ye" of the Master has been given renewed emphasis, so far as these "children of Abraham" are concerned. Confronted by the threatening danger of atheism, this is no time for theorizing but for immediate action. "We are debtors," says Paul, in speaking of the obligations the Christian owes to the "chosen seed of Abraham's race." Will the Lord hold us guiltless if we fail to meet the debt we justly owe?

The Vacant Churches

In the course of a nation-wide survey of the Inter-Church World Movement a section of eastern New York has been found where there are nine church edifices, but where no minister has served the people regularly in years. This fair valley seems once to have been the center of a flourishing religious life. Now most of the church buildings are in decay. Only now and then does an itinerant preacher happen in, to hold services. The survey specialist of the Inter-Church World Movement found a lamentable lack of religious knowledge among the people of that section—as might be expected under the circumstances: Few of the children had ever attended Sunday-school. To think that such a condition should prevail in the center of a thickly-populated State, seems almost past belief. The need of some remedial agency is imperative.

Where Is the Promised Peace?

D'Annuncio's spectacular seizure of the much discussed and hotly-contested city of Fiume, on the Adriatic, has aroused new elements of danger. Now a war between Jugo-Slavia and Italy is predicted, since the last-named nation seems disposed to retain what D'Annuncio so surely, if not wisely, seized. Small wonder that our Senate and House are deliberating whether or not we are at war with Italy, and if we are not, why United States troops were landed to help Dalmatians fight Italians. Great Britain, just now, is confronted by a war of the worst kind. A strike of 600,000 workmen or more, leaves the country without railroad service, and starvation threatens. Three millions more may possibly strike. With extended strikes in our own country, there is seemingly scant opportunity to help in the settling of problems that arise across the waters. We have our hands full here.

A Better Racial Understanding Needed

A call to the citizens of the United States, to act in conformity with the high ideals of democracy and of Christianity in the present condition of strained relations between the races, has just been issued by the Federal Council of the Churches in America. In this important move, that body deliberated in conjunction with a large representative committee of white and colored citizens from all sections of the country. Some of the valuable suggestions offered are comprised in the following deductions: The present situation is a challenge to the churches, charged with the promotion of the brotherhood of man, which looks upon all men as entitled to a footing of equality of opportunity. This calls for preaching the duty of economic and community justice for the Negro, thus securing peace and good-will between the races. Beyond all else the present situation calls for confession, on the part of Christian men and women, of failure to live up to the standard of universal brotherhood, as taught by Jesus Christ. In the adjustment of race relations our country has, in this crisis, not only its own conscience to satisfy, but also to justify itself, as a nation, before the enlightened opinion of mankind. As a foremost exponent of the ideals of democratic government, the United States has been lifted to the full view of the world. Our present settlement of race relations will, therefore, influence, in a very large measure, the settlement of race relations in other parts of the world. Briefly stated, our Government—local and national—should impartially guarantee security of life and property to every citizen of whatever race. The Negro should have economic justice, equal opportunity to get work, and retain it on the same terms as other men. The best of educational facilities for Negro children should be provided, not only as a national obligation, but also as a necessity for national welfare.

Increased Wages and Night-Schools

When, with heavy war orders and a great shortage of labor, wages began to increase, in the United States, night-schools were closed, one after another, in most of our important cities. Interest in better education was lost, when money became plentiful, revealing the fact that previous attendance at night-school was not due to a thirst for knowledge, but merely to secure information that could be turned into higher wages. When these came, automatically the schools closed. Most men still need the spur of compulsion. If a good income were insured to all, nine out of ten would cease work—mental and physical. A wise Providence undoubtedly has so decreed that man, for his own best well-being, must keep on working, thus escaping poverty and its impending privations.

Costly Equipment

Ponderous as the large guns of our army and navy seem to be, their actual usefulness is, in reality, of but very short duration, and that very fact adds to the large cost of military preparedness. According to a recent order, the United States Army is to send 1,240 guns to the scrap-heap, which means that about $10,000,000, spent in their construction, is no longer a national asset. Before the war began, the nation had 2,058, but now, guns to the number named above—more than half—are obsolete, and must be replaced at a sum far above the original cost. Their purchase will be a large item in the appropriation bill passed by Congress. A hope had been expressed by many that the days of further armament had passed, with the close of the great war, but the Prince of Peace is not yet in control.

The Palestine That Is to Be

While most proposed plans as to Palestine's future are necessarily vague, as yet, some of them, at least, may possibly be definitely adopted, later on. A strong movement in the Bible Lands is gaining ground, to effect a union of Palestine, Syria and Mesopotamia, and is now being considered by the British Government, which is to be in control of affairs in that section of Asia. At the recent American Zionist Convention a number of important questions were discussed which, while they may not all be finally adopted, are indicative, nevertheless, of the possible trend of affairs. It is expected that most of the new inhabitants of Palestine will be from the eastern countries of Europe, where Jews have been unjustly treated. Immediate endeavors, by the Zionist International Organization of Industrial and Financial Institutions, to develop economic relations between Palestine and other countries, were recommended by the Convention. An international movement was urged to establish a commission to study the immigration question, with a view of facilitating the resettlement of Jews in Palestine. Steps are to be taken to eliminate insanitary conditions, and particularly to combat malaria in the new homeland. Nearly $1,500,000 will be used during the next year in the development of Palestine.

Relieving India's Famine Conditions

While, in a measure, the appalling need of India has been somewhat relieved by the bounty of liberal givers in other parts of the great world field, it is true, nevertheless, that all such relief is merely palliative, and does not, in any way, remedy the underlying causes of the famine situation. Competent judges of conditions in India attribute the deplorable economic situation in that country to two causes: (1) The deficient methods of agriculture and industrialism in general. (2) The pernicious system of caste, that palsies whatever enterprise and initiative might be put forth by the people in general. As to the first cause, there is no doubt that the production of food crops might be materially increased by applying the latest and most approved methods of agriculture, including irrigation systems where at all feasible. Some writers go so far as to claim that the productivity of most sections might be doubled, which in itself would practically bar the horrors of famine. It is realized, of course, that in urging radical and effective reforms in agriculture, the age-old opposition to modern methods must be met and overcome. This is a factor of no small magnitude. As to the detrimental influence of caste, most of our readers are fully informed, though few of us can form an adequate conception of the paralyzing effect thus exercised upon all phases of human activities. A man, belonging to a certain caste, must follow the calling thereby authorized. There is no other way under present conditions. It is said that 65,000,000 people in India never know what it is to have enough to eat. The reason may be learned from conditions above referred to.

Eld. E. J. Smith has been chosen to represent the District of Oklahoma, Panhandle of Texas and New Mexico at the 1920 Conference.

Bro. Roy E. Miller, of Onekama, Mich., has assumed pastoral charge of the Harlan church, same State, and should be addressed at R. D. 1, Copemish, Mich.

Bro. Ray S. Wagoner, formerly of East Enid, Okla., should be addressed at 226 E. Eighth Street, Oklahoma City, Okla., where the headquarters of the Child Saving Mission of Oklahoma are now located.

With a view of securing for his wife the climatic advantage of the Rocky Mountain or Pacific Coast States, Bro. R. A. Montz, of Fredericksburg, Iowa, would be pleased to hear from any congregations in the territory designated, which may desire pastoral assistance.

Bro. P. E. Robertson, of Lindsay, Calif., can respond to several calls for series of meetings in Northern California or Oregon. Those who may desire his services as indicated, can, for the present, reach him at Brookings, Oregon, where he begins a series of meetings Sept. 28.

Bro. E. L. Heestand and wife, of Huntington, Ind., and Sister Cora M. Stahly, Director of Music at the Winona Lake Conference, stopped off to visit the Publishing House on Monday of this week as they were returning home from their evangelistic meetings in the Waddams Grove church, Ill.

Writing under date of Sept. 25 Bro. J. H. Moore says that at high noon, thirty years ago, he and Sister Moore started together on the ups and downs of life and that they are still on the upward way. He recalls also that on Sept. 18 it was just half a century since his election to the ministry. He began his editorial career August 21, 1876. The present office editor had not thought much about the work at that time.

Three of the brethren, under appointment to the India mission field, are available for pastoral service while waiting for the delayed landing permits. There may be congregations so situated that they would gladly avail themselves of this opportunity. The names and addresses of these brethren are: Leo Blickenstaff, Cerro Gordo, Ill.; Chalmer Shull, Girard, Ill.; Fred M. Hollenberg, Gleichen, Alberta, Can.

What Bolshevism Did in Hungary

With the opening of the school-year in Budapest, Minister of Education Huzat finds appalling ravages of Bolshevism in the school situation. Previous systems of education were abolished and all textbooks were burned. In their place Bolshevist pamphlets of the most rabid nature were substituted. These were printed at an expense of millions of dollars of the public funds. The Bolshevist doctrine of "free love" was fully emphasized, and the effect on the rising generation may be easily imagined. As a vivid object lesson of the fatal result of sowing pernicious seed, the Bolshevist propaganda stands probably unequaled in the world's history.

Fashion's Foibles Denounced

At the recent International Conference of Women Physicians, in New York, severe denunciations were uttered against the vagaries of prevailing fashions. One speaker truthfully remarked: "Extravagant dress is democracy running riot. There is an inherent snobbishness in overdress. Women who indulge such tastes are aping the fashions of the most corrupt city of Europe." Another speaker said: "All the shrewd manipulators of fashion keep calling out to women: 'Style, style, style,' until the unfortunate creatures can not resist. They are simply mesmerized to fall in line with fashion's behests, and as a result the clothing manufacturers reap vast sums of money."

hard for most of us to do? Sometimes it is hard to keep from lying. But liars are a nuisance here, and they have no promise of heaven. Sometimes it is hard to keep from coveting, stealing, or bearing false witness, but simply because a good thing is hard to do, should we refuse to do it? Because it is hard to keep from gossiping, should we continue to indulge in this awful and destructive sin?

The gossip habit will fade away, as the darkness fades in the early morning, when once we set our hearts upon loving, Christ-like service—as we fill our minds with better thoughts and higher aspirations. Then we will tell only what we know to be facts, and what we believe will be helpful to the one with whom we are conversing. Then we are ready to keep Christ's Golden Rule: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matt. 7: 12).

MANCHESTER COLLEGE

The twenty-fifth year of Manchester College opened Sept. 9, under very favorable circumstances. The year has begun with the largest enrollment in the history of the school.

The formal opening took place on the evening of Sept. 9, when the student body was addressed by President Otho Winger, Dr. T. E. George, pastor of our city congregation, Dean V. F. Schwalm, and others, including a number of new members of the college faculty.

The enrollment is now 360, with others to come soon. More than 60% are in the College Department. Fourteen teachers are giving full time to college classes. Thirty young ministers are among the student body. Dozens of students here are preparing for a definite line of Christian service.

The trustees met Sept. 17. They had to face a new and large problem—that of providing room for this growing student body. They have accepted the challenge and already have plans under way for a "Forward Movement" campaign for a greater Manchester College.

DISTRICT MEETINGS OF OREGON

The Sunday-school Meeting convened in the Portland church at 9: 30, August 17. The first topic discussed was "Responsibility of the Sunday-school in Leading to a Life of Purity," showing the results of sin, the cause of sin, the remedy and how the Sunday-school can meet the responsibility. Other interesting subjects were: "The Sunday-school and the Boy," "The Sunday-school and the Girl," and "The Proper Use of Lesson Helps." "The Sunday-school Standard" was discussed by Bro. Hiram Smith, our District Sunday-school Secretary. He urged that every school be a Front Line Sunday-school.

The Temperance Program, rendered by the Local Temperance Committee of Portland, was excellent. A short talk was given by Miss Stover, State Secretary of the No-Tobacco League of America. The climax was reached by a powerful and convincing sermon by Eld. D. C. Glick, of Newberg.

The Christian Workers' Convention met on Monday, August 18. The first topic was "The Christian Workers' Society and the Community." Second, "The Value of an Education to the Christian." Third, "The Christian Workers' Meeting as a Stimulant to Missionary Endeavor." Some good thoughts were brought out in the Round Table discussion. The Aid Society and Mothers' Meeting was held at 2 P. M., August 19. Sister Eliza Moore was elected State Secretary. There were many good talks on the different topics, with suggestions for better work. The elders met in session at the same hour. We were very glad to have with us Eld. S. J. Miller, of La Verne College, who gave us a larger vision of education.

The Ministerial Meeting convened on Tuesday morning. Bro. J. A. Reed, of Newberg, was elected Moderator, and Bro. E. J. Michael, of Myrtle Point, Secretary. The first topic was "What Do I, as a Lay Member, Owe to the Church?" Second, "What Are Some of the Substantial Aids that May Be Given a Minister That Will Enable Him to Do More Efficient Work?" Third, "A Minister's Education." Fourth, "In What Way May We Encourage Our Young Men to Prepare Themselves for the Ministry?" Fifth, "How May a Congregation Know When It Has Material for a Minister?"

At 7: 30 P. M. a Missionary Program was rendered, followed by a Missionary Sermon. When the Mission Board made a call for help and helpers, a goodly number of members rededicated themselves to the Master's service. An offering of $625 was taken, which was a glad surprise to us all, when we remember that the highest offering, at any previous District Meeting, was less than $200. We know that the churches of Oregon are making progress in the Forward Movement. Heretofore the Mission Board has called on the churches for about $600, but this year they are asking for $1,500. We hope to see the Forward Movement carried to its fullest extent in the District of Oregon.

The District Meeting was called for 9 A. M. on Wednesday. The opening exercises were conducted by Eld. S. J. Miller, of La Verne. The roll call of delegates showed nineteen present, representing ten churches. Bro. J. W. Barnett was elected Moderator; Bro. D. C. Glick, Reading Clerk, and Bro. M. C. Lininger, Writing Clerk. Bro. S. P. Van Dyke was elected a member of the Standing Committee; Bro. Thomas Barklow, alternate.

Much credit is due the Portland church for the excellent care taken of the visitors, and making their stay a most agreeable one.

The District Meeting of 1920 is to be held at Ashland, beginning on the fourth Sunday of July.

ROANN, INDIANA

Since our last report many blessings have been ours to enjoy. June 22 we held a joint Sunday-school Meeting of the West Manchester, Qgans Creek and Roann Sunday-schools at the latter church. The program was very interesting, and all speakers were present except one. We were glad to have with us, on that day, Brother and Sister Felthouse, of Florida. In the evening Bro. Lawrence Shultz, of Manchester College, gave a lecture, with stereopticon views on the Sunday-school phase of the Forward Movement.

June 29 Bro. Roy Mishler, of Kewanna, Ind., preached for us. July 13 Sister Elizabeth Kintner, who will sail for the foreign field soon, was with us. The following Sunday Brother and Sister Balsbaugh and Brother and Sister Marion Miller, of Mexico, Ind., spent the day with us, in the interest of the Old Folks and Orphans' Home, at that place. They brought with them five little orphan children, who sang several songs for us. An offering of $49.30 was taken for the Home.

We decided to give our birthday offerings for the past quarter for the support of the new churchhouse to be built at Logansport, Ind.

We observed Educational Day and sent the offering to Manchester College. Bro. Moore gave us a temperance lecture August 2. Bro. Coblentz, of Manchester College, preached for us August 3, both morning and evening. August 17 Bro. Eli L. Heestand, of Plymouth, Ind., preached our Harvest sermon in the morning, and gave us a splendid sermon in the afternoon. An offering of $29.09 was lifted for the Logansport churchhouse.

Sept. 6 we met in council, with Eld. J. D. Rife in charge. One letter was granted. We chose, as our delegates to District Meeting, Brethren Ira Swihart and Ray Figert. Our "Messenger" agent, Bro. Ray Figert, resigned, and Bro. Ira Swihart was chosen in his place. The report of the Home Department for the first half of 1919 was read and accepted.

Sept. 14 Bro. S. C. Miller, of Chicago, lectured on the Forward Movement in the morning and gave us a talk on "The Simple Life" in the evening. Sarah C. Seitner.

CHANGING LOCATIONS

The writer and wife have been led, as we believe, by the Spirit of God, to accept a call from the District Mission Board of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada, to take charge of the work at Minot, N. Dak. We are loath to leave the work at Muscatine, having been here four years and three months. We will give a summary of work done here since we took charge:

We moved the churchhouse to the present location.

We installed a heating plant.

The writer preached 906 sermons and conducted fourteen funeral services. Members received by baptism, 21; by letter, 5; total, 26. Marriages solemnized, 11. House-to-house visits, 4,590. The work here is under the direction of the Mission Board of the Middle District of Iowa. The members of this splendid Board give their workers their united support.

Furthermore I can say that the present deacon body is composed of loyal, consecrated brethren, who stand for the principles of the Gospel.

While we are changing locations, we are not changing fields—"The world is the field." We feel that Minot opens up for us a great field of labor for the Master. We ask a special interest in the prayers of all. We realize that "the harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest."

After Oct. 1 my address will be Minot, N. Dak.

NORTHWESTERN OHIO

The Sunday-school, Ministerial and Christian Workers' Meetings of Northwestern Ohio were held in the Deshler congregation August 26, 27 and 28. A very interesting sermon on "Atonement" was delivered by Bro. L. I. Moss on the first evening.

Wednesday, August 27, the Sunday-school Meeting was held, with Bro. Walter Landes, Moderator, and Sister Ella E. Korn, Secretary. Some very important subjects were ably discussed by the speakers: "The Graded Primary Department, What It Is and What It Does," "The Community Survey," "India Sunday-schools," "The Sunday-school as a Missionary Factor in Church Activity," "Experiences on the Field," "The Sunday-school Forward Movement," "The Chorister's Part in a Successful Sunday-school."

Special interest was given to this meeting by the presence of Bro. John Kaylor, returned missionary from India, Bro. Keller, from North Manchester, and Bro. Otho Winger, President of North Manchester College. The Round Table was conducted by Bro. Walter Landes, our District Sunday-school Secretary.

Wednesday evening the Christian Workers' hour was conducted by Sister Blanche Byerly. Bro. John Kaylor gave some of his stereopticon views, which added much interest to the meeting. The Sunday-schools of Northwestern Ohio are supporting Sister Alley on the India field. Other churches and Sunday-schools have also taken special supports.

Thursday, August 28, the Ministerial Meeting was held, with Bro. J. L. Guthrie, Moderator, and Bro. Walter Landes, Secretary. Among the interesting topics of the meeting were: "The Consecrated Layman," "Exposition of Matthew 18," "The Pastor or Elder as Shepherd," "How to Secure a Better Attendance at Our Councils," "The Church, Its Authority and Mission," "The Simple Life from a New Testament Standpoint." An offering of $25.75 was taken for educational work.

The Deshler church was equal to the task of entertaining the people, and we trust that much good may result from these meetings. Ella Garner Korn.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

In our effort, to carry on the work here at Champaign, we have felt the need of expansion, as the Five-Year Forward Movement sets forth. Are we all striving to make this movement a success?

Last spring a Chinese brother, Toy Morrey, of Bethany Bible School, gave us a talk. He felt the need of reaching out to his people in this country, and telling them of the way of salvation. On his visit here, he and our pastor, Bro. Kitson, visited several Chinese of the city for the purpose of starting a Chinese Sunday-school here. These efforts proved successful. Last spring we carried on the work until the warm weather set in. We have now arranged to continue the work, and at our last members' meeting we organized a Chinese Sunday-school. We elected Sister Heckman as superintendent, and Sister Mamie Knott as secretary-treasurer. A number of teachers were selected by the executive committee. Every effort to reach our Chinese friends will be put forth.

Teaching these young men how to read and speak English is our first duty, as they know practically nothing of it. Later on we hope to bring them to our Lord and Master.

Owing to a bright outlook for the future, and more room for expansion, we feel the need of more workers here. Our main Sunday-school has been deprived of much progress that rightfully belongs to it, by not having enough efficient workers. Those of our members who are seeking a lively city, a place of education, a place with plenty of work and, above all, a place where you can be of service to the Master, are urged to investigate the claims of Champaign. C. Lewis.

INDEPENDENCE, KANSAS

August 31 Bro. John Crist, of Friend, Kans., preached an able sermon in the morning. Sept. 7, after the usual Sunday-school session, Bro. John Denney delivered a splendid sermon and another in the evening, after Christian Workers' Meeting. As the invitation was extended, two came forward for baptism and one was restored.

Wednesday evening the Men's Gospel Team held services at the United Brethren church, southeast of the city. While the crowd was small, the interest was good. The following night, after the usual prayer meeting, two were baptized.

Yesterday being Rally Day, was one of the greatest days we have enjoyed for some time. One hundred and twelve were present at Sunday-school and our collection was $5.52. Our superintendent, Bro. Cline, is working hard for the school and is making it a success. Eld. W. H. Miller delivered an able sermon following the Sunday-school session. A basket dinner was served at the church and nearly every one stayed to enjoy it. In the afternoon the Junior League rendered a fine program. At the close the Men's Gospel Team held a very interesting session, each member taking part. After this the Women's Gospel Team took up the services, which were just as interesting as any service could be. In the evening our Christian Workers' Meeting was led by Sis-story. No qualities, however good or noble, can supersede the necessity of deep and strong mutual affection. The love of Isaac and Rebekah is an essential guarantee of a happy married life, and a bar for the divorce courts.

Gossip

BY EARL W. ROOP

TODAY, when we hear the word "gossip," we seldom think that such a word could have had a good meaning at one time. The word itself comes from "God" and "sib," meaning "related to God." Accordingly, its first meaning was "god-parent." Then it grew to mean the conversation of the friends of the god-parents. Finally, it has come down to us as meaning an idle conversation, generally full of slander, railing, backbiting and falsehood, with a slight admixture of the truth. Perhaps our nearest synonym of gossip is "tale-bearing."

Now, tale-bearing has by no means originated in modern times. In the third book of the Bible stands the direct command: "Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy people" (Lev. 19: 16).

Coming down through the ages, we see the description given by the wisest man that ever lived. He says: "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so where there is no tale-bearer, the strife ceaseth. As coals are to burning coals and fire to wood, so is a contentious man to kindle strife. The words of the tale-bearer are as wounds" (Prov. 26: 20-22).

Coming to the New Testament, we see that Peter, Paul, and James solemnly warn us against this evil (1 Peter 4: 15; 1 Tim. 5: 13; James 4: 11).

Nor is the condemnation of this evil confined to the Bible. Vergil, outside of the pale of the true religion, gives us a most vivid description—one that is remarkably full of suggestions. According to these, gossip often arises over a falsely-reported marriage. Gossip, we are told, is a most vigorous evil, very swift, and gets larger as it goes. It is always watching for something to report. It is often brought forth through the influence of anger. It is, indeed, a horrible monster.

Gossip is made up of truth and falsehood, a truly dangerous and deceitful mixture. It is entirely inaccurate. A woman's husband was brutally murdered by a negro, which almost caused her to lose her mind. In gossip, it was reported that she hired the negro to do it. What a direful gloom that malicious gossip threw over that woman's whole life!

A kind-hearted, conscientious preacher and his wife took an orphan girl to raise. At the end of several years, she became melancholy and hanged herself. In gossip, it was reported that the preacher and his wife hanged her. What a reward gossip gave them for all their parental love and care!

Thus, and in many other ways, gossip has been guilty of innumerable evils. It has crowded out a vast amount of wholesome conversation. It has broken ties of love and friendship. It has crushed bonds of holy matrimony. It has created cases for court. It has checked the work of Christianity. It has torn churches asunder. It has represented the saint as a vile sinner. It has kept many a one from becoming a Christian. And—most disastrous of all—it has driven the humble penitent back into the dark, dreary regions of sin.

But condemning gossip is one thing and abstaining from it is another. It is almost a universal habit, hard for most of us to do? Sometimes it is hard to keep from lying. But liars are a nuisance here, and they have no promise of heaven. Sometimes it is hard to keep from coveting, stealing, or bearing false witness, but simply because a good thing is hard to do, should we refuse to do it? Because it is hard to keep from gossiping, should we continue to indulge in this awful and destructive sin?

The gossip habit will fade away, as the darkness fades in the early morning, when once we set our hearts upon loving, Christ-like service—as we fill our minds with better thoughts and higher aspirations. Then we will tell only what we know to be facts, and what we believe will be helpful to the one with whom we are conversing. Then we are ready to keep Christ's Golden Rule: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matt. 7: 12).

MANCHESTER COLLEGE

The twenty-fifth year of Manchester College opened Sept. 9, under very favorable circumstances. The year has begun with the largest enrollment in the history of the school.

The formal opening took place on the evening of Sept. 9, when the student body was addressed by President Otho Winger, Dr. T. E. George, pastor of our city congregation, Dean V. F. Schwalm, and others, including a number of new members of the college faculty.

The enrollment is now 360, with others to come soon. More than 60% are in the College Department. Fourteen teachers are giving full time to college classes. Thirty young ministers are among the student body. Dozens of students here are preparing for a definite line of Christian service.

The trustees met Sept. 17. They had to face a new and large problem—that of providing room for this growing student body. They have accepted the challenge and already have plans under way for a "Forward Movement" campaign for a greater Manchester College.

THE DEATH OF BRO. H. E. SACKETT

The Long Beach, California, church suffered a severe shock when Bro. Howard Eaton Sackett passed away in the Seaside Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis. The danger point of the operation was considered passed, and he was expected to go home in a few days, when his heart suddenly began to weaken and, after a fight between life and death for twenty-four hours, he passed peacefully away in the presence of his family. He leaves his wife and five children.

Bro. Sackett passed in the prime of life, being only forty years of age. He united with the church in Long Beach about ten years ago, and through his prayer life and the joy he experienced in his Christ, he led his wife and four children into the Kingdom—all being members except baby Paul. He was interested in his church work, an earnest and willing worker, and everything he undertook, whether in church, home, or business, he first made an object of prayer. His joy was never greater than when he and his whole family were used in the church. He believed that all belonged there on Sunday. In his business relations he was regarded as an honest, upright Christian, and the funeral was an unusually large one. We miss him everywhere. His departure cast a deep gloom upon the community.

The Work of the Church and Money

Some people profess to despise money and especially to deprecate its use in church matters. When properly done the raising of it may as well be a means of grace as the spending of it. Many methods have been tried for raising money, some of them good, but the best, in the opinion of men who have studied the matter, is the Every Member Canvass with Duplex Envelopes.

The Every Member Canvass is conducted once a year. Each member is strongly urged to pledge a weekly amount for the use of the church. The cause of missions is presented at the same time and a weekly pledge for them also is solicited. The weekly gift is in accordance with 1 Cor. 16: 2.

The Duplex Envelopes are put up in cartons, each envelope numbered and dated, one for each Sunday of the year. One side of the envelope provides for the contribution to the current local expense of the church. The other side is for missions or such other benevolences as the donor may designate.

The time to install the envelopes and weekly offerings is the beginning of your fiscal year, or if there never has been any time set for the fiscal year, at the beginning of the calendar year. Bring it up at the next quarterly council and decide for the new system.

The supplies needed are: Pledge cards (enough for each member), price, 40c per hundred. A carton of envelopes (1 for each member), Manila, per set, 11c. White, per set, 12c.

The Sower Church Financial Record. No. 1, for 200 names, $2.25; No. 2, for 300 names, $3.00; No. 3, for 500 names, $3.50.

You may think the cost of such an outfit is prohibitive, but this is not the case. The increased offerings will far more than repay the charges. The experience has been that practically every one will give more, and that a greater number of people will contribute something, so that the total will exceed the amount given by any other method.

You may order direct from this advertisement, or if more information is wanted write for samples and fuller descriptive matter.

It takes a little time to print these, so order as soon as possible.

We have a live wire in our Junior Christian Workers under the leadership of Sister Bertha Saylor and Bro. Frank Lapp. The attendance is fine and all are greatly interested in the work.

Bro. Brubaker was chosen as our pastor for another year, with an increase of salary. The work has grown in interest under his leadership, and we hope for greater blessings in the coming year. Nellie E. Flickinger.

SUMMIT CHURCH, VIRGINIA

Bro. Ernest Coffman, of Harrisonburg, closed a very interesting revival August 20, with forty-three conversions. Twenty-eight have been baptized and five reclaimed. Bro. Coffman is an able speaker and the church enjoyed a real spiritual feast during his stay with us. August 30 we held our visit council, with Elders Peter Garber and J. T. Glick present. The brethren gave a good report. Bro. Minor Miller gave some excellent teaching. One letter was received. Church trustees were considered. Brethren J. M. and W. J. Glick were continued, with Bro. Hugh Cline appointed for the Summit and Brethren J. N. and W. A. Craun for the Glade. We are making preparations to build a room for the Mothers' and Aid Society Meetings.

August 18 our Vacation Bible School began with 102 pupils enrolled, and an average attendance of 83. The school was a great success in storing the young minds with useful material, and building up the church and Sunday-school. We are arranging for another school during the summer of 1920.

August 28 and 29 Brethren Eikenberry, Kahle and Flohr, from Daleville, visited the school and made some very interesting addresses. August 30 the school closed with a picnic dinner, a program, and a watermelon feast, furnished by Bro. Samuel Shiflet.

Our collection for the Sunday-school Board and meeting amounted to $35. Our love feast will be held Oct. 18, at 4 P. M. Mattie F. Wise.

Bridgewater, Va.

LOON CREEK, INDIANA

August 27 the members of our Sunday-school, old and young, gathered in a park on the banks of the Wabash, near Huntington, and spent the day most enjoyably. A suitable program was rendered after dinner. Sunday, August 31, marks another mile-post long to be remembered in the history of our church.

Instead of having our regular Harvest Meeting, as we had planned, we had a Missionary Meeting in the forenoon, following Sunday-school, conducted by Prof. Shultz, of Manchester College. He gave a forceful talk on the need of personal consecration, after which a powerful appeal was made by him for the dedication of lives to God's service. A period of prayer followed, and then nine responded, reconsecrating their lives for work. A missionary offering of $117.50 was lifted. At 8 P. M. we had another missionary program, which consisted of special music and a reading. Our pastor, Bro. B. D. Hirt, then delivered a stirring sermon on the needs of the field and the need of lives for service. At the close another consecration service followed, at which three others pledged themselves.

Last Sunday, Sept. 7, in the absence of Bro. Hirt, who is at Monticello, holding a revival meeting, Bro. Irvin Fisher preached an inspiring sermon. Four children from the Mexico Home sang several songs, which were greatly appreciated. In the evening the young people gave a splendid missionary program, which was also arranged by them. It consisted of missionary readings, dialogues, special songs, etc.

We are expecting great things Sept. 21, when an all-day joint Sunday-school Convention will be held at Loon Creek. Lottie O. Hirt.

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

Since our members are gradually returning from their vacations, we are again resuming our work under normal conditions. Sept. 1 we held a picnic in Schenley Park, which was reported by all as one of the most enjoyable affairs of its kind ever attended, and it also marked the conclusion of the first year of our pastor, Bro. C. Walter Warstler, in the Pittsburgh church.

service, well attended by our members and by many of the neighbors. Notwithstanding the vacation period, running from June through September, we have had a busy summer, but from announcements made at the conclusion of the program, it is easily seen that we are going to be ever so much busier in the near future.

Our Christian Workers' Society will be reorganized Sept. 14 for the new year. Our Rally Day is Sept. 28. We shall have to "go some," to reach our goal in attendance. Nellie Forney.

Finding Relief from a Tiresome Idea.

Don't you think sometimes that this "service" idea is being overworked? You can hardly hear a sermon or a lecture or read a book or an article, that you do not meet it in some form. It gets monotonous. Could not preachers and writers strike a different note occasionally? It would surely be a relief.

But this is not the worst of it. You can hardly read a chapter in the New Testament without encountering the same thing. This is especially noticeable in the Gospels. "Whosoever would be first among you shall be servant of all," "I am among you as he that serveth"—some teaching of this nature or some act or incident, illustrating the idea, stares you in the face at every turn. What is one to do?

Suppose we try this plan: Simply practice the service idea until we find out how rich and satisfying it is, and thus learn to like it so well that we shall just want to live on it all the time. Then these "service" talks and articles and chapters would not annoy us. You know we always like to hear about the thing we are interested in.

Wouldn't that be the simplest remedy?

What Jesus Came For

If you have any uncertainties on this point you can clear the matter up by referring to the second half of the forty-seventh verse of the twelfth chapter of John. In the same way you can learn what Jesus did not come for. Will you look it up? Had we better repeat it here? "For I came not to judge the world, but to save the world."

Not that no judgment is involved in Jesus' mission. Whoever rejects his Word will find out. But this is incidental, automatic, so to speak. Inevitable as it is, as an attendant circumstance, it is not the purpose of Jesus. It is not the thing his heart is set on. It is not what he is doing. His spurned Word will bring judgment. But he is seeking only and wholly to save.

The interests of the Master are the interests of the disciple. "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "To save the world" is what Jesus came for. To save the world is what his disciple lives for.

Spiritual Sanity and Mystical Moonshine

A certain element of mysticism is inseparable from religion. To speak more exactly, true religion involves a spiritual experience which has some features in common with that state of abstraction from the world of sense, denoted by the somewhat vague and ambiguous term mysticism. For communion with God is the very essence of religion. "Religion is the life of God in the soul of man."

To depreciate this truth—the importance of the contact of the individual with God in the inmost recesses of his being—is the farthest possible from the intention of this article. There is no truth to which we need to hold more firmly than that a true religious experience opens up to the soul a world of reality and satisfaction far more real and more satisfying than those things which appeal to physical senses and appetites. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; and he can not know them, because they are spiritually judged." The natural man of whom Paul speaks is the unregenerate man, the man whose heart has not been touched by the Spirit of God, and whose desires and ideals, therefore, have not been lifted above the carnal plane. A man without spiritual sympathy can not appreciate spiritual things.

But why must such a great and precious truth be perverted into an excuse for all sorts of, irrational excesses?

Regeneration imparts no new faculties of body or mind. It does impart new purposes, a new sense of values and a new responsiveness to environment. The good appeals with a new power. It gets a new answer in the soul. A new life is born, but that life must express itself through the same organs of mind and body as the old life did. The Spirit of God now lives in the individual, but he must live in the elements which make up the human personality. There is no other place for him to live. In no other way can he influence that human personality. A Christian is subject to the same psychological laws as the unregenerate man. He thinks and feels and wills in the same way. The difference lies in what he thinks and feels and wills.

When, therefore, we meet the claims of that celestial person who dwells apart from the world of practical affairs, who is the frequent happy recipient of "special revelations" which surpass and supersede the simple truths revealed in Scripture and verified through centuries of Christian experience, who has no need to study, search and think, but bids defiance to all the normal processes of thought and knowledge because the Spirit tells him directly everything he wants to know—why, we recognize at once a well-assorted display of "mystical moonshine."

When Paul said: "The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets," he more than hinted to the excited and disorderly Corinthian assembly that the exercise of spiritual gifts should do no violence to reason and common sense.

Increasing success in the discernment of truth is one of the characteristics of spiritual growth. Of growth, mind you. That success is not a miraculous endowment suddenly conferred. How it comes is clearly indicated in that interesting definition of "full-grown men" which is found in the last verse of Hebrews five: "Those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil." It comes by practice—practice in the use of the soul powers which God gave us when he made us. Not our "natural" unspiritualized powers, but our powers, all of them, sanctified to noble uses by the regenerating Spirit of God.

Thus does God reveal to us "things which eye saw not, and ear heard not, and which entered not into the heart of man." He does it "through the Spirit." We never could get it any other way. Yet the Spirit must operate in and through and by means of our own faculties. He has no other way to reach us. By as much as we refuse or neglect to cultivate and use these God-given faculties, by so much do we limit the Spirit's opportunity.

Carnality is, indeed, the great foe of progress in attaining "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." We are so material-minded that spiritual realities do not seem very real to us. Our sense of them is not always lively. Too often and too easily we lose our grip, and some lust of the flesh wedges in and crowds out the Spirit of God from his already too close quarters.

This truth must be held fast. But we do not help to hold it fast by any false pretense to such an ethereal mode of being that the treasures of Infinite Wisdom are open to us without the agency of human hands or brains. If we are to speak the words "which the Spirit teacheth," and not "man's wisdom," the Spirit will have need, not of less human brains and tongues and hands to work with, but of more consecrated human hands and tongues and brains.

Lest We Help to Bring It On

The most unfortunate thing about the forebodings of these good people who feel it their duty to be always pointing out the possibilities of disaster is that their predictions tend to bring about the very conditions which they say they can foresee. The satisfaction of being able to say: "I told you so," is very sweet and the temptation, if not to do a little something to help justify one's prediction, at least to refrain from any active efforts to make that prediction void, is too strong for many human natures to withstand.

But the strongest tendency in this direction is quite unintentional, even unconscious. It lies in the mental state of expectancy and fear which is engendered both in those who make the predictions and in those who hear them. You can easily worry yourself sick through the fear of getting sick.

This is not an argument against proper prudence. Every man ought to take all reasonable precautions against sickness, poverty, fire, robbery, and so on. But why should he keep his family scared half to death all the time? That only multiplies the danger.

Everybody knows there are plenty of things the matter with the world, and that something is liable to happen any minute. But the largest factor in causing it to happen is the state of mind, fostered by constant reference to the possibilities of trouble. And the best defense against such possibilities is an atmosphere of mutual confidence and good-will.

All this applies to church conditions as much as to affairs of state. Positive and constructive effort in behalf of Christian principles and ideals everywhere is what really counts. Have faith in goodness and work for it. This is not impossible at all, even if conditions seem unfavorable. In fact, it is comparatively easy, when you get used to it. And it makes you feel much better. And you will find it as good a preparation as you can make for whatever the future may unfold.

Anyway, if we must choose between the risk of being surprised by some new calamity and that of helping to bring it on, give us the former every time.

which holds all its members until death or removal does not need to observe this day. Every other school should make the most of it. In this life we usually get what we want if we are willing to pay the price. So every school can have a rousing Rally Day. To do this you will want to advertise it. A personal invitation by word of mouth or by post is a most effective way. Note the attractive cards available. Printed invitation with blank space for date. The price on cards is 75c per hundred assorted as desired.

Form AA. Effectively combining the open Bible, the Cross and the flag.

Form BB. The babies make their own appeal and suggest the need of right training.

Form 2. This card enlists the aid of the primary children in posting the invitations.

Form 22. Autumn leaves in gay colors make an arch through which the children are coming to the rally day service.

Form 25. Shows a little girl in a chair with her dolls and kitty pretending she is going to the rally.

Form W. An autumn landscape in gay colors suggesting the time of the year when the service is held.

Form 17. A landseape card in beautiful colors.

Rally Day Souvenirs

A souvenir not only helps, when properly advertised, to bring out a large attendance but reminds those who receive them of the Sunday-school afterward and so keeps the school advertised.

Lord and Master, ate with his disciples, and they with each other and with him. It is not in what they ate, for Jesus taught that it is not what entereth into a man that defiles him, it is not a question of lamb, or beef, or bread or matsa, but it is a question of brother eating with brother. It is the bread and water covenant of brotherhood and peace.

Jesus ate with publicans and sinners. This caused criticism—because he ate with them, not because of the kind of food that was eaten. Jesus asked the Samaritan woman for a drink. It caused surprise on the part of the woman, that a Jew would ask for a drink—make a water covenant—with a Samaritan.

Paul's criticism of the Corinthian brethren was that they did not eat together, they did not share with each other, and have a common meal, and make the bread and water covenant in brotherly love and harmony. But in Corinth the rich had too much, and drank too much, and the poor had nothing. They ate according to families, cliques, factions, etc. The rich would not "eat with" the poor. There was no brotherhood.

In the Orient the bread and water covenants are the covenants of hospitality, of protection, of friendship, of brotherhood and peace. A friend of mine tried for honrs to get an Arab sheik to allow him to pass through his territory to go to Petra. The sheik stubbornly refused. By a trick, my friend got him to partake of his food. As soon as the Arab sheik discovered that he had tasted food belonging to my friend, he at once ordered his servants to bring the donkeys, with ample provisions and needed protection to conduct my friend safely to Petra. What made the difference? It was the "bread covenant." To eat bread, or, food, or even to accept a drink of water, signifies brotherhood and peace. Even if a minute previous the parties were deadly enemies, the bread covenant would bind them, by their most sacred customs, to be friends and protect one another. "To eat together" means brotherhood and peace. This is the way it was in Jesus' day.

Did the apostles need this meal? We all admit that Judas needed it, and Jesus gave to him in particular. But Judas was a double traitor to break this last covenant of loyalty. Or did Judas think he was loyal by forcing Jesus to declare himself? That is another question. The facts are that Jesus made a last covenant with him by giving him the bread of matsa, dipped into the sop. Did the other disciples need this? Again, we need only to look at Peter a few hours later, and see his need of a closer brotherhood to Jesus. Did James and John need this? When we remember their personal ambition to be head of the rest, it was most appropriate that they eat often with the others, to keep alive the spirit of brotherhood. Is there any one who does not need this? Only Kaisers and Czars, who do not believe in brotherhood and do not intend to live in the spirit of Christian fellowship.

What is the modern meaning of the agape? I explained this custom of our church at one time, while crossing the Atlantic, to several of the most prominent men of other denominations. After I was through, both of these men admitted that we needed this symbol today, and that they would try to establish it in their own churches. My contention is that brotherhood and peace are fundamental Christian virtues. And the agape is the means of grace, to help humanity to achieve this virtue. I believe if all the rich would eat with their servants; if all the employers would eat with their employés; if all the rulers would eat, in the Lord's house, and in his name, with the masses, there would be no great social problems. What the world needs is democracy, in spirit and in reality. There never will be true democracy without Christian brotherhood. There will be no true brotherhood of man, so long as men are unwilling to eat with each other.

Let each preacher explain that the agape means the bread and water covenant of brotherhood and peace. Let all Christians, the world over, eat together, in God's house, in God's name. Imagine this to be done for ten years—that all classes eat together in this spirit. Would there not be results? Would not the spirit of brotherhood be accomplished? I am as sure as the Gospel is true, that if this were to be done, in the spirit of Jesus, our economic and social problems would be solved.

Why do not all churches keep the agape? It is because of legalism. Too many people are legalists. What is not commanded in such a way that they fear hell if they do not obey, they will not heed. I believe if the church could have kept the ethical and spiritual content of these symbols prominent, all devout Christians, of all churches, would revere and follow these symbols. All symbols, performed in the spirit of cultus, in the spirit of priestcraft, in the spirit of legalism, or magic, are repulsive to spiritually-minded people, but all spiritual people respond to a symbol that has spiritual content and meaning.

The agape is the bread and water covenant of brotherhood and peace, and it is the divine means of grace to this end. How beautiful it is for brethren to dwell together in harmony and love! How sacred it is to share our bread with our brother, and thereby make a divine covenant of fellowship and unity! The church has a wonderful opportunity to create true Christianity through the proper use of the symbols. An improper use of them repels men, and the church will lose more than she gains. "God must be worshiped in spirit and in reality." When spirit and reality are expressed through the symbols, they have power.

The Faith-Alone Doctrine Weighed in the Gospel Balance and Found Wanting

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT

"Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble" (James 2: 19).

SOME say there are four kinds of faith, viz.: Historical or dead faith, temporary faith, the faith of miracles, and justifying, or saving, faith. In this article I shall notice the first and last only. The first is the kind the devils have, and the last the kind the followers of Christ have. "Faith is a dependence on the veracity of another. Thus trust is called faith; but it relies upon the truth of a promise: and one is said to keep his faith inviolate when he performs the promise that another relied on."

This God always does. Because the devils believe in God does not change their relationship or make saints of them; neither does faith alone make Christians of people. They must be begotten by the Word of God, and be born again, in order to attain to spiritual life in the family of God. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God" (John 3: 3, 5). It is just as impossible to enter the Kingdom of God, independent of the new birth, as it is to come into physical life independent of the natural birth. The advocates of the faith-alone doctrine are heard often, crying, "Lord, Lord." They seem to be very consecrated, so far as word service goes, but they are not seen "walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."

Jesus says: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 7: 21). No one has the right or authority to tell people that they can be saved and enter heaven without doing the will of God. What is the will of God? The New Testament is the last will of God and in it are laid down, in unmistakable terms, the conditions upon which God agrees to save the people, and there is absolutely no promise of salvation short of a loving compliance with these conditions. God's will is that we be not conformed to this world, but transformed into the image of Christ, and this transformation can be brought about only through the means provided by the eternal Father in the plan of human salvation. A failure to come under their cleansing, purifying, and sanctifying influences, is to fail of the grace of God. The life of that individual is the result of human intuition and human effort, independent of God's revealed will. To hear the Word of God and not do it, though professing faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, is a delusion of the devil. Those who will stand approved in the judgment are the ones who "hear the words of Christ, come unto him and do them." Disobedience disqualifies a person for an application of the blood of Christ, and without an application of his blood no one can reach heaven (1 John 1: 7).

Christian faith itself is a product of the Word of God (Rom. 10: 17). If faith is produced by the Word, then evidently that faith will lead to a strict compliance with, and adherence to, all things contained in the Word, and it is natural and logical that the actions should be in accordance with the faith, "for faith without works is dead." "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him" (Jas. 2: 14)? The apostle interrogatively declares it can not. "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." A dead (inactive) faith never did and never will save any one, "but a faith that worketh by love" leads to Christ, who can and will save all those who come unto him in the good old Gospel way.

Faith is the tree or vine, and works are the fruitage the tree or vine bears. The tree or vine that bears not fruit is absolutely worthless, and will be uprooted and cast into the fire. Fruitless trees or branches can not abide in Christ, but the fruit-bearers (workers) are his disciples—active members in the body of Christ (John 15: 2, 6, 8).

The faith-alone doctrine brings forth a crop of disobedience, and God is dishonored by it. It cries, "Lord, Lord," but will not do the things that the Lord has commanded his followers to do. The prophet evidently had such people in mind when he said: "And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness" (Ezek. 33: 31).

There seems to be a tendency, by some, to exalt faith above the Master himself. There is no being or thing that can save outside of Christ (Acts 4: 11, 12). Faith is simply the instrument that lays hold of Christ, accepts his teaching and leads to a humble, submissive life in his service. It does violence to the plan of salvation to take an isolated word or text and press a meaning that conflicts with God's purpose and plan of saving the people through Christ.

"A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honor? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the Lord of hosts." A son honoreth his father by love and faithfulness to his father's will, and a servant yields faithful service in accord with his master's orders. Suppose a father commands or asks his son to do a certain thing, and the son answers, "Yes, father," but does not do the thing he is commanded or asked to do, does he not dishonor his father through his disobedience, notwithstanding he professes to have faith in his father?

Disobedience caused the fall of the human family and drove it from the beautiful garden, thus depriving it of the favor and communion with God. Man was barred from God's presence. Man lost his inheritance through disobedience, and can get it back only through obedience to Christ in all things. Do not think for a moment that there is any merit in obeying Christ. It is simply doing our duty: for the Lord says: "So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do" (Luke 17: 10).

There is not a case on record, in the Bible, where people disobeyed God and went free, regardless of their faith and trust in him. Every example of faith in the Bible, approved of God, led to humble, submissive obedience to him in all things (Heb. 11). A saving faith is a working faith. It reaches into the domain of the unseen and unrealized, and lays hold of God and his promises. It gladly complies with every requirement of his will. Having nothing of our own, our faith confides and trusts in God for everything, both spiritual and temporal. "Justifying faith is a saving grace, wrought in the soul by the Spirit of God, whereby we receive Christ as he is revealed in the Gospel,

What About the Today?

BY JACOB FUNK

Most of us are planning to do great things "to-morrow." We build our air-castles out of the stuff of omorrow and loiter on the opportunities of today, mly to see the air-castles vanish in vain regrets, when he time for action is on.

This is especially true with reference to many pas-ors. We plan how we are going to preach great ser-nons tomorrow, how we are going to startle the spirit-al world in the near future, how we will become great by and by! And so the sermon of the today is dull and meaningless, and the pews are emptied, and we wonder why. Thus the resources of today are squandered and vasted and we are numbered with the "Ne'er-do-well," nd we wonder why. Thus the opportunities, for naking life worth while, are passing by; we are chided for our indifference and negligence, and we keep won-dering why.

The conduct of today will determine very largely what the life of tomorrow is to be, and if you are not taking hold of the problems of the now, and solving them satisfactorily to yourself and to your God, you are not fit to be trusted with the problems of the tomorrow.

Of course, there must be a season of preparation, and the more thorough the preparation, the better able you will be to solve the problems of life, but I am talking about the fellow who is loitering on the job. Laziness is a sin, and so are indifference and failure. You are to blame if any of these sins are laid at your door. Pastors, especially, need to be doing, today, the work that should so urgently be done. The Five-Year Forward Movement can be carried to a successful issue only by those who are up and at it today. How about you? Get busy now!

The Social Meaning of the Agape or Lord's Supper

BY D. W. KURTZ

Jesus ate a meal with his disciples, the night before his crucifixion. There has been much dispute over this meal. Some hold that this was the "Jewish passover," while others, following John's Gospel, are convinced that this "supper" was a new thing, specially designed for a purpose, as much as the other symbols which Jesus taught. Those who call it the Jewish feast, feel there is no need in keeping it. This is, to say the least, a purely legalistic attitude. I shall not here enter into the endless discussion—and profitless discussion—as to the exact time this feast was held. I believe it was the evening before the Jewish passover, that it was not the Jewish passover, and that it was a full meal with his disciples, on the same night that he washed the disciples' feet and instituted the symbols of the broken bread and the cup.

The agape, or Lord's supper, is dear to me because of what it means. It stands for a definite spiritual and moral content. If I were a Jew, or especially a Pharisee, I should be very much concerned about each detail. To be exact, we would have to "lean" at the table, rather than sit at the table. We could have no dishes save those that were used in Palestine. Couches instead of chairs or pews would be needed. Lamb, and matsa, and the sop of vinegar and spices into which the matsa was dipped, would have to be provided. To be still more exact, one would have to go to Jerusalem, and in the same "upper room."

But we are not Pharisees; we are Christians. Christians are taught to worship God in Spirit and in truth. What, then, is the spiritual meaning of this symbol? Lord and Master, ate with his disciples, and they with each other and with him. It is not in what they ate, for Jesus taught that it is not what entereth into a man that defiles him, it is not a question of lamb, or beef, or bread or matsa, but it is a question of brother eating with brother. It is the bread and water covenant of brotherhood and peace.

Jesus ate with publicans and sinners. This caused criticism—because he ate with them, not because of the kind of food that was eaten. Jesus asked the Samaritan woman for a drink. It caused surprise on the part of the woman, that a Jew would ask for a drink—make a water covenant—with a Samaritan.

Paul's criticism of the Corinthian brethren was that they did not eat together, they did not share with each other, and have a common meal, and make the bread and water covenant in brotherly love and harmony. But in Corinth the rich had too much, and drank too much, and the poor had nothing. They ate according to families, cliques, factions, etc. The rich would not "eat with" the poor. There was no brotherhood.

In the Orient the bread and water covenants are the covenants of hospitality, of protection, of friendship, of brotherhood and peace. A friend of mine tried for hours to get an Arab sheik to allow him to pass through his territory to go to Petra. The sheik stubbornly refused. By a trick, my friend got him to partake of his food. As soon as the Arab sheik discovered that he had tasted food belonging to my friend, he at once ordered his servants to bring the donkeys, with ample provisions and needed protection to conduct my friend safely to Petra. What made the difference? It was the "bread covenant." To eat bread, or, food, or even to accept a drink of water, signifies brotherhood and peace. Even if a minute previous the parties were deadly enemies, the bread covenant would bind them, by their most sacred customs, to be friends and protect one another. "To eat together" means brotherhood and peace. This is the way it was in Jesus' day.

Did the apostles need this meal? We all admit that Judas needed it, and Jesus gave to him in particular. But Judas was a double traitor to break this last covenant of loyalty. Or did Judas think he was loyal by forcing Jesus to declare himself? That is another question. The facts are that Jesus made a last covenant with him by giving him the bread of matsa, dipped into the sop. Did the other disciples need this? Again, we need only to look at Peter a few hours later, and see his need of a closer brotherhood to Jesus. Did James and John need this? When we remember their personal ambition to be head of the rest, it was most appropriate that they eat often with the others, to keep alive the spirit of brotherhood. Is there any one who does not need this? Only Kaisers and Czars, who do not believe in brotherhood and do not intend to live in the spirit of Christian fellowship.

What is the modern meaning of the agape? I explained this custom of our church at one time, while crossing the Atlantic, to several of the most prominent men of other denominations. After I was through, both of these men admitted that we needed this symbol today, and that they would try to establish it in their own churches. My contention is that brotherhood and peace are fundamental Christian virtues. And the agape is the means of grace, to help humanity to achieve this virtue. I believe if all the rich would eat with their servants; if all the employers would eat with their employés; if all the rulers would eat, in the Lord's house, and in his name, with the masses, there would be no great social problems. What the world needs is democracy, in spirit and in reality. There never will be true democracy without Christian brotherthe spirit of Jesus, our economic and social problems would be solved.

Why do not all churches keep the agape? It is be cause of legalism. Too many people are legalists What is not commanded in such a way that they fea hell if they do not obey, they will not heed. I believe if the church could have kept the ethical and spiritua content of these symbols prominent, all devout Chris tians, of all churches, would revere and follow thes symbols. All symbols, performed in the spirit o cultus, in the spirit of priestcraft, in the spirit o legalism, or magic, are repulsive to spiritually-minde people, but all spiritual people respond to a symbol tha has spiritual content and meaning.

The agape is the bread and water covenant of brotl erhood and peace, and it is the divine means of grac to this end. How beautiful it is for brethren to dwe together in harmony and love! How sacred it is t share our bread with our brother, and thereby make divine covenant of fellowship and unity! The churc has a wonderful opportunity to create true Christianit through the proper use of the symbols. An impropc use of them repels men, and the church will lose mo than she gains. "God must be worshiped in spirit an in reality." When spirit and reality are expresse through the symbols, they have power.

The Faith-Alone Doctrine Weighed in th Gospel Balance and Found Wanting

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT

"Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest we the devils also believe, and tremble" (James 2: 19).

Some say there are four kinds of faith, viz.: H torical or dead faith, temporary faith, the faith miracles, and justifying, or saving, faith. In th article I shall notice the first and last only. The fi is the kind the devils have, and the last the kind t followers of Christ have. "Faith is a dependence the veracity of another. Thus trust is called fait but it relies upon the truth of a promise: and one said to keep his faith inviolate when he performs t promise that another relied on."

This God always does. Because the devils belie in God does not change their relationship or ma saints of them; neither does faith alone make Chr tians of people. They must be begotten by the Wo of God, and be born again, in order to attain to spi ual life in the family of God. "Except a man be be of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into Kingdom of God" (John 3: 3, 5). It is just as i possible to enter the Kingdom of God, independent the new birth, as it is to come into physical life in dependent of the natural birth. The advocates of faith-alone doctrine are heard often, crying, "Lo Lord." They seem to be very consecrated, so far word service goes, but they are not seen "walking all the commandments and ordinances of the Lo blameless."

Jesus says: "Not every one that saith unto t Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heav but he that doeth the will of my Father which is heaven" (Matt. 7: 21). No one has the right or thority to tell people that they can be saved and en heaven without doing the will of God. What is will of God? The New Testament is the last will God and in it are laid down, in unmistakable terms, conditions upon which God agrees to save the peo and there is absolutely no promise of salvation sh of a loving compliance with these conditions. Go will is that we be not conformed to this world, transformed into the image of Christ, and this tra formation can be brought about only through Christ, will degenerate. Christ early taught: "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" These texts support my proposition. When Christ comes, "then shall the kingdom of heaven be like ten virgins." Only half of them were admitted into the bridal chamber. Paul says: "For that day shall not come except there come a falling away first." The editor of the Pathfinder reports: "Seventy-four Buddhist temples are now operated in the United States." Rev. L. C. Herbert, of the Episcopal church, now in the Chautauqua field, says: "The religious world is rapidly receding into heathenism." The present status of both the political and religious world surely points that way. Let it be remembered that all former dispensations painfully degenerated, and Bible history is most remarkable for repeating its own history.

3. The church of Christ's planting will be reduced in numbers. Christ early taught: "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. . . . Broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. . . . Fear not, little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The conscientious reader will admit these clear statements, which literally support my proposition. We sing this truth thus:

"Broad is the road that leads to death,
And thousands walk together there;
But wisdom shows a narrow path,
With here and there a traveler."

The foregoing is sad, but Christ assured us: "I will not leave you comfortless," and the comfort we have amid this gloom is that salvation is free for all. "Whosoever will, may come."

IV. Riches

We are most timely warned in the Scriptures, of the danger of riches. A recent writer emphasizes the enormity of this evil in a condensed form thus: "Anxious care in getting them, constant fear in keeping them, enticement and temptation in using them, remorse and guilt in abusing them, the sorrow in losing them." Then, too, think of the burden, because of the account we must give concerning them.

The prayer for the Forward Movement is, "Thy Kingdom come."

In the Forward Movement we must remember the conservation of forces. The doctrine of conservation is essential to the onward drive.

In the Savior's teaching, salt stands for conservation of forces; and light stands for the Forward Movement. He puts salt first; and light second. Saving tends to acquisition. It is the momentum of our past integrity that must make the BIG DRIVE. We must HOLD ON to MOVE ON. We must hold our own to come into our own.

We shall be known and we shall win by our distinctive teachings. We shall be absorbed and lost by the elimination of these distinctive doctrines. The time and necessary evolution into world evangelization is the critical and powerful test of our right to exist. Consecrated religions craft is the burden of the hour.

Our 1919 General Conference, in all its phases, was truly a great one. As some suggested—"The biggest and the best."

The Minutes and the Full Report tell an interesting story. I was confined to a Summer School, and could not and did not attend. But the Full Report reads all the more interestingly.

Sister Beahm who, by the help of loving children and good friends, was permitted to attend, returned with much genuine enthusiasm. So the great 1919 Conference goes down in history, to blossom out in the world program of evangelization.

As, these days, we celebrate the anniversary of framing the American Constitution, we also think of formulating the world constitution for universal peace.

In framing our great State document—the greatest work ever written by men—every Colony or State was duly represented. It was a convention of daily prayer. It has proved a signal success. In point of full representation and prayerful devotion, it is reported that the World's Peace Congress differs greatly. When all nations assemble in full representation and prayerful application, it will mark a still greater onward move in world-wide civilization.

This afternoon, Sept. 21, I am being joyfully entertained in the home of Brother and Sister William Nolley, near Christiansburg, Va. Last night I enjoyed the home of Brother and Sister John Poff, whose premises remind one of a western home.

Sister Nolley and Brother Poff are children of Bro. J. W. Poff, whose name rings with missionary benevolence in this neighborhood. It was Bro. J. W. Poff who, through Brethren J. S. Showalter and G. B. Royer, some years ago donated $30,000 to the missionary work of the church.

There ought to be more work done right here. The little church is struggling for unity and upbuilding. A fuller manifestation of appreciation, upon the part of mission men, in behalf of the work at this place, would be helpful to the cause here.

Having come here by invitation for several services, I see good prospects for future development. Bro. Jacob Keith, from Floyd County, moved here in June. He is elder in charge.

Bro. John William Poff's body rests on a beautiful northern slope, under a neat, modest stone in the Christiansburg cemetery. As one stands at the nicely-sodded mound and thinks of the life that now goes on, working to save the lost, he is sweetly impressed.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ALABAMA

Brewton.—Our services here, Sept. 14, were quite encouraging. The house was full and the best of interest was shown. We are very hopeful of the future but need assistance very much. We have several farms here which can be rented on easy terms, so that one may know before buying, if the location will suit. Our need is for consecrated workers. Our next service will be Oct. 11 and 12. We have Sunday-school every Sunday.—Wm. E. White, 1 Owen Lane, Mobile, Ala., Sept. 26.

Mobile.—We wish again to call attention to our change of location, here in the city. We are now living at No. 1 Owen Lane. Our Sunday-school is about all we can care for under present conditions. Two were baptized at Cedar Creek, near Citronelle, and three at Fruitdale on our monthly visits. One more came home at Fruitdale. Prospects at both places are now more encouraging. We have only one Sunday left for city work, but the other members here stand "shoulder to shoulder" in the work, and that will insure success in time. Let us know if other members or friends are in the city.—Wm. H. White, 1 Owen Lane, Mobile, Ala., Sept. 20.

CALIFORNIA

Empire church met in council Sept. 13, with Eld. A. M. White presiding. Elder's S. F. Sanger and J. W. Gwin were elected delegates to District Meeting, and Bro. H. R. Livingston and Sister Myrtle Julian, delegates to Sunday-school Meeting. Two queries were sent to District Meeting. The finance committee made their yearly report, which showed the church in a prosperous condition. Bro. A. M. Bechtel was reelected to a number of the Sunday-school committee. It was decided to install a furnace before District Meeting. The temperance committee was instructed to invite Mr. Horace J. Knott, superintendent of Anti-Saloon League work, to address the church. Announcements were made for an active campaign in the interest of our coming series of meetings, beginning Nov. 2. The missionary committee was instructed to district our territory, and hold weekly prayer meetings in connection with the canvass of each district.—W. H. Johnson, Empire, Calif., Sept. 20.

Golden Gate Mission.—Elder and Sister S. E. Decker, of Ashland, Oregon, were with us in a two weeks' series of meetings, closing Sept. 20. While there were no conversions, we were all strengthened and encouraged. Sept. 17 Sister Olive Wihlowson, just arrived from India, gave us a very interesting talk. Miss Moore, of the Bethel Mission church, a missionary worker from Penang Straits Settlement, Asia, who was a traveling companion of Sister Widdowson, was also with us and gave us a talk about her work.—Ivy Walter, Oakland, Calif., Sept. 21.

COLORADO

Antioch church met in council Sept. 24, with Bro. H. A. Crist presiding. We decided to be represented by delegate at District Meeting. Our series of meetings will commence Sept. 28, conducted by Bro. H. A. Crist. Our love feast is to be held Oct. 12, commencing at 7:30 P. M.—Nellye Nice, Yoder, Colo., Sept. 26.

Bethel church met in council Sept. 28, with Bro. Fitz, of Denver, presiding. Three letters were granted and one was received. Plans for a new church building were made. Each one expects to sow some grain, and the proceeds from the sale will be used for this purpose. Bro. Norval A. Switzer was chosen delegate to District Meeting.—Elnora B. Switzer, Arriba, Colo., Sept. 28.

First Church Valley.—August 21 Bro. Baxter Mow, of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, gave us two lectures on the "Forward Movement," and general mission work. Our Sunday-school is one of the best in the country in interest and attendance by both old and young people. —Mrs. Minerva Hixson, Grand Junction, Colo., Sept. 25.

Rocky Ford church extends a hearty welcome to delegates and all others, purposing to attend the District Conferences from Oct. 14-15. A great feast of good things is expected from the appearance of the various programs. Railroad accommodations on the Santa Fe are excellent. Notice of your coming will be greatly appreciated by the entertainment committee. Address the writer.—A. G. Crosswhite, Rocky Ford, Colo., Sept. 28.

IDAHO

Bowmont church met in council Sept. 28, with Eld. A. L. Boyd as moderator. Seven letters were granted. We want to hold a series of meetings soon if our committee succeeds in securing an evangelist. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 25, at 6 P. M. We had the pleasure of having Brother and Sister L. H. Eby, of Fruitland, Idaho, with us on Sunday morning, Sept. 21.—Nora E. Zimmerman, Bawmont, Idaho, Sept. 29.

ILLINOIS

Allison Prairie church met in council Sept. 27, with Eld. N. H. Miller presiding. One letter was granted. Bro. Miller was elected delegate to District Meeting; alternate, Bro. Adam Jellison. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 18, at 6 P. M. Sunday evening, after our council, Bro. Geo. Miller, of La Place, Ill., gave us a very interesting sermon. His subject was, "What Think Ye of Christ?"—Ernest Fry, Laurenceville, Ill., Sept. 30.

Elgin.—"The little church on Highland" has been the scene of unusual activity during the last week. On Tuesday the Elgin Women's Mission Union, including representatives from nearly all the city churches, held its tenth semiannual convention, forenoon and afternoon, with dinner served at the church. Wednesday afternoon the Mothers' Club had an interesting session, including an address by one of the city pastors. On Friday evening, at our church council, the church and Sunday-school officers for 1920 were chosen. The previous incumbents being eminently satisfactory, they were almost all reelected. Some of our dependable sisters took early steps to do some house-cleaning, and "soon a profound calm broke to them, our little tabernacle looks as if it had gone through the "layer." As a sample of one of the "specials" promised every Sunday, a group of the junior congregation embellished the Sunday-school session with a song.—Adaline H. Beery, Elgin, Ill., Sept. 29.

Franklin Grove. During the past summer eleven have been received into the church by baptism. Sept. 7 Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, of Chicago, began a two weeks' series of meetings. Although there were no immediate results, we feel that the church has been greatly strengthened by Bro. Nicodemus' sermons, and still hope that much good will come from his efforts and the house-to-house visits which he made. Sept. 27 we met in regular business session. We will hold our love feast Oct. 26, at 6 P. M.—Jennie M. Beachley, Franklin Grove, Ill., Sept. 29.

Freeport.—Bro. Warren Slabaugh has just closed a two weeks' series of meetings in the mission here. His efforts were much appreciated. Bro. Slabaugh's talks were largely along lines that are much in place, and they are sure to do good. His plain, practicable and teachable way of presenting his talks will bring results. All regretted that he was not able to remain longer. It seemed we were just getting ready for greater results, by the few talks given, when he was obliged to start for Bethany to be present at the school opening. He is to be one of the instructors for the coming year. We are hoping that his talks may soon be followed by other meetings on the part of some one. There is a harvest here to be reaped, and we are trusting the Good Father to send will do what we can, so that it may come in the Master's own good time. We feel that the cause here has gained strength by our brother being with us. We crave the prayers of God's children.—P. R. Keltner, Freeport, Ill., Sept. 28.

Hudson church met in council, with Eld. W. T. Heckman presiding. Bro. Emery Carpenter is our delegate to District Conference. Our ministerial committee is trying to secure the services of Bro. Urias Blough, and we hope they will be successful in this. Sept. 28 Bro. Heckman gave us two fine sermons.—Rebecca L. Snavely, Hudson, Ill., Sept. 29.

Lamotte Prairie.—August 29 Bro. Herbert Richards, of Chicago, commenced our revival meeting, with Sister Hazel Mitchell leading the song service. The meetings continued for two weeks, during which time Bro. Richards delivered some splendid messages. While there were no accessions to the church, we feel that much good was done. Sept. 13 we held our annual love feast, with forty-six members present, among the number several from our neighboring churches. Sept. 27 we held our quarterly council, with Bro. Stoner, 27 members. We decided to send Bro. Stoner as delegate to District Meeting. Steps are being taken to get help in the ministry at this place.—Ruth L. Swinger, Palestine, Ill., Sept. 30.

Loraine church met in council Sept. 27. Bro. I. D. Heckman, of Cerro Gordo, met with us. He was unanimously chosen as our elder for three years. He remained with us over Sunday, giving us three inspiring sermons. He was also elected delegate to District Meeting. We decided to make arrangements to hold a series of meetings and communion in December.—Myra E. Pittman, Loraine, Ill., Oct. 1.

INDIANA

Blue River church met in council Sept. 27, with Eld. Walter Sarbaugh presiding. The annual visit was reported. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Leroy Smith and Jesse Shively. Bro. David Metzler will hold a two weeks' series of meetings here sometime during October. We decided to hold our love feast at the close of this meeting. We held our Harvest Meeting Sept. 21. Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Chicago, preached three sermons. An offering of $160 was lifted.—Laura Frick, Churubusco, Ind., Sept. 29.

Cedar Lake church met in council Sept. 11, with Eld. John Urey presiding. We decided to hold our communion Oct. 18, at 7 P. M. Brethren John Urey and Walter Eldredge were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Our Harvest Meeting was held Sept. 21, at which time Bro. D. P. Koch gave us two very good sermons.—Essie Ober, Corunna, Ind., Sept. 30.

Clear Creek church met in council Sept. 3, with Eld. I. B. Wike presiding. Bro. Quincy Neff was elected delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. John Neff, alternate. Our Home Coming, which was held a few weeks ago, was well attended. Several fine talks were given by visiting brethren, viz., Bros. J. H. Shaffer, Roanoke, Ind., Sept. 22.

Elkhart City church met in regular council Sept. 11. Three letters were granted. Delegates were selected for the District Meeting of Northern Indiana—the choice falling on Brethren E. C. Swihart and M. L. Stuck. Bro. E. C. Swihart was chosen as pastor for another year. Our series of meetings will commence Oct. 26, Bro. Milo Geyer, of Milford, Ind., conducting them for us. We decided to hold our communion at the close of our meetings. Bro. J. W. Norris, of North Manchester, Ind., gave us two inspiring missionary sermons on Sunday, Sept. 28. Oct. 5 Bro. Ezra Flory, of Bethany Bible School, is expecting to be with us for a full day's meeting—the morning, following Sunday-school, at 2:30 P. M., and in the evening. We are all looking forward to a good meeting. For the purpose of arousing inspiration, and getting ready for active work in our coming meetings, we have decided to hold a week of special prayer meetings.—Mrs. Cleo A. Swihart, 720 Garfield Avenue, Elkhart, Ind., Oct. 2.

Flora.—At a previous meeting our elder, Bro. Ira Kreider, tendered his resignation, which was accepted at our last council meeting. Bro. Gilbert Stuckaugh was chosen elder by a large majority.—Mattie Wyeby, Flora, Ind., Sept. 29.

Ft. Wayne.—Since our last report six letters of membership have been received and several others are expected. More are moving to our busy city, and consequently the church has great reasons to rejoice. Any members desiring change of locations from a business point of view, can not find a better place anywhere in Northern Indiana than Ft. Wayne. The church needs all who can and will come. We are also glad to report that extensive improvements are being made on the church property. The interior of the building has been redecorated. Sept. 27 we met in council, with Eld. J. B. Miller as moderator. We decided to put in a new furnace and make needed repairs. After the work is completed, a series of meetings will be held, closing with a love feast. Any members, having knowledge of other members moving into our city, will please notify the writer of such movements and information will be given. The writer was chosen delegate to District Conference, to be held at Winona Lake, Oct. 29.—J. Ahner, 2726 Broadway, Ft. Wayne, Ind., Sept. 29.

Killbuck church met in council, with Eld. W. B. Browning in charge. The annual church visit was reported. Bro. Browning's time expired as elder, but he was retained indefinitely, as we are expecting to locate a resident elder soon. Our fall communion was set for Nov. 23, at 6:30 P. M., in the Pleasant Run house.—H. E. Millspaugh, Monroe, Ind., Sept. 30.

Logansport church met in council on Thursday evening, Sept. 25. The building of the new church is progressing, and we are glad to announce that our hope to dedicate it on the afternoon of Nov. 9, it certainly will be an appreciated gift of those interested in the work of the Lord at this place. We thank all of the dear givers. Our love feast will commence on the afternoon of Nov. 9. Bro. Jas. Hutter We set Thanksgiving evening for communion. Bro. Jas. Hutter was chosen as delegate to our District Meeting, with Bro. Harry Murphy as alternate. Other members were selected for local duties. Our elder, Bro. Stuckaugh, deserves our thanks, as an instrument in Our elder, Bro. Stuckaugh, deserves our thanks, as an instrument in God's hands, of forwarding the work of building; also Bro. grows. Our love is to grow; our zeal is to grow. In fact, our whole being is to grow, "till we all come in the unity of the faith . . . unto the stature of the fulness of Christ." All such are endued and imbued with the spirit of the Forward Movement in Christ.

But we need to have our goal set, fixed and fully provided for. Paul impresses that point thus: "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Paul's goal was in Christ Jesus. I feel sure that those distinguished religious leaders, who shall come to Christ with their pitiful appeal in the final day, were in a forward movement of some sort, but their goal was not in Christ Jesus. I think that the members of the church at Laodicea had their banner unfurled at full mast, in a forward movement. They had large crowds and plenty of money. In fact, their own boast was: "We have need of nothing." I think they had entertaining services, with large crowds, but their goal was too low—it was not in Christ Jesus and hence they did not go over the top. The Christian's goal is upward. We are to "seek those things which are above."

II. Coöperation

Coöperation still continues to be under consideration. New fields for operation seem to open up. Another anti-cigarette move is now being launched. There are fields in which our members can coöperate with other organizations, and then there are fields in which brethren can not coöperate without violating Gospel principles, hence the necessity of having the facts in the case clearly outlined. It is apparent that the recent decisive victory in the temperance cause was reached by a coöperation of the various churches and temperance organizations. In this our members wrought fully organized. This we could do, for there was no religious principle involved.

The same is true of our coöperative efforts with the Anti-secrecy Associations. The aim of each of the above is the good of the home and society. But to coöperate and affiliate with those who teach and practice a fragmentary Gospel, is a violation of Divine Law. The Israelites were to make no affiliation nor covenant relation with the nations around them. This law of restraint was violated, and how severely they were punished! Paul warned the Galatian church: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." How radically Paul did contend for a pure Gospel!

Would Paul affiliate or coöperate with such in worship now? John voices this Gospel restraint in the following strong language: "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him Godspeed is partaker of his evil deeds." He that knowingly harbors a violator of law and his stolen goods, becomes an accomplice in his crime. Religious leaders that teach a fragmentary Gospel, and omit Bible teaching, are guilty of the sin of omission. To receive them in our house of worship, we become partakers of their errors and their crime. To accept their teaching would be to accept of questionable goods, likely to imperil our eternal interests. We would be accomplices in their wrongs.

III. The Church of Tomorrow

The foregoing sub-title was the most important subject on the program of our recent Ministerial Meeting. It well merits careful consideration. We notice:

1. The church of today will be here tomorrow. It has come to stay till Christ comes again. Christ declares: "Upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." This text

Christ, will degenerate. Christ early taught: "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" These texts support my proposition. When Christ comes, "then shall the kingdom of heaven be like ten virgins." Only half of them were admitted into the bridal chamber. Paul says: "For that day shall not come except there come a falling away first." The editor of the Pathfinder reports: "Seventy-four Buddhist temples are now operated in the United States." Rev. L. C. Herbert, of the Episcopal church, now in the Chautauqua field, says: "The religious world is rapidly reeding into heathenism." The present status of both the political and religious world surely points that way. Let it be remembered that all former dispensations painfully degenerated, and Bible history is most remarkable for repeating its own history.

3. The church of Christ's planting will be reduced in numbers. Christ early taught: "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. . . . Broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. . . . Fear not, little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The conscientious reader will admit these clear statements, which literally support my proposition. We sing this truth thus:

> "Broad is the road that leads to death,
> And thousands walk together there;
> But wisdom shows a narrow path,
> With here and there a traveler."

The foregoing is sad, but Christ assured us: "I will not leave you comfortless," and the comfort we have amid this gloom is that salvation is free for all. "Whosoever will, may come."

IV. Riches

We are most timely warned in the Scriptures, of the danger of riches. A recent writer emphasizes the enormity of this evil in a condensed form thus: "Anxious care in getting them, constant fear in keeping them, enticement and temptation in using them, remorse and guilt in abusing them, the sorrow in losing them." Then, too, think of the burden, because of the account we must give concerning them.

The prayer for the Forward Movement is, "Thy Kingdom come."

In the Forward Movement we must remember the conservation of forces. The doctrine of conservation is essential to the onward drive.

In the Savior's teaching, salt stands for conservation of forces; and light stands for the Forward Movement. He puts salt first; and light second. Saving tends to acquisition. It is the momentum of our past integrity that must make the BIG DRIVE. We must HOLD ON to MOVE ON. We must hold our own to come into our own.

We shall be known and we shall win by our distinctive teachings. We shall be absorbed and lost by the elimination of these distinctive doctrines. The time and necessary evolution into world evangelization is the critical and powerful test of our right to exist. Consecrated religious craft is the burden of the hour.

Our 1919 General Conference, in all its phases, was truly a great one. As some suggested—"The biggest and the best."

The Minutes and the Full Report tell an interesting story. I was confined to a Summer School, and could not and did not attend. But the Full Report reads all the more interestingly.

Sister Beahm who, by the help of loving children and good friends, was permitted to attend, returned with much mark a still greater onward move in world-wide civiliz tion.

This afternoon, Sept. 21, I am being joyfully entertain in the home of Brother and Sister William Nolley, n Christiansburg, Va. Last night I enjoyed the home Brother and Sister John Poff, whose premises remind of a western home.

Sister Nolley and Brother Poff are children of Bro. J. whose name rings with missionary benevolence this neighborhood. It was Bro. J. W. Poff who, throu Brethren J. S. Showalter and G. A. Royer, some years a donated $30,000 to the missionary work of the church.

There ought to be more work done right here. The li church is struggling for unity and upbuilding. A ful manifestation of appreciation, upon the part of mis men, in behalf of the work at this place, would be help to the cause here.

Having come here by invitation for several services see good prospects for future development. Bro. Ja Keith, from Floyd County, moved here in June. He elder in charge.

Bro. John William Poff's body rests on a beaut northern slope, under a neat, modest stone in the Ch tiansburg cemetery. As one stands at the nicely-sod mound and thinks of the life that now goes on, work to save the lost, he is sweetly impressed.

Lost

BY VIOLA PRISER

WAIT! Just for a moment lay aside thoughts of everything else and think of the meaning of that one word—lost.

Have you lost anything lately? You have, you say, and the article in question, for certain reasons, you had valued very highly? Well! that was too bad, but how much worse it would have been if that article, that something, had been your soul! "Oh, I'm not concerned about that. I'm a Christian," perhaps you are thinking.

Listen! We have been warned that in "that day" many shall be expecting to hear words of welcome when, to their surprise and disappointment, they shall instead be commanded to depart, and will receive the information that he "never knew them."

Lost! Yes, forever lost. Sad to think about, isn't it? How often we hear the expression: "It is human to err," and how true it is! May not that be the reason that our Savior, who understands human nature so well, advised us to search the Scriptures and also warned us so tenderly: "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation"?

May not the fact that it is so easy for us human mortals to err—to fail to heed our Savior's warning—be the reason that our Heavenly Father sometimes sends sorrow instead of joy? Read the fourth chapter of Amos. Oh, how thankful we can be for any experience that may come to us when, for any reason, we may be numbered with the erring ones! We may well be thankful for any experience that makes us pause and think, that enables us to get a clear vision of our true spiritual condition and by so doing helps us to get right with God—be the experience ever so humiliating, ever so heart-breaking or, perhaps, the cause of suffering in some other way. Sometimes great sorrow helps to remove sin from our lives, and paves the way for the constant indwelling of the Holy Spirit in our hearts, and thus joy, such as we are unable to express, and a hungering and thirsting to do God's will, are some of the immediate results. The final result can and should be, with God's help, victory.

How significant are the following lines:

Why God's Children Suffer

I love my child, I note his slightest need;
I long to prosper him in all his ways,
To give him quiet nights and peaceful days,
But if I do, he'll lose himself from me,
My outstretched hand he will not wait to see;
I'll place a hindering wall before his feet;
There he will wait, and there we two will meet.
I do it not in wrath for broken laws
Or wilful disobedience, but because
I want him nearer, and I can not wait
For him to come, for he might wander late.
My child will wonder, will not understand.
Still half in doubt he'll clasp my outstretched hand;
But when at last upon my heart he leans
He will have ceased to wonder what it means.

In Him Was Life

BY PAUL MOHLER

I AM passing through Glacier National Park. High mountains rear their heads on either hand. Beautiful forests delight the eye. Wonders here are multiplied. The eye can not grasp them all. But one thing impresses me just now—the marvelous abundance of vegetation at this altitude and on this soil. How tenaciously the tiny pines and firs cling to the bare rock. How did they all get here—so high above the universal level? When these rocks were set on edge, when winds and rain and melting snow stripped bare their surface of its softer soil, what hope remained of trees and shrubs and clinging vines? Yet here they are, and beautiful to see!

Life has done it. Something within a seed takes hold of drops of water, grains of sand, fissures in the rock, and builds there a tree where fingers and toes of men could not support their weight. And what is life? Something in man that works God's will on earth, wherever it can find repose. Life is from God, and wonderful in all its work.

Is there ever a heart of stone—no soil, no crevice for the tiny seed? What God hath wrought in nature, he can work in hearts of stone, if but the seed be sown. Attend thou to sowing, to watering, perhaps to warming! God will do the rest.

Redemption of Sunday-School Music Through a Living Hymn-Book

Singing with Spirit and with Understanding

INSINCERE singing should have absolutely no place in our Sunday-school worship today. It has thrived altogether too long at such centers. Put a stop to it! If no other way presents itself, withdraw the privilege of singing for a season, or reduce such privilege to a minimum. Whet the appetite for it by its cessation; then bring it back with renewed vitality and skillful leadership.

We adults treat song as altogether perfunctory—"Hymn No. 26, first and last verses"—this is all there is to average hymn singing. Nothing more than a bad dime in the collection plate, vain repetition in prayer, or social hilarity after a tender communion service—all are alike a mockery of the Most High. God would have the best that we are and have—and we give him laziness, indifference, dull wit and cold heart in the doggerel and mumbling of our hymns. We are prone to sing the same old songs in the same old way, and that old way is utterly unprofitable.

How are boys and girls to realize that there is high privilege in singing, when superintendents and choristers use hymns as they would burlap or packing material—capital padding for the parts of an ill-arranged service of worship, or an admirable muffler for the opening and closing of windows or the holding of subcommittee meetings? Give song a high status, behind closed doors, with quiet, attention, interest, inspiration, and it will yield magnificent results.

Every Hymn Has Its Own Peculiar Message

Seek it! Study the text absolutely apart from the music! Hold the words up to the light—look through them and between them and behind them! Note, for instance, that certain hymns carry their message in their nouns. Look out for these key words, as in: "O Love that wilt not let me go." "O Light that followest all my way." "O Joy that seekest me through pain;" "O Cross that liftest up my head."

Or in the nouns and verbs combined, as in: "We've a story to tell to the nations," "We've a song to be sung to the nations," "We've a message to give to the nations," "We've a Savior to show to the nations."

Or in the verbs alone, as in: "Christian, dost thou see them?" "Christian, dost thou feel them?" "Christian dost thou hear them?"

Or adverbs: "Trustingly, trustingly, come I to thee," "Lovingly, joyfully, walk here with thee," "Happily, happily, pass I along," "Hopefully, hopefully, onward I go," "Cheerfully, cheerfully, meet I the foe."

Or adjectives. Read through the following list of adjectives and guess the new National Hymn, written by Prof. Katherine Lee Bates of Wellesley College: Spacious, Amber, Purple, Fruited, Shining, Pilgrim (used as adjective), Stern, Impassioned, Liberating, Patriot (as adjective), Alabaster, Human.

The tremendous power of this hymn resides in these adjectives. Study to know the truth of these great hymns and the truth shall make you free.

The Historic Backgrounds of Hymns

The hymn-book is a veritable wonder tale. It is full of biographical data for boy and girl. Its record of golden deeds through seventeen hundred years, all the way from the "Glory Be to the Father," of the second century, to the Lake Erie Storm Hymn, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," is fascinating.

Get at these great stories! Master them! Tell them as an emotional and devotional setting for hymns and make them the "telling" part of the worship.

Bishop Ken was one of the seven bishops thrust into the Tower of London by King Charles the Second. Thomas Ken was lion-hearted and pure of heart. Nothing deterred him from thundering forth the truth. King or peasant as audience, it made no difference. He preached with a passion for souls. The dissolute king used to say: "I must go and hear Ken tell me my faults." He heard and as often as he was incensed to the boiling point, that many times did Bishop Ken

The Christian's Relationship to the World

John 17—Mainly Verses 6, 9, 11, 14, 15, 18, 23

For Week Beginning October 17, 1919

1. Christians Are Separate from the Worldly-Minded in Aims and Desires.—"I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world" (Verse 6). The world, in one sense of the apostle, is a ruined mass, lying in the lap of the evil one; led astray by illusions and devices of the god of this world. The followers of Christ are WHOLLY DIFFERENT. In spirit they have been lifted up out of defiling environments, as out of a horrible pit of miry clay, and have been established in a new and heavenly relationship. "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world."

2. Christians Sustain a New Relationship.—"I pray for them" (Verse 9). When we are truly Christ's, we come under a new set of laws in the Kingdom of Grace. We are dealt with as CHILDREN of God, not as the mere offspring of his creative power. Christ loves his own with a love peculiar to himself. While he pities the lost ones, he has a special delight for his own. Because they are devotedly his, he is in heart and power for them. Thus all things work together for good to those that love him.

3. Christians Are in the World, Naturally Speaking.—(Verse 11.) As to their spirit and purpose, they do not partake of worldly influences, but as to bodily presence they are still in the world—this earth. They are IN THE WORLD BUT NOT OF IT, even as Christ was (verse 16): They are in the world as a light in darkness—not as slaves but as victors through Christ.

4. Christians Are Hated by the Worldly-Minded.—(Verse 14.) The God-given Word, when faithfully received, so transforms the minds and hearts of God's children that the worldly mind does not know them. So contrary do Christians become to the world's ways and maxims that they are HATED by the unregenerate minds. The worldly-wise can not comprehend the precious things revealed by Christ to his own. That being true, the hatred of the world is but a trifling matter to those whose hearts are filled with the love of God.

5. Christians Are Kept from the "Evil One."—(Verse 15, R. V.) Christ does not pray that his followers be taken out of their earthly environments, but that they be kept from the evil one who rules in it. How blessed that the Christians may be perpetual miracles and monuments of GOD'S PRESERVING GRACE in a world of darkness! In honor of Christ's name we may daily claim the fulfillment of Christ's prayer in our lives.

6. Christians Are Sent into the World for a Purpose.—(Verse 18.) Every Spirit-anointed one IS SENT to preach "good tidings" (Luke 4: 18). As Christ was sent into the world to seek and to save that which was lost, so are we. As he was an Ambassador of God, so also are we (2 Cor. 5: 20). "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you" (John 20: 21).

7. Christians Have Christ Within, to Be Workers for the World's Salvation.—(Verse 23.) As God SO loved the world that he gave his Son, so does the Son so love the world that he gives to it his SPIRIT-FILLED FOLLOWERS, endowing them with his fervor. "Christ liveth in me," says Paul (Gal. 2: 20), and we all know to what a God-honoring result this led. The one thing that this old world most seriously lacks, is THE LOVE OF GOD. If ever it is to be aroused from its lost condition, it must be by a full realization of the "Love" that saves to the uttermost.

8. Suggestive References.—Seek the best (Matt. 6: 33). God wants our whole-hearted service (Luke 16: 13). "Be not conformed to this world" (Rom. 12: 1, 2). "Christians chosen out of the world" (John 15: 19). Good advice (Titus 2: 12). The example of Moses (Heb. 11: 24-26). The world's friendship is enmity to God (James 4: 4, 9). Christians are but "strangers and pilgrims" (1 Peter 2: 11). Christians, being different from the worldly, incur antagonism (1 Peter 4: 3, 4). John's entreaty (1 John 2: 15-17).

trol men as to believe that if he "should ever desire to change the decision of Conference on dress, he could do so with any body of delegates we are likely to elect under the present system," then, why can we not believe even more strongly in his power to control the election of delegates in the local church, and later to control the decisions of that body of delegates of his own choosing? Why should we fear to seat, as delegates, any who come properly certified as having been elected by their home churches and recommended for their spiritual lives?

There are men and women—all of us know some such—who deeply love the church and are making great sacrifices financially and otherwise for her good, who are faithful in attendance at services and dependable for work, who pray much and study their Bibles, but who do not conform to the order of dress sufficiently to pass a credentials committee. On the other hand, we know only too well that plain coats sometimes cover up very worldly hearts, whose owners have never really sacrificed for the church, and are neither earnest Bible students nor are they men of prayer. For my part I can have more confidence in a Conference where the Spirit has been given freedom to choose the delegates on the basis of inner life and thought. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

Instead of men who are sure that the Spirit has led them, give us men who sincerely resolve that they will be led by the Spirit! Rather than men who have faith in the past, give us men with faith that the Spirit is leading in the present, and will lead in the future!

The Wayfarer.

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

THE Christian world should be gratified to know that the only pageant which has caused people to sit up into the wee small hours of morning, or to get up at three o'clock to purchase tickets, was a pageant which deals with Christianity as the great moving force in human life. This great scenic production, known as "The Wayfarer," was presented at the Centenary celebration of the Methodist Episcopal churches, recently held in Columbus, Ohio.

"The Wayfarer" represents the critical, cynical individual who says that Christianity is a failure, that it has not accomplished any great purpose in the world, and is destined for greater failure in the future.

He is looking upon the brutal scenes of the first German raid in Belgium, when he first expresses his sentiment. Then there follows the picture of the alleviating forces. The Red Cross workers appear on the scene. All the agencies of Christianity are shown, as they actually did appear, to comfort and heal the sufferers of that awful time. Understanding comes to The Wayfarer and he says: "You are mistaken in your judgment. Let me show you that the religion of Jesus Christ is not a failure, despite the fact that this terrible war is in progress."

For a time The Wayfarer is impressed by the scenes which Understanding shows him. But again he becomes pessimistic and says that if Christianity had been the power its followers had claimed for it, such things could never have been.

Understanding shows him the great scenes in the life of Christ, yet the person of Jesus himself is never visible. The triumphal entry is portrayed and again The Wayfarer is half converted to a belief in Christianity. But he falls back again when there is thrown upon the screen the picture of Calvary and the crucifixion. Then, as the curtain falls, and the audience is by a choir of several thousand voices, The Wayfarer beholds the scene of the resurrection and he bows in humble allegiance to the Christ.

We may well be thankful for any experience that makes us pause and think, that enables us to get a clear vision of our true spiritual condition and by so doing helps us to get right with God—be the experience ever so humiliating, ever so heart-breaking or, perhaps, the cause of suffering in some other way. Sometimes great sorrow helps to remove sin from our lives, and paves the way for the constant indwelling of the Holy Spirit in our hearts, and thus joy, such as we are unable to express, and a hungering and thirsting to do God's will, are some of the immediate results. The final result can and should be, with God's help, victory.

How significant are the following lines:

Why God's Children Suffer

I love my child, I note his slightest need;
I long to prosper him in all his ways,
To give him quiet nights and peaceful days,
But if I do, he'll lose himself from me,
My outstretched hand he will not wait to see;
I'll place a hindering wall before his feet;
There he will wait, and there we two will meet.
I do it not in wrath for broken laws
Or wilful disobedience, but because
I want him nearer, and I can not wait
For him to come, for he might wander late.
My child will wonder, will not understand,
Still half in doubt he'll clasp my outstretched hand;
But when at last upon my heart he leans
He will have ceased to wonder what it means.

In Him Was Life

BY PAUL MOHLER

I AM passing through Glacier National Park. High mountains rear their heads on either hand. Beautiful forests delight the eye. Wonders here are multiplied. The eye can not grasp them all. But one thing impresses me just now—the marvelous abundance of men could not support their weight. And what is lif Something in man that works God's will on ear wherever it can find repose. Life is from God, a wonderful in all its work.

Is there ever a heart of stone—no soil, no crevice f the tiny seed? What God hath wrought in nature, can work in hearts of stone, if but the seed be sow Attend thou to sowing, to watering, perhaps to war ing! God will do the rest.

Redemption of Sunday-School Music Through a Living Hymn-Book

Singing with Spirit and with Understanding

INSINCERE singing should have absolutely no pl in our Sunday-school worship today. It has thri altogether too long at such centers. Put a stop to If no other way presents itself, withdraw the privil of singing for a season, or reduce such privilege t minimum. Whet the appetite for it by its cessati then bring it back with renewed vitality and skil leadership.

We adults treat song as altogether perfunctor "Hymn No. 26, first and last verses"—this is there is to average hymn singing. Nothing more t a bad dime in the collection plate, vain repetitio prayer, or social hilarity after a tender commu service—all are alike a mockery of the Most H God would have the best that we are and have— we give him laziness, indifference, dull wit and heart in the doggerel and mumbling of our hy We are prone to sing the same old songs in the s old way, and that old way is utterly unprofitable.

How are boys and girls to realize that there is privilege in singing, when superintendents and ch ters use hymns as they would burlap or packing terial—capital padding for the parts of an ill-arra service of worship, or an admirable muffler for opening and closing of windows or the holding of committee meetings? Give song a high status, be closed doors, with quiet, attention, interest, inspira and it will yield magnificent results.

Every Hymn Has Its Own Peculiar Message

Seek it! Study the text absolutely apart from music! Hold the words up to the light—look thr them and between them and behind them! Note instance, that certain hymns carry their messag their nouns. Look out for these key words, a "O Love that wilt not let me go," "O Light that lowest all my way," "O Joy that seekest me thr pain," "O Cross that liftest up my head."

Or in the nouns and verbs combined, as in: "W a story to tell to the nations," "We've a song t sung to the nations," "We've a message to give t nations," "We've a Savior to show to the nations

Or in the verbs alone, as in: "Christian, dost see them?" "Christian, dost thou feel them?" "C tian dost thou hear them?"

Or adverbs: "Trustingly, trustingly, come thee," "Lovingly, joyfully, walk here with t "Happily, happily, pass I along," "Hopefully, fully, onward I go," "Cheerfully, cheerfully, o the foe."

Or adjectives. Read through the following li adjectives and guess the new National Hymn, w by Prof. Katherine Lee Bates of Wellesley Col Spacious, Amber, Purple, Fruited, Shining, Pi (used as adjective), Stern, Impassioned, Liber Patriot (as adjective), Alabaster, Human.

The tremendous power of this hymn resides in adjectives. Study to know the truth of these

Bro. Jesse Emmert is to attend the District gatherings of Northeastern Kansas, Oct. 19-21, in the Appanoose church.

The heartfelt sympathies of all our readers will go out to Bro. A. F. Wine and family, of Chicago. Bro. Wine's son, eleven years of age, was killed by a fast train as it was passing near their home, Sunday afternoon, the fifth. Brother and Sister Wine, it will be remembered, served the church for a number of years as missionaries in Denmark. May the comfort of faith in a Loving Father be theirs.

The date for the sailing of the missionaries to Sweden and Denmark is Oct. 22. The party will consist of Brother and Sister J. F. Graybill, who return to Sweden, and Brother and Sister W. E. Glasmire and children, who go to Denmark. Communications for any of the party should be mailed in ample time, and addressed to them at New York City, care of S. S. Stockholm, Swedish-American Line, sailing Oct. 22.

Bro. A. J. Culler's relief work in the Near East has evidently been greatly appreciated by the American Committee. Some time ago he was appointed Director of the work for Marash and all surrounding territory. He hopes to be able to return to America about the first of the New Year, so as to resume his college work with the beginning of the second semester. Until further notice he may be addressed at Marash, Turkey.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

Utilizing the Airplane for Evangelistic Tours.—Rev. O. E. Hamilton, of Mountain Grove, Mo., a Disciple minister, is probably the first evangelist in history to make use of the airplane to travel from one appointment to another. His first flight was from Mineral Wells to Wrightwood, Texas—a distance of 130 miles. Friends at Mineral Wells provided the necessary means for the trip—$100. While the novelty of the undertaking might in this case measurably justify the comparatively large expenditure, most evangelists will probably prefer to get along, for a while at least, with present means of transportation—far more reasonable in price and, as a rule, much safer.

No Man Is Created for Himself Alone.—Too often we forget that perfection, as a created being, can not be gained by a hermit life. It takes the rub of contact with other men to make one truly a man. The companionable faculties of our natures must be developed. To make the most of himself a man must be on good terms with others, for it is only through his relations with others that he can hope to achieve the highest degree of success for himself. "No man liveth unto himself," was said by one of old. It impresses a truth that is occasionally forgotten in this busy age, in which self-interest is too often the governing factor of all we think, say, and do.

The Great Need of the Age.—As the Bystander views the present situation of growing laxity, even among professors of religion, he is more than ever impressed with the need of character that endures, though all else fail. Character is the sum total of the whole man—whether Satanic or Godlike. It will be one or the other. The difference between a Nero and a Paul simply grows out of the difference in their relation to God. The one Perfect Man in the world was perfect in his character because he was perfect in his relations to God. Sin had no dominion over him. He was in full control of himself, which means much. When his entire life was scanned by the judge, the verdict was: "I find in him no fault at all." Here is our Ideal of a perfect character.

"Be of Good Cheer."—This is the command of the Lord, directed to all his believing children, though some of us are all too prone to forget it. A French lady, during her first visit in New York, exclaimed: "Every man you meet looks as if he'd gone out to borrow trouble, with plenty of it on hand. They are thieves, every one of them. They rob their fellow-men of moral sunshine, of the brightness that might be theirs." One thing is sure—God gets no glory out of melancholy. A sour visage and a morose disposition are no inspiration to any one. Of all persons in the world, Christians should be foremost in cultivating a spirit of good cheer. It is their privilege. It has the "quality of mercy." It is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor and all who come under its benign influence. It is a daily boon to him who wears it, and a constant, overflowing benediction to all his friends.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Sunday-School as a Vital Factor

According to actual figures, submitted by Dr. Edgar Blake, corresponding secretary of the Board of Sunday-schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, more than 1,600,000 attendants of Methodist Sunday-schools have united with the Methodist Episcopal church during the last ten years. In order to secure 1,000,000 converts by June, 1920, as contemplated by the Forward Movement plan of that church, a systematic effort has been set on foot, by leaders of that organization, to draw upon their Sunday-school pupils for the bulk of that quota. Undoubtedly the Sunday-school is the chief source of strength for the church of the future.

Aggressive Evangelism

In 1836 the American Baptist Church started its work in Europe with the baptism of seven repentant souls in the river Elbe, at Hamburg. Making use of that humble beginning as a sort of fulcrum, the Baptist propaganda was swung into Denmark, Norway, Russia, Switzerland, Austria, and the Balkan States. There are now 3,073 Baptist churches in Europe, with 2,690 ordained ministers and 206,251 members. All this being purely missionary propaganda, the showing is a most creditable one. Equally aggressive action by the Church of the Brethren, during the far longer period of its existence in the United States, might have enabled us to make a showing of at least 300,000.

Church Publicity at Its Best

So much is being said about advertising the various forms of church activity through the press, that we almost forget, sometimes, that not all the best publicity is gained by means of printers' ink. When all else has been tried, quite often the best advertisement for a church is the one that goes around in shoeleather. There is nothing quite so eloquent as the consistent life of the believer. Many people have been attracted to the church by the cordial invitations of the members, rather than by a printed card. Then, too, it is well to remember that it always pays "to talk your church up." It may help the one whom you meet, and will surely rekindle your own enthusiasm.

Russians in America Awakening

Increasing demand for Russian Bibles, in Philadelphia and other cities, has led to the discovery that a notable awakening has set in among Russians in the United States. Before the war little progress was made by Gospel workers among Russians in this country. Since the war, however, there has been a very decided change, and their longing for instruction, regarding the Christian religion, can hardly be met. In places where formerly the missionary was unwelcome, now he is greeted eagerly and listened to attentively. Within the past three months, three missionaries, working exclusively among the Russian people, have disposed of 616 copies of the Bible—these being bought by people who really wanted them. Surely, here is an open door of opportunity!

A Generous Gift

Mr. John D. Rockefeller's recent gift of $2,000,000 for the advancement of medical education is a peculiarly timely and very acceptable contribution to science. Much of the wealth of the oil magnate has already been dedicated to the accumulation and diffusion of knowledge, whereby the ills of mankind may be most efficiently diagnosed and cured. By means of his last donation Mr. Rockefeller hopes to utilize, for the benefit of the human race, the lessons taught by experiences in surgery, preventive medicine and sanitation to military and civilian practitioners during the period of the war. It is made possible, by the fund so generously provided, to enter into the most extensive research work. The store of information thus accumulated, will be a priceless possession, of undoubted value to every practitioner.

Unutilized Forces of Nature

Recent displays of the "aurora borealis," or "northern lights," caused serious disturbances to telegraphic communications, reminding even the keenest electrical experts that superior electric forces are all about earth's surface, though man has not yet learned to make them do his bidding. For some time Sir Charles Parsons, a noted

Hoover's Warning Words

Referring to economic conditions in war-strieken E rope at the present time, Mr. Herbert Hoover recent said: "The Central Powers collapsed not only from mi this race, the Allies were not far behind. By this e haustion, the whole of Europe faced a famine, the like which had not been seen since the thirty years' wa ferring to the revolution in Russia, he said: "Althou to have wrecked itself on the rock of production, I b lieve it was necessary for the world to have this demo stration. It is not necessary, however, that the Unit States should plunge its own population into these mi eries."

Dominance of Labor Unions

As reported in cable messages, the arbitrary attitu assumed by compositors and pressmen of the Lond newspapers is most disquieting. These men are arrogati to themselves the right to dictate editorial opinion in t newspapers with which they are connected. On a rec evening, compositors and pressmen held up the public tion of the "London Daily Sketch" until an editori strongly criticising the railway strikers, was deleted.
other offices some of the most preposterous demands urged, to which, in many cases, the publishers and edit are compelled to submit. One is made to wonder whet autocracy, exercised by a labor union, is less objectiona than the justly-deprecated Prussian variety. Even in t country, employers are often placed in most embarrassi situations by the rigid restrictions, imposed by some the unions, seriously interfering with their business ent prises.

Bible Texts in Street Cars

Almost any article of commerce is advertised in str cars—doubtlessly with gratifying results, or it would be continued. A similar display of Bible texts, howe is something entirely new. A wealthy St. Louis lady c ceived the idea that Bible passages might thus be m helpful to people on their way to and from work—when they would need their message most. She consid the outlay—$500 per month—as money well spent, tho she does not reveal her identity. She makes her selecti with great care, choosing those passages that are m helpful. That the texts are noticed, is evidenced by fact that the advertising agency in charge of the work already received nearly a thousand inquiries as to origin and import of the citations. St. Louis dailies h commented favorably on them, and even a Jewish jou has uttered words of praise. Eternity alone will reveal actual fruitage.

The Decreasing Number of Ministers

Owing to the pressure of economic conditions, the mi ters of many of America's churches are leaving the pu for better-paying forms of activity. The Presbyte Church reports three thousand vacant pulpits, and vari conferences of the Methodist Church are unable to su ministers for all appointments. A failure of the congr tions, to respond with needed increases of salary to m higher costs of living, is assigned as the main reason the vacant pulpits. A rural survey of a county in T nessee, just completed by the Interchurch World Mo ment, reveals the fact that the average pay of minister that district is but $71.08 per year. In a population 6,700, there are only 826 active members, divided am twenty-three churches. Undoubtedly the churches ev where need to bestir themselves in a more adeq recognition of the fact that the laborer in the Lord's v yard is worthy of his hire.

Parental Responsibility

As might be expected, the deplorable prevalence of lessness, now sweeping over our country, is having a cidedly pernicious effect upon the rising generation a most impressionable period. Court officials stand appa at the gigantic wave of crime apparent everywhere, are wondering as to the fateful harvest from such a ful sowing. With increasing arrests and convictions, c continues without apparent decrease. Facts indicate the prevalent tendency to violence is due to unchec moral delinquency, rather than desperation caused by nomical conditions. Laboring men and women have take care of myself. Yes, I live alone. Jennie wanted to come and live with me. The whole family picked her out as being the one to do it, but I said: 'No. It makes so much extra to have some one around all the time, and then there would be the beaux and everything. I'd rather stay alone. I have gotten my own girls safely through the beau stage and I don't want to take any more on at my age.'

"I have stopped doing some things. I have done my part of some kinds of work and now that I have a few years left, I am going to do the things I want to. All the children came, after father died, and insisted that I live with them. It would be too lonesome, they said. It is, in a way, but then, you know, I sort of feel that father, right over there, is waiting. I miss him, but it isn't for long. And so, all the more, I want these last few years to myself.

"But I wouldn't be stubborn. When they all insisted, I said I would give it a trial. I went and lived with each one a while. That is where I was all last winter. Mary had just had her fifth baby. It was cross and I came in very handy to rock it and do the mending. I've raised my babies, and I got pretty tired. So I went to see Alice. She had just had her first and she was so particular about it that she didn't want any one to touch it. That was as bad as having to take care of one all the time. I stayed there quite a while, though, and got real rested.

"Then I stayed a while with William. He has a good wife, but she is very particular. She does her work differently from the way I do mine and it just seemed she couldn't stand to have me do anything any way but her way. I didn't say anything but I went on to see Carrie pretty soon. Carrie is awfully good, but I guess I spoiled her quite a bit. She was my baby and she thought when mother came that would be her chance for a rest. Well, I didn't have a rest.

"One day when they were all gathered around the table for a Sunday dinner, I said:

"'Children, I'm going home to live alone.'

"They talked a lot and argued a lot, but I didn't change. I guess they have all learned that when I decide on a thing they may as well give in. I had decided and I stuck to it. So I came and here I am.

"I have a telephone, and some of the people come to see me almost every day. I like that. There aren't any crying babies or particular mothers, or fussy housewives, or spoiled daughters here. I suppose I am somewhat spoiled myself to be so cranky. Yet, I think that if I want to be cranky, that should be my right. I have earned it by eighty-two years of work.

"No, I haven't any kitchen cabinet in my kitchen. The girls wanted to get me one, a couple of years ago, for Christmas. But I wouldn't have it. I told them I had had one place for my salt and sugar ever since I was married, and if I would have to go hunting around in all these new-fangled jars, to find my salt and sugar, I never would get a meal. I use my old kitchen table and the same cupboard that I started out with.

"William's wife said she couldn't get along without her cabinet. I guess she will feel the same when she is eighty and her daughter wants her to use some new contraption that will be the thing for kitchens in that day. I was so proud of my cupboard when it was new. Father and I looked at it so long before we got it. We couldn't afford it; we knew that. But how I did want it and he wanted me to have it just as bad. Finally, I gave up getting it altogether. Then, one day, father brought it home on the back of the wagon as a surprise. He had gotten a little extra money that he wasn't expecting, and he spent it on me. That's the way he always was. I wouldn't give up using that cupboard for all the cabinets in the world.

"Yes, I am living here alone, with my memories and my old things, and I am doing the things I never had time to do before."

God grant that we may contend with other churches as the vine with the olive—as to which shall bear the best fruit. Let us not argue as the brier and the thistle—which is the most unprofitable.

Redemption of Sunday-School Music

Through a Living Hymn-Book

languish in chains and confinement. Once he was imprisoned for over two months.

Ken was a musician and a lover of boys. For his lads of Winchester School he wrote three immortal hymns, the last stanza of each hymn being:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all creatures here below;
Praise him above, ye heavenly host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

Thomas Ken died in suffering and poverty, with only his books, his flute, his hymns, and his Greek Testament about him, which latter is said to have opened of its own accord to the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. But his Doxology—how it has girdled the globe, "chanted by people and realms of every tongue"!

The story of "Christian, Dost Thou See Them?" is the story of a man who deserted his mother church, traveled to Constantinople to attend an heretical convention, and was caught there in the meshes of error and false doctrine. On his way back to Crete he was shipwrecked and was thrown among pirates. He turned missionary among his rough captors and became their leader in ways of Christianity. Eventually he reached his home island, there to confess his sins, tell his story, and warn other Christians to beware of tempting voices. He did all this through the dramatic strophes of his Hymn of Battle:

"Christian, dost thou see them
On the holy ground,
How the powers of darkness
Rage thy steps around?

"Christian, dost thou hear them,
How they speak thee fair:
'Always fast and vigil;
Always watch and prayer'?"

The Hymn Book of Famous Men and Women

Within the covers of a standard church or Sunday-school hymn-book is to be found a galaxy of famous men and women. Play up these great names. Catch the nonsinging boy with the thrill of men and women who have done great things in the history of the race.

Here are statesmen and scientists, kings and emperors, prelates, and reformers, essayists and dramatists, musicians, and artists, soldiers and sailors, troubadours and poets, invalids, prisoners. Make very clear the fact that many of our own American statesmen, scientists, and poets were strong hymn writers and hymn experts. John Hay, Secretary of State under McKinley, wrote several strong hymns. President Wilson was one of the editors of the most authoritative hymn-book published in fifty years. He used to ride into New York City from Princeton with his bundle of hymn manuscript under his arm. Whittier, Bryant, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, were all hymn writers.

Many of the rapt singers of the hymn-book were invalids, deaf, blind—John Milton, Beethoven, Miss Havergal, Fanny Crosby, Henry Smart, George Matheson—and yet none of them pour out any penitential or lachrymose strains, but rather such high-powered expressions as: "True-hearted, Whole-hearted," "My God, I Thank Thee Thou Hast Made the Earth so Bright," "O Joy That Seekest Me Through Pain."

Hints as to Hymn Singing and Interpretation

"Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty." Sing deliberately, about forty seconds for each stanza. Observe commas after each "Holy." Sing the first two stanzas strong and broad. Start the third stanza softly, for the thought is now of "darkness," and "sinful man," and "not seeing." The fourth stanza should open majestically and should enlist every one that hath breath on the words: "All thy works shall praise thy name in earth, and sky, and sea."

"Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne" is full of delicate and sensitive touches. It also reverts to bold, swift strokes. The word but forms the transition from loud to soft in the first stanza; from soft to softer and slower in the third stanza; from smooth and sustained to biting, ejaculatory speech in the fourth.

Some hymns are invariably played and sung too fast, as: "There's a Widness in God's Mercy," "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," "O Worship the King," "Ancient of Days," "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," "Break Thou the Bread of Life" (the shortest hymn in all hymn literature).

Other hymns are invariably sung too slowly and lazily, as: "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Fairest Lord Jesus," "Come, Ye Faithful, Raise the Strain," "Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart," "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Hymns need to be of certain length in order to create their own mood. To sing one or two stanzas only is to build nothing, to grip nowhere, to touch juvenile hearts not at all. If hurried through, hymns have no body, no continuance, no emotional glow, no climactic urge. Hymns will never seem long if sung with expression, with variety, with the play of light and shade, of hot and cold, of fast and slow, of loud and soft. Be in deadly earnestness in all that is sung; express fully what is in text, music, history, devotional content.

And do not judge a hymn by its first lines, or first stanza. "Peace, Perfect Peace," sounds like a most promising peace hymn, but it develops into a hymn of considerable struggle and uncertainty.

"Thy Word Is Like a Garden, Lord," is just one-fourth of the total truth. The other three-fourths about God's Word reads: "Thy Word is like a deep, deep mine," "Thy Word is like a starry host," "Thy Word is like an armory."

And then follows a beautiful and intense prayer. Oh, the shame, the shortsightedness of our leadership which tears hymns to tatters, omitting indispensable stanzas of description, of belief, of history, on which is finally reared, in the last stanza, the superstructure of prayer and praise!

Note the great prayers that close these immortal patriotic hymns:

"Our fathers' God, to thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee we sing:
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King."

And—

"America! America!
God shed his grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea."

—H. Augustine Smith, in the New Century Teacher.

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

A REVIVAL IN SONG

Song is of such great importance in our worship, and the development of it has been so sadly neglected in a great part of our Brotherhood, that we wish to give an account of some special work done in the Middle District of Maryland during the spring and summer, which may prove an inspiration to other Districts.

Prof. B. F. Wampler, of Bridgewater, Va., was the originator of the movement and by canvassing the different churches, succeeded in arousing sufficient interest to get seven churches to organize singing-classes, ranging in size from twenty-four to nearly two hundred, to meet on certain evenings of the week, until all should have twelve lessons. These classes consisted of members of various denominations, for everybody in the communities close by was invited, regardless of creed. This being something new, some were slow to take part, but as the work progressed, they greatly regretted their failure to get full benefit.

Prof. Wampler taught the rudiments of theory of music from Prof. E. T. Hildebrand's little book, "First Lessons in Singing," and also practiced untiringly on a great many of the songs in our "Kingdom Songs No. 2." He not only traveled back and forth, from place to place, in a radius of about fifteen miles each day, but also gave private voice lessons to a number of scholars at different places.

At the end of the session there was a final All-day Meeting of the classes August 13, in the Hagerstown church, which kindly opened her doors to this Convention. A splendid program was rendered, consisting of three sessions—morning, afternoon and evening.

Eld. S. D. Hartranft, of Mangansville, Md., spoke on "What the Scriptures Teach Us in Regard to Song," and Prof. F. F. Holsopple, former president of Blue Ridge College, now pastor of the Hagerstown church, gave an address relative to song.

The results of Prof. Wampler's work were very notice-

The habit of trying to find in others something which we can appreciate, is a most worthy one to foster. Not only is it in complete harmony with the Golden Rule, but it is also an excellent antidote for fault finding, to which deplorable habit one is sometimes unconsciously addicted.

Knowing how to appreciate in others the good which they have already done, and the possibilities for future good which we see in them, is an invaluable gift. It makes friends and serves to cement ties of friendships when formed.

Appreciation is a splendid tonic for depressed spirits. How frequently, when to some friend all looks dark and uncertain, and he is about to give up the fight, a whole-hearted " slap on the back " and a few cheerful words of appreciation, sincerely spoken, will serve to renew his spirits and make him, subsequently, a victor in his battle! Truly, it is " as ointment poured forth " to the soul earnestly endeavoring to do what is right in the face of adverse criticism or determined and discouraging opposition.

Again; one's chances of happiness and contentment in any community are enhanced very much by knowing how to appreciate the good in one's neighbors. But, alas, too frequently, it is to be feared, many folks seem to hold toward their neighbors an attitude similar to that of the schoolboy who, when his teacher asked the question: " Johnnie, what do you understand to be your duty to your neighbor? " replied, " Please, sir, to keep my eye on him! "

Truly, in most instances at least, " as we measure to our neighbor he will measure back to us," and, if we sincerely seek to find, in those with whom we associate, something worthy of our appreciation, be it ever so small, the effort put forth will pay large dividends. And then, too, our own mistakes and shortcomings are likely to be much less noticeable to others.

In business, too, the employer who practices the art of appreciating the work done for him, and makes his employés feel all the while that he looks on them with an appreciative eye, will always secure larger results than the man who is forever grumbling and harshly criticising his workers.

The ability to appreciate is one of the finest of Christian graces. It is a beautiful and valuable gift—and yet it is within reach of any one who would possess it! The poorest speaker can appreciate and welcome the gift of helpful speech or beautiful song in another. A man himself may be unable to deliver a great oration or sermon. He may be incapable of singing or playing an instrument; but if some thought expressed, or the words of some song serves to help him, he can let his appreciation be known, and the knowledge of having been helpful will inspire his benefactor to greater effort on the next occasion. The presence of a single sympathetic, appreciative listener in a congregation will often enable the pastor to bring to his people a doubly effective and helpful message.

Many people are prone to magnify their own defects until they can see little else in their lives. How helpful and valuable to such person is the sincere friend who will point out the nobility possible in that life! The Master, while on earth, could have found much fault with the lives of his disciples and followers. But did he? No! He sought to inspire them by his appreciation of their efforts. He told them they were " the light of the world " and " the salt of the earth." He did not point out to them their failures, but, on the contrary, tried to show them the beautiful, noble, and splendid lives it was possible for them to live.

And we, as followers of Jesus, will do wisely and well in seeking to emulate his example. In our work take care of myself. Yes, I live alone. Jennie wanted to come and live with me. The whole family picked her out as being the one to do it, but I said: 'No. It makes so much extra to have some one around all the time, and then there would be the beaux and everything. I'd rather stay alone. I have gotten my own girls safely through the beau stage and I don't want to take any more on at my age.'

" I have stopped doing some things. I have done my part of some kinds of work and now that I have a few years left, I am going to do the things I want to. All the children came, after father died, and insisted that I live with them. It would be too lonesome, they said. It is, in a way, but then, you know, I sort of feel that father, right over there, is waiting. I miss him, but it isn't for long. And so, all the more, I want these last few years to myself.

" But I wouldn't be stubborn. When they all insisted, I said I would give it a trial. I went and lived with each one a while. That is where I was all last winter. Mary had just had her fifth baby. It was cross and I came in very handy to rock it and do the mending. I've raised my babies, and I got pretty tired. So I went to see Alice. She had just had her first and she was so particular about it that she didn't want any one to touch it. That was as bad as having to take care of one all the time. I stayed there quite a while, though, and got real rested.

" Then I stayed a while with William. He has a good wife, but she is very particular. She does her work differently from the way I do mine and it just seemed she couldn't stand to have me do anything any way but her way. I didn't say anything but I went on to see Carrie pretty soon. Carrie is awfully good, but I guess I spoiled her quite a bit. She was my baby and she thought when mother came that would be her chance for a rest. Well, I didn't have a rest.

" One day when they were all gathered around the table for a Sunday dinner, I said:

" ' Children, I'm going home to live alone.'

" They talked a lot and argued a lot, but I didn't change. I guess they have all learned that when I decide on a thing they may as well give in. I had decided and I stuck to it. So I came and here I am.

" I have a telephone, and some of the people come to see me almost every day. I like that. There aren't any crying babies or particular mothers, or fussy housewives, or spoiled daughters here. Nocona.—Our community has been abundantly blessed with a ge working hard to get them paid for. The most are renting, and some will have a hard time getting through the winter.

While the church activities are not up to the standard we would like to see, yet the people are anxious to learn and do, and we are praying that we may be of much use in directing them in the right direction. Much teaching will be needed, regarding the principles and doctrines of the Bible, as taught by the Brethren.

We are very much pleased with the increased interest since we have come here, and ask an interest in the prayers of God's people in our behalf.

Those who would like to help us with clothing or new goods, should send their packages prepaid to the writer. We will greatly appreciate all help, thus received, and we assure you that we will do our best in placing all supplies where they will do the most good, and redound to the glory of God.

Prof. Samuel Fike was with us on the evening of Sept. 16 and gave us a very interesting lecture on the subject of "The Two Ways." The chart which he uses in this lecture makes his points very clear.

We will indeed appreciate having ministers stop with us while passing through the city. Wm. E. Thompson.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE

Sept. 13 proved to be an uplifting day for the boys and rls who were privileged to attend the County Conference the young people's division, at Somerset, Pa.
The theme of the Conference was "Christian Patriot-m." The Conference verse was: "Watch ye, stand fast the faith, quit you like men, be strong."
The two State workers, in charge of the Conference, emed to understand young people, and presented the big uths of life in such a way that they went straight to the art.
After spending some time, during the afternoon, disssing the different activities—physical, mental, social and ligious—of the organized class, a period was given over physical recreation, in which all heartily joined.
The closing session of the day proved to be the climax the meeting. A strong plea was made for deeper concration on the part of the young people.
Before adjourning, a friendship circle was formed by all ining hands in a large circle about the auditorium—first aying for the one on the right, and then for the one on e left, and closing with a verse of "Blest Be the Tie hat Binds."
That the boys and girls were benefited was demonrated on the Sunday following the Conference, when ose who attended from the Scalp Level church used the eater part of the time, set apart for the evening services, telling of the good things they received.
Scalp Level, Pa. Amy Manges.

DELEGATES

On reading the article, under the above title, by Sister Whisler, in a recent issue of the "Gospel Messenger," y thoughts went back to June, 1886, when I was a little rl. At that time my mother, Mrs. N. E. Lilligh, of Mul-erry Grove, Ill., was sent as a delegate to Conference om that church.
She was the first sister delegated to that important ork. Next year Sister Wolfe, also of Illinois, afterwards ife of Bro. John Metzger, was sent. Since then sisters ve been sent, more or less, each year. Bro. J. H. Moore as on the Committee of Credentials that year, and Bro.
J. Rosenberger was doorkeeper.

ne. Bro. J. S. Bowlus, of the Pleasant View congrega-on, and our District Missionary Secretary, planned the ip and helped to carry it out. Though the day was very arm and the roads dusty, yet we received great inspira-on and believe that those visited also were greatly in-pired, and appreciated what was done.
Bro. W. H. Bradley, of McKearneyville, W. Va., was ith us at Bunker Hill and Leetown, and gave very in-resting talks. Brethren J. S. Bowlus and S. F. Spitzer

Sept. 14 South Brownsville had an all-day Children's eeting. Bro. Silas Utz, of New Market, Md., gave seval inspiring talks. There were also talks by the home rethren. The children did their part well.
The following Sunday West Brownsville Sunday-school

What It Means to Hold Up Christ

A FRIEND has been telling me that the proper concern of the church is not saving men and women but holding up Christ. Let Christ, not men, be the center of your thought, he says. Preach Christ, hold up Christ. Some will be saved thereby, but that is nothing for us to be concerned about. And so he goes on, underscoring heavily the magic words, HOLD UP CHRIST.

There is an element of humor in such a contention, despite the terrible seriousness of the subject with which it deals. The dear friend seems not to realize that he is doing nothing at all but practicing a sort of sleight-of-hand with words. He is merely playing with a pretty phrase. He has dangled it before his eyes until the brilliancy of the coloring has blinded him to the great crowd of hungry, suffering, soul-starving men standing around him and crying out for help.

Paul believed in holding up Christ. So much so that he was determined to know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified. But he always held Christ up before men. He looked straight into their eyes and used every energy of his great impassioned soul in trying to persuade them to accept the Christ he was holding up. "I am again in travail until Christ be formed in you," he said once in the utter abandon of his anxiety about the people he loved so intensely. Paul was concerned about human beings.

The idea that you can hold up Christ without trying to make Christians out of men and women is a delusion and a snare. You can not magnify the first commandment by trampling the second under foot.

That "False But Fascinating Passion"

WHY is it that some Christians try so hard to cure the rest of us of that "false but fascinating passion of saving the world"? Did Jesus know we would find it so "fascinating"? Wonder he did not warn us against getting too much stirred up over it!

Especially after telling us that this is just what he himself came into the world for. It was such a natural inference, you know, to think that Jesus would be pleased if we would try to help him realize the object of his coming.

It's a "fascinating" passion, we admit. The charge of "false" we leave to others.

Another Variety of Spurious Spirituality

BUT there is a more pernicious type of "moonshine" spirituality than that which contents itself with decrying human attainments and making extravagant claims of its own intimacy with God. It is the type which practically shuts out of its concern the conditions and needs of men that it may give itself entirely to the contemplation of "holy things"!

As if there could be something holier than passing on, to a fellow-mortal, a little of the love which God has shown to you and me! As if that "inasmuch" of Jesus in Matthew twenty-five were nothing but a pleasant little joke!

Can you pardon it, gentle reader, if the earnestness of these lines seems to verge upon impatience? It is not easy to speak with restraint upon a matter so important. Especially if you doubt whether one ought to speak about it with restraint.

And will you take the charitable view, also, if you think you discover a failure to appreciate at full value the temperament which delights in the law of Jehovah and loves to meditate upon it day and night? Any such failure is quite unintentional. For we should, in fact, like nothing better than to send the whole church to her knees for three days and nights upon a diet of bread and water, that she might betake herself to penitential searchings of heart and of the Word. And that she might arise therefrom and go forth with new vision and power, a new baptism of the Holy Spirit, to the great task which confronts her.

When so many Christians are so busy with their worldly ambitions that they have no time for prayer and Bible study and meditation upon spiritual things, let no word be spoken to discourage, in the smallest measure, what needs so much encouragement. A true spirituality is one of the things which can not be overdone. It is the spurious varieties that work the mischief. And none of these is more hurtful than that which seems to be so occupied with the contemplation of heavenly things that it takes no interest in the present distresses and problems of living men and women.

The viciousness of this brand of spurious spirituality is that it postulates a false antithesis. Assuming to hold a monopoly on the doctrine of salvation through "Jesus Christ and him crucified," it sets this up in contrast to the "social service" idea, implying that the two are antagonistic. It seldom misses an opportunity to throw a good sized bucket of ice water on any systematic effort to improve social conditions. It delights in pointing out that what the downtrodden masses need is not more sanitary tenements but the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The utter falsity of such an antithesis and its encouragement to social injustice are manifest. This ought to be enough to mark it as a very unwholesome kind of spirituality. But there is another feature about it, which is still more surprising. This is that the heavenly-mindedness, which has such a superior interest in the spiritual welfare of the masses as distinct from their material welfare, does not see the value, the absolute necessity, of concern for the material conditions of people as a purely evangelistic measure.

If you should happen upon a man fallen into a deep pit, you might discover that his greatest need was the Gospel of Christ. But it would be hard to convince him of this, if you should stand at the top of the pit, tell him the beautiful story of the Christ who died for such as he, invite him to accept his salvation, and then go on your way. A little practice of the Christ spirit would be the most effective first sermon that could be preached in such circumstances. In the face of so simple and self-evident a principle as this, isn't it amazing that Christians can be so unconcerned about the conditions of the people at the bottom of the social pit—so satisfied just to stand at the top and preach Christ down to them? The stupidity of the thing is fully as amazing as its heartlessness.

I had long wondered about this mystery. Recently a ray of light broke in upon the subject. The cold, naked truth began to show itself. This celestial type of mind which takes no interest in improving the physical condition of unfortunate human beings, has precious little real interest in their spiritual condition. Many persons of this type are quite unconscious of this, but I found a man not long ago with strong tendencies in this direction who understood the logic of his position. He had been protesting against the effort to put on a big evangelistic campaign, pointing out the folly and unscripturalness of trying to take the world for Christ and citing Paul's effort to "save some." Being pressed to tell how many he thought we should try to save, he finally admitted that he did not believe in trying to save anybody. He would have us transfer our interest from men to Christ. Exalt Christ. That is the Christian's business. Stop planning and striving to save men. Plan to hold up Christ. Some people will be attracted to him. Let them come. But don't bother your mind any about the rest.

Here we see the real inwardness of this exceedingly celestial type of spirituality which we are considering. It is so very heavenly that it doesn't like to think about such earthly things as people—whether their souls or bodies makes little difference. It prefers to look at Jesus and the angels. The view is much more inviting. You have no idea how gloriously happy it is in that world of spiritual contemplation, undisturbed by such unpleasant sights as angry men, heartbroken women and dirty and sickly children.

As for the fine art of extracting sweetness from self-denying service in behalf of an oppressed and sin-cursed humanity—well, it prefers the other kind. But you must excuse it. You see, it has been so busy enjoying itself, it has never had time to take any lessons in the alphabet of love.

But How Little It Amounts To!

So sighs the preacher, pastor, teacher, editor, and Christian worker in whatever field.

The sermon is over. Some thought it worth while, or were sufficiently well-mannered, to come to hear it. Many did not. But those who did, little realize what toil and concern it has cost the preacher. And the preacher wonders if it really was worth while. How much will it affect the course of history? Will it make any difference at all?

With like questionings, the pastor, teacher and editor reflect upon their work, as tangible results seem so few and hard to find.

But they just forget. For a moment they are living again in the dream-world of their youthful hopes. Then they were going to do it with a single blow, or in a year or two, at most. How painful the disillusionment! But how useful!

Of course it amounts to little. So little, sometimes, you can not see it. But it all counts in the final victory. It is the only way. It is the law of the Kingdom's growth.

Line upon line; precept upon precept; here a little; there a little.

Lawbreakers in Church

BY D. W. KURTZ

A LAWBREAKER is generally looked upon as a criminal of a low order. But in America so many people disregard the strict letter of the law, that it is quite common for very good people to break some of the laws of society—for instance, the "speed" laws of our towns and cities. The law is: "Speed limit, ten miles per hour." How many people observe it? One town has a speed law of twelve miles per hour, as the limit, but announces that no one will be arrested unless he exceeds twenty miles per hour—a law that is intended to be broken. I know of only one man in that town that does not break the law.

My proposition is this: "Unreasonable laws induce lawbreaking." One extreme causes another. The unreasonable, inhuman laws of George III. caused the Rebellion, and eventually brought about the independence of America. The inhuman laws of Russia, under the Czar, caused the strength of the Bolsheviki. The extremes of legalism provoke antinomianism.

"But," say many parents and leaders, "knowing the weakness of my children, or the people, I demand more than I expect, so that they will come up to what I want. If I ask only what I want, they fall short of that. But if I demand a little more, then they will meet my request." How often have you heard that philosophy! "If we want to begin a meeting at eight o'clock, announce it for seven-thirty." How common! You ask for what you do not expect, and create the spirit of lawbreaking. The church can expect absolutely nothing but lawbreaking unless her laws, her rules, her demands are right. What we want is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. The truth alone can make us free. Unreasonable laws provoke lawbreaking. Unscriptural demands provoke anarchy. Overemphasis on any doctrine is sure to be followed by loss rather than gain.

"But," you may insist, "I know it works, if you demand more than you expect." Yes, it works with slaves, with ignoramuses, and with children, for a while, not with intelligent people. It works like the government of the Czar—for a while—but there is no enduring government there. It will not continue to work, for it is the philosophy of autocracy and not of democracy and brotherhood.

The only way to have the spirit and habit of law abiding, is to have just laws—laws that are absolutely right—in harmony with Christ and eternal truth. Furthermore, these laws must mean exactly the same to all people. They dare not have a strict interpretation for one class, and a liberal interpretation for another. Laws must be right and equal. Again, the leaders of government must set an example of obedience to law—the law that is equal for leader and people.

Another reason for lawbreaking is that so many people are strict in some laws, and insist on their enforcement, while they completely ignore and openly disobey other laws of equal or superior importance. That was the trouble with the Pharisees. They were strict on cultus, sacrifice, stated prayers, forms, tithing, etc., but so lax as to neglect completely the greater and weightier matters of faith, justice and mercy.

Unjust or unreasonable laws provoke lawbreaking. The Christian church rests upon Christ as its Foundation and Head. He made the conditions of membership. Whoever adds or detracts from his conditions will cause the organization to be no longer "the body of Christ," "the bride of Christ," but a human organization. There are many social clubs, lodges, societies and organizations that contain many of the ethical ideals of Jesus, but they are not "The Church," unless they profess to make the promotion of Christian principles the whole aim of their organization. Any law that is not of Christ, not taught by him, or logically deducible from his teachings, of his life, is, therefore, contrary to the true church. Any law that is enforced that is unscriptural, can not help but provoke lawbreaking.

Lawbreaking is a bad habit. There is too much of it in America. It is not a sign of liberty and democracy, but of anarchy and individualism. But society and the church are largely to blame for lawlessness. We vote and pass laws without thinking, or considering; then we break them and pass other laws. Too many laws are made under the leading of a demagogue, a fanatic or an enthusiast. The spirit of individualism and the moral sense rebel, and the law is ignored.

We must teach the spirit of law abiding. First, we must make just laws—laws that are right, true, Christian. Unjust laws provoke lawbreaking. Secondly, laws must be enforced equally upon all classes, and must mean the same for rich and poor, white and black, leader or follower. Third, laws must be grounded in the moral law—the law of God, so that every sane conscience will respond. Arbitrary laws can not long command respect.

The whole Protestant Reformation was nothing else than a revolt against laws and requirements that had no foundation in Scripture or in reason. How quickly Protestantism fell into the same error! The Church of the Brethren has been called the Protestant of the Protestants. How unfortunate, that we, too, fell into legalism, and many have held customs and traditions higher than the Bible! They have not done this in theory, but in practice. This practice, making unscriptural, unbiblical demands, is the greatest cause of the anarchy of the church. Autocracy breeds anarchy. Both are wrong. All society, all churches, all ages have had these extremes. When either extreme becomes too powerful, society begins to totter and fall. What must be done is to keep the spirit of prophecy, the spirit of democracy, the spirit of Christ so prominent that there will be stability and permanence. There is only one way to prevent lawbreaking—i. e., to have absolutely just laws. There is but one way to have a true church—to follow Jesus Christ, and him only. Stability and harmony in the church can be achieved and maintained only by all submitting to the one, true, eternal standard, Jesus Christ.

The Church's Part in This Reconstruction

BY J. W. FVOCK

How very often, recently, have we heard this statement: "Christianity has failed." And to many it really appears that way. But Christianity is not a failure, and never will be. When Christ established his church he said: "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The seeming failure can be attributed only to the lack of Christianity being applied. The writer believes in the ultimate victory of the church of Christ over sin, and in these days of unrest, Christianity is the only force big enough to reconstruct the world.

Peter and John, when asked for alms, replied: "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have I give thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." The church of our day can not say, with the early church: "Silver and gold have I none," for the churches of our day have wealth untold. Neither can it say—the pity of it is—"In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." An English minister said: "The early church had poverty and power, but the church of today has wealth and very much weakness." It had wonder-working power. Miracles were wrought, so that amazement sat upon the faces of those who heard the words and saw the deeds of the early Christians. It wrought the complete transformation of society in a few generations, yet it had no money, no culture, and surely no prestige.

The early church had the explosive power of ideals and affections that blasted out the old order. Then it laid a new foundation, upon which the new order was built. Today we have wealth, culture and numbers. Money has never before flowed into the church treasury as during the last year. It has come in by millions, through the different drives and campaigns. The Methodists have recently completed the greatest money-raising campaign ever attempted by any church. Our own beloved Brotherhood surpassed the goal set for the first year of our Five-Year Forward Movement program. And we are glad she did. While money is necessary to carry forward the Lord's work, money, of itself, can not accomplish the task. All will fail unless we remember that "not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." We can not buy the Kingdom of God. All that money can do is to bring great spiritual storehouses into touch with human need. May we not pin our faith upon our money. Rather let us consecrate our money to the Lord's service.

There is going to be a new world, a new order of things. Could a man go to sleep now, and wake up in five years from now, he would have a greater surprise than Rip Van Winkle. The important question is, What kind of a world will the new world be? From a business and cultural point of view it will be progressive, scientific, educated and successful. If it is all this, and nothing more, it will be a failure. Germany had all this. There must be another element—spiritual power. A materialistic civilization can not long endure. It must be Christian to be permanent. The church must make this essential contribution to the reconstruction of the world and we believe she will.

Ideals Are Vital

Nothing is so important as ideals in this, the reconstruction period. They are absolutely essential. Men will fight for their ideals. They live by them, and justice is one of these ideals. Justice must be rendered by the employer to the employé, and by the employé to the employer. Without this justice, our ideals will never be attained.

Another ideal the church must foster and make potent is brotherhood. Racial hatred must be replaced by racial good will. We must live side by side with all races and colors, and extend to all the hand of fellowship and helpfulness. And how can we foster and make potent the ideal of brotherhood, unless we teach the Fatherhood of God?

Other ideals are democracy and service. But the supreme Christian ideal is love. It is this that will enable us to attain the others. It is not enough to be prosperous. Society must be moral. It is not enough to be cultured; it must be spiritual.

The days of miracles have not ended. We must have miracles wrought now. This day of the world's supremest need is the church's supremest opportunity. Applied Christianity, or a living Christianity, is the only force big enough for the present task. The world will be reconstructed by revolution or by quiet, peaceful evolutionary processes. The church can determine which.

Coercion vs. Persuasion

"A soft answer turneth away wrath"

TYRANNY is often the result of a self-conscious egotism, bred and ingrained into the personality by habits of thought of one's superiority over that of another. It is not due to the want of intelligence but because of the want of culture that the heart fails to respond to the feelings and sympathies of others. To the uncultured man there is a sort of brutal instinct to force his ideas and prejudices on others. To such a man it is almost impossible to get the view-point of the other fellow who, perhaps, is just as honest and sincere as himself. This attitude often brings about a misunder-standing, and soreness, wholly out of proportion to the importance of the issues, which are often secondary and have nothing to do with the real and fundamental questions that are the source and destiny of life.

There is nothing, in all history, that has been so fruitful of heartaches and suffering as the abuse of authority as such. God's good earth has been reddened with the blood of humanity. But let us hope that there is a period of transition at hand—that the evil days are surely, if not rapidly, passing. The disciplinary meth-ods, often harsh in our public institutions, are being replaced by more humane methods. The appeal to the intelligence and conscience has been found to be far more effective. Persuasion is the Christ ideal. Can we not make an effort to reach it?

It was an astonishing revelation to the woman at the well, over whose life there was a cloud, when she was approached by Christ in such a friendly spirit. " He went about doing good." His very presence was one of persuasion and inspiration. There was no discrim-ination between Jew or Gentile. " You are all sinners." To the self-righteous Jews Christ said: " He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone." Turning to the sin-stricken woman, Christ said: " Hath no man condemned thee? Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more." Such logic the hypocritical, self-righteous Jews could not face. By the law of Moses she was to be stoned, but there is a higher law, written with the blood of Christ on the heart of every true Christian. Christ's sympathetic heart went out to others—always for others—not for himself.

Men's bodies and souls have been dwarfed and pinched by the force of oppression and repression—not always by physical and brutal passion. Social and re-ligious ostracism are symptoms of coercion, and they are the most brutal and heartless. Many people have been driven by despair into an untimely grave by this weapon of mental torture. The Puritans left England to escape persecution for their religious convictions. They came to America and, in turn, persecuted and ostracized the Quakers. The oppressed became the oppressors.

Rob a man of his personality, take from him the choice of self-determination, and he is simply a figure-head. The Jews were almost fanatical in their ob-servance of law and order. They were terrible stick-lers for the traditions and practices of the elders. Their strict interpretation of the letter of the law gave no play for the development and growth of the mental and spiritual faculties. The law, to them, meant a strict compliance with certain ceremonies, rules and regulations, therefore developing an abnormal, selfish, unnatural spirit, instead of a great and noble concep-tion of a world brotherhood. Their constant struggle was, not to be contaminated with other nationalities, to have no communications with other people—no matter how worthy. It took the great and noble Christ to inaugurate a new dispensation, to dispel such false notions and illusions. His compelling power was that of love and good-will to all mankind. To him men are a struggling mass, weighed down with the filth and foulness of sin. His great heart is full of love, warmth and sympathy for men, especially for the poor and the weak.

tinns nowadays and new devices and new equipment, but we have very few really new methods.

Teaching through stories is a good method, but it is now new. It is as old as Herodotns and Plutarch—and much older. Teaching by illustrations is a good method, but it is not new either. Christ used it, and so have other great teachers in all ages. It is very closely related to the story method.

The use of maps and pictures is a good method, but that, too, is very old. Teaching by doing is a good method, but that is perhaps the oldest of all. It is al-together probable that the human race learned much by imitation long before it learned to write or to talk.

What, for us, is the point of all this? Simply this: We should not neglect to study Christ's methods sim-ply because they are old. They are also new. Modern pedagogy has in it very little that is not to be found in the principles and methods of Jesus. He was (and is) the Great Teacher.

What were some of the Great Teacher's principles?

First, free will. He left his hearers free. One might suppose that he, having all power, would have com-pelled men to accept the truth that was so vital to them but he did not do it. He preferred to respect the sovereignty of human choice, though it placed upon man such a terrible responsibility.

Second, broad sympathy. He was interested in all kinds of people. He was criticised for it, but still he dined with the Pharisee, he ate with the publican, he preached to the Samaritans, he stopped when the Syro-phœnician woman called him, he reasoned with the lawyers, he conversed with the doctors, he rejoiced with the children. Finally he said: " Go to all na-tions." And he died for all.

Third, thorough preparation. Christ did not begin his public ministry till he was thirty years old. By that time he knew the Holy Scriptures, he knew the people he knew his own mission, and he knew how to take hold of his tasks. He was thoroughly prepared in books and in experience.

Fourth, courage. He did not follow the traditional when it was misleading. If it was necessary for him to cast aside wrong notions in order to show the true meaning, he did not hesitate to do it. He dared to say " It was said of old, but I say unto you." He did not fear convention so much as to sacrifice conviction.

Fifth, prayer. His must have been a prayer-life but even then he engaged in special prayer for special tasks. Often, when he was tired and needed sleep, he went out to watch and pray. Prayer was, it may be, the greatest principle in his life.

If Christ had been asked to give a definition of edu-cation, what do you think he would have said? Do you think he would have said: " Education is adjust-ment to environment "? Some teachers have said this and have been accounted great in spite of it.

What does this mean? It means that if one is born in a slum he must adjust himself to it and stay there. If one finds himself in the dirt he must fit himself to it and be happy. If one sees that his government is corrupt, he must make the best of it and never turn a wheel for a change.

Should not education rather make one able to con-trol and shape his environment? And is not this the history of education, of civilization, of real progress? We may never learn to control the climate, but we can regulate it indoors. For this we have houses and stoves in them. We may not be able to remove the hills and mountains from the landscape, but we can remove enough of a hill to make an easy grade for a road and we can remove enough of a mountain to make a tunnel for a train. We may not be able to get the

May I be permitted to say that the most awful need is a heaven-sent revival among us preachers? Most of us are too far from God to be of much service to men. We need a mourner's bench that will circle the globe. We must live again. How many of us are dead preachers, ministering to dead congregations! Many of our churches have not seen a genuine conversion in years. In the words of Dr. Samuel Chadwick: "In many churches the conversion of a soul would be a calamity; for it would be like putting a newly-born babe to the breast of a dead mother to be nursed." At least seventy-five per cent of our members do not know God. If they were ever alive, they are now dead. They are of the world, and run with the world, having nothing whereby they can be distinguished from other sinners. They do not even profess to be saved—have no witness of the Spirit. Ask them if they are Christians, and they evade you, or tell you: "Oh, I hope so," or, "I hope I'm all right." Others become angry, and inform you that it is none of your business.

This writer has often asked pastors what per cent of their members were saved. In many cases heart-to-heart talks and much prayer have followed. In other cases the reply has been: "I don't know, and it is none of your business." Well, maybe they were right. Maybe I had no right to make an inquiry so embarrassing. Oh, the foolishness of it all! Surely, a child of God must be concerned to know about the standing of his fellow church members. Every pastor must know whether or not his people are saved from sin, or be untrue to his trust, and therefore unfit for his office.

Will there be another great revival? Not unless we preachers get back to God, and are recommissioned to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

Our people no longer have family prayers. The old saints, whom I had the good fortune to know in my boyhood days, used to say that people who knew God had family altars; and I really thought it was so. Poor old fogies! They did not believe that the folks who would not hold family worship had any religion at all. What would they look like in this fast, godless age? Well, bless their dear old hearts, I am going to say one long, loud Amen to all their notions and convictions about being religious. They had the thing; and God, and men, and devils knew they had it. One of them could chase a thousand modern, card-shuffling, theater-going church members, and two could put ten thousand of them to flight. Good John Wesley had a notion that he could turn the world upside down with a hundred men who loved nothing but God and feared nothing but sin. Strange way to put it; but he got his men, and came mighty nigh doing the job.

Will there ever be another great revival? Not unless our people rebuild their home altars. The one can never come without the other. A revival that did not bring back family prayers would be a travesty on Christianity. May God save us from it!

Will another revival come? Not unless we get back to preaching the old-time Gospel from pulpits that flame with holy fire. This age needs some "Sons of Thunder," some Isaiahs and Daniels, some Pauls and Savonarolas, some Wesleys and Whitefields, some mighty giants of God, who can push the battle to the very gates of hell and defy all the infernal hosts of damnation, some men who can forget finances, and salaries, and positions, and psychological theories, and theological hairsplittings, and so wield the Sword of the Spirit as to send hell's demons scurrying to their hiding-places, put courage into timid saints, storm the ramparts of Satan with the dynamite of the skies and capture the world for Jesus. "Behold the fields are white unto the harvest. Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

Where among us are the people who wrestle with God in secret prayer? The saintly Dr. E. M. Bounds, who seemed to know more about prayer than most men of his day, said just a short while before he went to heaven: "Nobody is praying nowadays." He did not mean that absolutely no one is praying, but spoke in hyperbole; but he did know that real agony of soul is almost a thing of the past. Many modern church people make fun of such praying, and tell us to ask quietly for what we want, that God knows all about it, and that our travail of soul can do no good. They would have us part company with the Master. He prayed in great agony, and sometimes kept at it all night, when the burden was heavy. Let us be candid: the old-fashioned habit of tarrying at the mercy-seat in secret prayer has gone from the rank and file of modern church members. Only here and there do we find a few saints who feel that they must pray, or die.

Will there ever be another great revival? Not unless we return to our closets. God can not bless a prayerless church, for the simple reason that such a church can not receive his blessing. O God, send thy church to her knees again. Nothing else will do her any good.

Shall we have a sweeping revival through the Forward Movement? Not unless the church can learn that "it is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." We must have money, but we can not save the world with filthy lucre and church pageants. God must come in power, and sanctify the saints. Then he can "reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." There never can be any other way.

The world needs a new vision, and we are well able to give it. If our God will only give us back the old-time type of Christianity we can go over the top of the mountain, tunnel through its base, blast it to atoms, if need be, and carry the good news of salvation to the ends of the earth.

Shall we see a great revival once more? God is ready to send it. Will the church humble herself, so that she can receive it? We can never work it up by human power, nor buy it with our money; but, thank God, we can pray it down out of the skies. Amen. Let us pray.—P. G. Mingledorff in the Pentecostal Herald.

The Great Need of More Doctrinal Teaching and Preaching

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT

"Go teach all nations" (Matt. 28: 19).

TEACH them what? Teach them to observe all things whatsoever the Lord Jesus Christ has commanded. There is too much emotional preaching, and not enough doctrinal preaching. Emotional preaching is not contained in the commission given by Christ; for it is not teaching the principles and doctrines of the Gospel, but is largely an appeal to sympathy and the feelings, and does not appeal to reason and sound judgment. Teaching is to impart knowledge, instruction and understanding. So the hearers act upon a mature decision and judgment, and not from excitement. Formerly many of our ministers preached and taught the people the doctrines as believed and practiced by the church. Some say they preached too much doctrine, but others have gone to the opposite extreme. Many of them preach no doctrine at all, and especially is this true as regards the ordinances. How can the people practice the things they do not believe? And how can they believe the things they have not heard or been taught? And how can they hear or be taught these things if the GOSPEL MESSENGER, our elders and ministers, do not teach them?

I am sure that those who do not believe in nor practice these things will not teach them. The people are dependent upon the Church of the Brethren very largely for teaching on many of the ordinances, such as baptism "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, the salutation of the holy kiss, the prayer-covering, nonconformity to the world, non-swearing, etc., because most of the denominations do not think these things necessary, hence will not teach them. But, my brethren, they must be taught in order to obey the commission of our Lord and Master, and in order to get the people to do them.

My observation has been, when these things are taught and clearly defined, the people professing Christ, and seeking salvation, willingly and gladly comply with them. Out of between two and three thousand, confessing Christ under my preaching and teaching, only one, to my personal knowledge, united with another church. And a large per cent of those uniting with the Brethren came out of other churches, that they might obey these Gospel requirements and get closer to the blessed Christ.

I have often wondered how ministers, pretending to believe these Gospel principles, can give permission, to those making application under their preaching, to go where these things are neither believed nor practiced. It is evidently giving permission to those seeking Christ and salvation to ignore and set aside much of Christ's teaching. If these commands and ordinances are right and necessary for the preacher to observe, in order to meet the approval of God, then they are right and necessary for those who profess Christ under his preaching. God is no respecter of persons.

The apostle recommends that the elders who labor in word and doctrine be counted worthy of double honor (1 Tim. 5: 17). One of the qualifications of an elder is that he be able by sound doctrine to convince the gainsayers (Titus 1: 9). The gainsayers are undermining and setting aside much of the New Testament as non-essential, and in their teaching explain away the need of obeying "that form of doctrine delivered by Christ and his apostles."

To head off and counteract the effects of this teaching, it becomes absolutely necessary that the GOSPEL MESSENGER and faithful ministers of Christ teach and keep constantly before the people the principles and ordinances, as taught by Christ in his doctrine. There are millions of people in the United States who have no knowledge of these things being in the plan of salvation. If they read them, the gainsayers explain them away. Who is responsible for the carrying out of Christ's great commission? Our people have made quite prominent the "Go ye," but why not make a little more prominent the "teaching all things whatsoever I have commanded you"? The doctrine of Christ is the power and stay of the church. Just as long as there are people who have not been taught these things, it is necessary to teach them. Jesus says: "This gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

"Speak the things which become sound doctrine." A large per cent of the people, professing the Christian religion, "have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof: from such turn away." "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient" (Titus 1: 16). But it is not much wonder that they are disobedient, when the doctrines of the New Testament have not been preached nor taught them.

The apostle, in giving a most solemn charge to the ministry, says: "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears [to tickle their ears]; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4: 1-4).

We are living in the time that the apostle foresaw, and the faithful ministry of Christ should meet the issue with sound doctrine, "in season, out of season." If there ever was a time when doctrine was especially needed, it is now, in order to establish the church and counteract this departure from the truth.

Some Observations and Experiences

I went into an old organized church by invitation, to hold a series of meetings, and was asked to preach a sermon on Christian baptism. I inquired of the elder how long it had been since a sermon had been delivered on baptism. He replied: "Never, to my knowledge." He had lived in that church forty years from its organization, and there had never been a sermon in that congregation on that part of Christ's teaching. I preached two sermons on the subject in their territory, one at the churchhouse, and one at a mission point. A great interest was awakened and several were baptized. Some said: "We never knew that this baptism was in the Bible. Why is it that you never preach on it, nor teach it publicly?"

I was called into another church, remote from the

Some Observations and Experiences

I went into an old organized church by invitation, to hold a series of meetings, and was asked to preach a sermon on Christian baptism. I inquired of the elder above, to hold a series of meetings, and before beginning I asked the brethren what kind of preaching they thought needful there—doctrinal or evangelistic. They replied: "We want no doctrine, for we have been hammered to death with doctrine." I said: "That is strange indeed." We proceeded along lines indicated by the members, with loud approval by the people in "Amens," "Praise the Lord," "Hallelujah," and so on. The congregations were large, and the approval of the preaching boisterous. This continued for some eight or ten days, when I said to the brethren: "I have now diagnosed the ailment here, and doctrine is indicated as the only remedy." The members still objected to my preaching doctrine. I replied: "I will either preach doctrine or I will go home, for I am accomplishing nothing." They then reluctantly submitted.

I announced that my next subject would be "Christian Baptism." At the close of the sermon I gave an invitation to the people to come and follow Jesus, and in response an aged man and his wife, of the Disciple faith, came forward. I followed up with feet-washing, the Lord's supper, etc., preaching in all some five or six doctrinal sermons, and as a result some eight or ten, ranging in ages from perhaps thirty-five to seventy years, were baptized into Christ, and there was great joy in that church. I said to the brethren: "What do you think of doctrinal preaching now?" They replied: "Brother Yearout, we never heard the doctrine preached before." To hammer the people with clubs and to preach the things the Lord Jesus Christ has commanded his ministers to teach are two things entirely different. Teaching is not clubbing.

Doctrine

This comprises the truths of the Gospel in general (2 Tim. 3: 16; Titus 2: 10; 1 Tim. 6: 3). We should give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine (1 Tim. 4: 13). We are to take heed unto the doctrine. "The doctrine of baptisms." What does this mean? There are two baptisms taught in the New Testament—the baptism of water and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. We are born of water, and born of the Spirit. The first must precede the second. This doctrine is peculiar to Christ's teaching. We have the doctrine of the resurrection, of atonement, of feet-washing, of anointing the sick, of prayer, of holiness, etc. And I think the solemn charge of the eminent apostle Paul is very applicable to all. "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality" (1 Tim. 5: 21).

It is very evident that Philip, in preaching Christ to the people of Samaria, preached baptism: for it is said: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized; both men and women" (Acts 8: 5, 12). And again, in preaching Jesus unto the Ethiopian eunuch, he evidently preached baptism, for the eunuch says: "See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?"

Baptism is fundamental in the plan of salvation: for without it no man can enter into the kingdom of God (John 3: 3, 5; Mark 16: 16).

The beloved apostle John says: "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed" (2 John 9: 10).

Ohio to Be the Storm Center of the Prohibition Contest

BY LEVI MINNICH

Nov. 5 of last year Ohio voters carried the State for prohibition by more than 25,000 votes. The same went into effect May 26. The results have been most gratifying throughout the entire State, including Cincinnati, with its former breweries and distilleries.

Notwithstanding these improved conditions, the liquor interests have filed petitions for an election Nov. 4, on four proposals:

1. An amendment to the State Constitution, to repeal the State-wide Prohibition Amendment, adopted last fall, and to restore the license system and the license law, annulled by that amendment.

2. An amendment to the State Constitution, declaring 2.75 per cent beer to be non-intoxicating. This proposed amendment contains the following provision: "The phrase 'intoxicating liquor' shall not be confined or construed to mean any beverage which is, in fact, nonintoxicating, and no beverage containing 2.75 per cent, or less, of alcohol, by weight, shall be deemed as intoxicating liquor."

3. A referendum on the bill, recently passed by the Legislature for enforcement of State Prohibition, as defined by the Constitutional Amendment adopted last fall.

4. A State-Wide Referendum on the recent action of the Legislature in ratifying the Federal Prohibition Amendment.

There has been much comment as to whether there could be a State-Wide Referendum in any State after the State Legislature had ratified the Federal Dry Amendment. Recently the Supreme Court of Maine gave a decision that ratification of the National Prohibition Amendment by a State Legislature is not subject to a referendum.

Oct. 1 the Supreme Court of Ohio, by a vote of six to one, held that it was. The final decision will be rendered in the Supreme Court of the United States. If this court should sustain the decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio which, no doubt, it will, National Prohibition will not be a reality as soon as was expected. The wets have filed petitions for a referendum vote on the National Prohibition Amendment in fifteen States. Deduct the fifteen States from forty-five States, the Legislatures of which have ratified the National Amendment, and we have but thirty States remaining that have ratified National Prohibition. Enough States will not vote until 1920 to make the necessary thirty-six to ratify.

As National Prohibition does not become effective until one year after ratification, we would not have National Prohibition for over two years, in case the Supreme Court of the United States should sustain the decision of the Ohio Supreme Court.

These conditions should arouse all citizens of the fifteen States referred to, who believe in the highest type of morality and citizenship, to do their utmost in sustaining the ratification of their respective Legislatures.

We especially appeal to the voters of Ohio. As this State seems to be a storm center of action, a vast amount of money is sent here by liquor interests outside of the State, with a view of winning on one or more of the four proposals. If the wets carry one of their proposed amendments, the distillery, brewery and the saloon will no doubt be back again for over two years. In addition 2¾ per cent beer will not be considered intoxicating, and could be sold anywhere to men, women and children. In case the second amendment should pass.

Local temperance committee men, ministers, Sunday-school superintendents and all who have the best interest of the State at heart, should get busy at once. Explain the situation to the uninformed, arouse those who are indifferent and careless, and see to it that every dry voter casts a dry ballot, properly marked. The proposed amendments and the referendum proposals will appear on two separate ballots. Much care and some teaching will be necessary in order to insure a proper marking of the ballots. Our workers should be in close touch with the dry organization of their respective communities, and see to it that their dry friends, and especially our own members

Have You Studied Your Lesson?

BY LEANDER SMITH

WHY should one, who is supposed to teach a Sunday-school lesson, announce: "I have not studied the lesson"? Many there be that do that superfluous thing. Will not the fact become painfully evident in due time? Is the announcement meant to relieve embarrassment, and prevent the disappointment of justified expectations, or is it a confession of well-nigh inexcusable neglect? The effect is deplorable, no matter what the purpose of the announcement may be.

To assume to teach what God says, without careful preparation, is audacious. It may involve soul destiny, or life usefulness—maybe both for some. A minister said: "I shall speak without preparation, on a subject I have never given close thought." A devout old brother left the house. People thought he had suddenly become ill. He later explained it by saying: "I do not wish to hear anybody guessing at what God says, and then want people to hear him."

The matter insisted on here is, that whoever speaks for God is bound, by every reasonable consideration, to know the mind of the Spirit, involved in the matter discussed. Teaching and preaching are for the purpose of making clear the eternal Word of God. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Nothing else will give you freedom.

Conference Decisions and Church Practice

BY IRA H. FRANTZ

IT is a curious fact and worthy of note, however much we may wish it were otherwise, that actual church practice largely precedes rather than follows Conference decisions.

The first modern missionaries were sent out independent of a general church Conference. In our own denomination the Sunday-school, revival meetings, and higher education came without the encouragement of, and even against the opposition of the Annual Meeting. A very large number of minor practices in individual life and conduct can be pointed out, which have come among us in spite of efforts of the Conference to keep them out. Some of them are matters which today are so unquestioned that some would be surprised to know that Conference ever opposed them.

Now this is not an argument against Conference decisions. It is merely a statement of fact. Nor is the fact itself so very alarming.

A great many Gentiles had been received into the church without circumcision before the Jerusalem Conference granted permission for such admission.

Furthermore, this same Jerusalem Conference, while yielding the matter of circumcision, yet included among "necessary things" that the Gentile converts "abstain from things sacrificed to idols" (Acts 15: 29). Yet Paul himself, although he attended the Conference and agreed with the decision, in writing later to the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 10: 25-29) advises that unless there is danger of giving offense, they pay no attention to the question of whether things have been sacrificed to idols or not.

Shall we accuse Paul of being disloyal? Or shall we not conclude that the function of a Conference decision is not so much to dictate as to advise, not so much to do people's thinking for them, as to tell them what the majority are thinking, not so much to create sentiment as to discover and unify it, not so much to go ahead and blaze the way, as to go along and keep the forces together? Such a conclusion does not belittle the work of the Conference.

It is a great task—that of keeping the forces together. Sentiment is molded through the press, the pulpit, the schools, Conference addresses, etc. It is often very divergent. Men of differing opinions must work together and be forbearing toward each other. Jesus was deeply concerned for the unity of his followers. We can all afford to be very humble toward those who differ with us. This was the attitude Paul urged upon the Corinthians, in respect to eating meat offered to idols.

As a church, we have always insisted that we have no creed but the New Testament, yet there is, at present, a strong tendency among us to give Conference decisions the place of a creed in the church, to give them the force of a "thus saith the Lord."

John 12: 23-32

BY R. H. MILLER

(Do Not Read This Article Without Reading the Above Scripture First)

JESUS knew what was before him. In the twenty-third verse he says: "The hour has come that the Son of man should be glorified." Then, contemplating the experience through which he should go, he says: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." Then he pins upon all who would serve him the obligation of following him: "If any man serve me, let him follow me."

The experience of all Christians will verify the sequel to the verses just quoted. Jesus had spoken of the corn of wheat. He must have had himself in mind. All who serve must follow him. They must be productive corns of wheat. Then he has a struggle—"Now is my soul troubled." No one has a harder time to live the sermon than the preacher.

Christ stood on the threshold of the hour of his glorification. He knew what this hour should cost. Should he move forward? Should he escape? His soul was troubled. There was tempest within. There was war on the battle-ground of the heart. It is here that real life-blood is spilt. So intense was the struggle that he exclaimed: "Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say?" It was no mild affair that caused this exclamation by One who was always so unmindful of self and so thoughtful of others. So strong was the impulse to save himself the pain of the cross, that a prayer to this effect escaped his lips: "Father, save me from this hour." But he does not struggle long. He soon conquers. He does this by two strategic moves.

The first is contained in these words: "But for this cause came I unto this hour." He contemplates his exit from heaven, his assumption of flesh, his growth, his teaching, his healing, his preaching—every step which lay between his incarnation and the present moment. The purpose of it all was: "I must endure the cross and despise the shame of this hour. If I escape this hour, the way by which I came to this hour is a failure; its purpose is defeated."

The second is contained in this prayer: "Father, glorify thy name." Jesus stood on this side of the cross. He trembled with a tempestuous hesitancy. Shall he face the hour with its pain? Shall he escape? He gets strength for the former by asking not for the particular strength needed—but by asking God to glorify his own name. Or, to put it differently, he was strengthened for his trial by asking God to accomplish the end to which his passage through the hour of trial contributed—the glorification of God's name.

Now, to assimilate the lesson into our own lives. Remember that to fail now—be the trial trivial or tremendous—is to defeat the whole course of your past life. "For this cause"—to do now what God wills—"came I to this hour." "My whole past life was for this purpose, that I stand true now. What irretrievable loss if I should fail!" Speak thus to your soul when tried.

Then, again, do not think especially of the trial. Do not think even of the particular strength you need in the hour of trial. Think of the end to which your successful passage through the hour of trial shall contribute. Then ask God to accomplish that. Jesus won this way and so can we. Then comes the song of triumph in the last two verses of our Scripture: "Now is the judgment of this world. Now is the prince of this world cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

Lord, Teach Us to Pray

BY WARREN SLABAUGH

THIS request of the disciples is to me most significant, and I am tempted to inquire the reasons for it. True, John had taught his disciples to pray, but if this were the prime reason, why does not the request come earlier, for John's active ministry had closed at the time the Master's was beginning. I am constrained to look into the life of the Master himself for the prime motive.

From the day when John the Baptist had pointed out the Master to Andrew and John as the Lamb of God, and when, one by one, the disciples had joined themselves to the new Teacher, they had been carefully watching his life and ministry. Had it been told them that he had come up from his baptism, praying to receive the outpouring of the Spirit, and to hear the acknowledgment of God from heaven? Did they know how, under the control of the Spirit, he had gone into the desert to conquer Satan, who was tempting him to take the easy road to popularity? Surely, they remembered that, during all those busy days of his ministry, when the multitudes thronged him, so that he had scarcely time to eat, he was wont to spend many hours of the night, that he needed for physical rest, out in the solitude, in prayer with God. Often Christ had arisen while they were still sleeping, and when they sought him they had found him praying.

Not long ago he had been in prayer all the night, and in the morning he had set apart the twelve and given them the larger work of apostleship. It seems to me that no one thing, in the life of the Master, had so impressed the disciples as his prayer life. The authority with which he spake, his ability to sway men, his abounding love for the needy and friendless—all these had amazed his followers, and is it unreasonable to suppose that they should see that this was, in large measure, the result of his prayer life? Now, since they had been given the responsibility of taking an active part in the work, they were feeling the need of strength. Studying the secret of his success, they were assured that this power would come to them when they had learned to pray.

When we study the life of Jesus as a man, we are amazed at his power and wisdom. Could we believe him wholly Divine, then the life and ministry would be accepted as a matter of fact. But if we believe that he laid aside divine attributes and took upon himself the limitations of humanity, then, indeed, we must seek for the secret of his power. Early the call of God was felt, so that, at twelve, he preferred the solemn atmosphere of the temple to the streets of Jerusalem. Then, step by step, came the growing consciousness of his divine Sonship and the gracious plan of God, whom he was to reveal to the world. Instead of yielding to the popular demand of the Jews, to set up an earthly kingdom, he saw God's plan in a spiritual Kingdom, whose seat should be the hearts of men. He took no step without the direction of God, and was never at loss how to proceed. No question was too hard to answer. No issue was too difficult to meet. His perfect poise enabled him to master every situation. Surely, his success in carrying out God's plan for the world depended upon his close communion with the Father.

If he needed to pray that he might overcome temptation, do not we also? He prayed all night before he selected the twelve. Can we meet our responsibilities more easily? He communed often with the Father, that he might see clearly his path before him. Do we need guidance less? His concern for his people drove sleep from his pillow. Do we not desire a measure of this same concern? Desiring to be like him, to be worthy of discipleship, longing for spiritual power, above all things else, we come pleading: "Lord, teach us to pray."

Our Ruined Pictures

BY CHESTER E. SHULER

Two painters were employed to fresco the walls of a magnificent cathedral. Both stood on a rude scaffolding, constructed for the purpose, many feet from the floor. One, so intent upon his work as to forget where he was, stepped back slowly, surveying critically the work of his brush, until he had neared the edge of the plank on which he stood.

At this moment the other artist, glancing away from his own work for an instant, perceived his companion's danger. There was no time to approach and warn him; to cry out would doubtless startle him, and any further movement on his part would be fatal. There was but one way to save his life, and, quick as thought, the second painter acted. Seizing a wet brush, he flung its contents against the wall, spattering the picture with unsightly blotches of coloring.

The first painter, startled, took a long step toward the wall, then, realizing that his careful work had been ruined, turned upon his friend with fierce upbraiding. Then came a few words of explanation, and he knew that it had been necessary to spoil the painting in order to save the painter.

It's often that way with God's children. Man will set himself some task. He will plan, and scheme, and work hard—so hard. Then, as it nears completion, he will step backward on the "plank" of self-satisfaction and gaze upon his handiwork with selfish pride and muse: "How grand it is! See what I have accomplished!"—quite forgetful of the One who is the Creator of all things. Then, as he gazes, feasting his vanity, and pampering his self-conceit, he beholds his work crumble and vanish before him. Stringent measures, often, are needed to turn man from his idols and bring him back to God.

It's not easy to see our pictures spoiled before our eyes. Sometimes it's almost crushing, unbearable. We can not understand why our cherished plans are thwarted, our fondest hopes ruthlessly crushed, or our delight suddenly changed to bitter sorrow. Our finite minds are unable to comprehend. Sometimes, too, we are inclined to be rather impatient. We do not always welcome Divine correction.

But it is one of the Loving Father's proceedings to send good after evil, as he made light after darkness. Disappointments often prove to be blessings in disguise. Although we may not always recognize the blessing at the time of our affliction, we are sometimes graciously permitted later to realize that, truly, "all things work together for good to them that love God."

A Christian gentleman while experiencing great affliction, when asked how he bore it, said: "It lightens the stroke to draw near to him who handles the rod." Drawing near to God and keeping close to him—learning his will for us in all things, instead of pursuing, blindly, some worldly will-o'-the-wisp—will invariably lead to joy and happiness, both in this world and in that which is to come.

We may be fully satisfied with the picture we have created. But the Loving, Helping Critic, who examines each bit of our work, may not find it to his liking. Then, because stringent means may be necessary to keep us from stepping too far back on the "plank" of self-admiration and self-sufficiency, and to arouse us to doing still better work, our Critic may find it necessary and for our good to blot out our work with the wet brush of disappointment, failure or affliction. Wise are we if, instead of upbraiding him, we try to realize the loving purpose that impelled his act, and turn to him with a heart filled with thankfulness.

so will I do to you: your dead bodies shall fall in th wilderness" (14: 28, 29). And so the bones of thos sands were left to bleach in the desert because Go took them at their word. He granted their wish.

A certain sister recently said to me: "Once wanted to attend a local Normal School for teacher and for reasons my wish was not granted. Thereupo I said: 'I wish I was dead.' I had no sooner said th when a sharp pain, something like a knife, ran throug me, and I became frightened. I thought God was g ing to take me at my word." Did you ever, in a fit petulance, wish you were dead?

We often pray: "Forgive us our debts, as we fo give our debtors." Suppose God would take us at o word and forgive us after our own manner of fo giving, how would it be with you? Would it be liber or would it be grudgingly? True forgiveness forget It buries the hatchet and doesn't leave the handle sti out, and it never dances on the grave. Graves, whe differences and troubles are buried, ought never to visited. You'll not be disrespectful by so doing. Pra ing God to forgive us our sins as we forgive those th sin against us, is a serious matter and something think about. Is God to take you at your word?

It is told that a certain professor in geology, w was an infidel, stood before his class, out on the mou tains, looked up into the sky and said: "Now if the is a God, as Christians claim there is, let him strike dead, and prove to this class the fact." As he was sa ing this, a gnat flew into his throat, he was seized wi violent coughing, and, bursting an artery, he bled death. God took him at his word.

When Norman Macleod, the well-known Scott clergyman and author, was a boy, he was much d couraged, and in a fit of petulance, he said: "I wi I never had been born!" His good, pious mother sa to him: "Norman, yon have been born, and if y were a wise bairn, you would ask the Lord what y were born for." He took her good advice, and fou that God had a noble plan for his life.

How often we murmur, complain, and fret, and ut such expressions as: "I wish I was dead," as did t Children of Israel! If we sin in such a manner, should do as did the Children of Israel—confess sin. They said: "We have sinned." Yes, God good, in that he does not always take us at our wo

Every Minister Take Notice

Corrections for the 1920 Yearbook (formerly Brethren Almanac) will close Oct. 31. Every minister's name and address should be correctly given in the Ministerial List, because the Gish Fund Committee, as well as others, must depend upon this list in matters of vital concern to each minister. Please note the following points:

1. Every minister should see if his name and address are correctly given in the 1919 Yearbook.
2. In case the name and address do not appear, or if incorrect in any way, please send us name and address as they should be entered.

Secretaries of District Mission Boards

The editors of the Yearbook are depending upon the Secretaries of the District Mission Boards for a full report of officers and churches for each State District. Each Secretary has received blanks that are to be filled out and returned not later than Oct. 31. Secretaries are earnestly requested to give these reports their careful attention, and to return them as soon as possible.

A General Request

We urge elders, clerks of churches and all others who can help us to make the records in the Yearbook more nearly correct to send in the names and addresses of ministers recently elected, as well as the names of any who should be removed from the list because of death or other cause. We would appreciate it to be informed of any mistakes in the lists in the Yearbook of which you may have certain knowledge. Corrections close Oct. 31. Address:

Sister Weybright is laboring hard to place the helpfulness of the Aid Societies within reach of the needy mission points of the designated area, and we suggest that the desired information be furnished her without further delay.

MISCELLANEOUS

By special request we announce the love feast for the Peace Valley church, Mo., to be held at 7 P. M., Oct. 18. A revival is being held, just previous to the feast, by Bro. Emra T. Fike, of Oakland, Md.

The Leamersville church, Pa., is looking for a pastor, and desires to correspond with any minister who may be interested. Communications should be addressed to Eld. Brice Sell, R. D. 1, Hollidaysburg, Pa.

The Daleville congregation, Va., desires to secure a pastor to give full time to pastoral duties. Any pastor who contemplates a change of location and desires to investigate this field, should address Bro. J. W. Ikenberry, Daleville, Va.

The little band of members at Rose Pine, La., is endeavoring to gain a foothold in that comparatively new field for our people. Any of our members who may feel inclined to locate in a promising part of the South, are invited to investigate the advantages of the locality named. Mrs. Cora Cox, who may be addressed as indicated above, will be pleased to give further information.

Some of our wide-awake congregations take definite steps to have every family of members within their territorial limits supplied with the "Messenger." This is a move of such far-reaching significance that every congregation may well consider a like plan at its next business meeting. The comparatively slight expenditure is amply repaid by the added interest in the work.

"Mission Study," a booklet published by the General Mission Board for free distribution, gives full information regarding courses of mission study for adults as well as children. No member can afford to remain uninformed on the great work of missions when this vast storehouse of information is placed within his reach. Send for several copies of "Mission Study" to distribute among your friends. It pays.

In order to show the exact location of every Protestant mission station on the foreign field, the Interchurch World Movement is preparing a new system of missionary geography. The first step has been the making of accurate maps. Maps prepared by the denominational boards generally try to show only the approximate position of their foreign posts. The Field Occupancy section has already completed a map of India, showing with accuracy the location of every missionary post. "Master maps" in the headquarters of the Interchurch World Movement will be kept up to date by constant reports from the countries and societies concerned. Plans are also being made for the production of a number of smaller maps, which will show density of population, distribution of races, health conditions, and other facts which have a close bearing upon missionary work.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

The Church Must Reach Out.—A public speaker aptly said, in a recent address, that the progress of Christianity is hindered today because a good many people still look on the church as a kind of social club that operates for the benefit of its members and not for the general uplift of the nation. It is a point well taken. The church that does not, like the Master, demonstrate its concern for humanity at large by a recognition of its various needs, fails of its real mission and needs a new vision of its vital possibilities.

The Better Way.—Too many of us are altogether too ready to blame some one else for existing church delinquencies. It might be well to do some investigating closer home. This is the way some one plainly states the case: "Blessed is he who doth not say: 'Lo, what is the matter with the minister? Why doth he not fill the church so that there is no more room?' The wise one is the man who goeth out and saith to his friend: 'Come thou with me and I will do thee good, and so will the minister.' Truly, that man understandeth that one personal word is better than a sermon."

Adapting Ourselves to Peculiar Needs.—An eastern Sunday-school found that twelve of its older teen-age boys were prevented from attending Sunday-school by being compelled to do unavoidable work at a place of public utility. As a change of employment did not seem advisable, the boys were induced to meet for lesson study on a week-day evening—an expedient that has proved so popular that constant additions are being made to this unique week-day Bible class. A plan of that sort might be set on foot in other communities to excellent advantage. Street car and railway employés, telephone and telegraph operators, and many others, who are on duty during the Sunday-school hour, might be induced to attend a week-day Bible class at some convenient evening hour.

AROUND THE WORLD

Holland's Reclamation Project

A project of reclaiming the 480,000 acres, now covered by the waters of the Zuyder Zee, is well under way. An expenditure of $92,000,000 will be required to carry out the plan. The reclaimed land will make a strip sixty miles long, and will be amply capable of supporting 150,000 persons. Formidable as this project may appear to be, neither the vast expenditure nor the prodigious efforts required, are regarded as serious barriers to its accomplishment. The forces of Christianity are confronted by an equally prodigious reclamation project—the salvation of perishing souls as yet unreached. Millions of dollars will be required, and many workers, but the marching orders of the Great Captain are clear and emphatic: "Go ye," and it is our business to furnish men and means.

Prohibition Proved Its Worth

To say the least, the showing made by the State of Indiana under the prohibition regime is most illuminating. Sneeringly the assertion was made by the liquor dealers: "Prohibition will not prohibit," but, somehow, the facts seem to belie their forecasts. Sept. 30, 1918—six months after the State prohibitory law went into effect—thirty-four Indiana jails were empty, and thirty-five had less than five inmates each. In eight other counties the jails were utilized to take care of various county charges. The six most populous counties had only 120 in their jails, as compared with 625 the year before. Taking into account the total number of jail commitments, there was a falling off of 14,732 in the year. The workhouse at Indianapolis has been closed for the good and sufficient reason that the former inmates have turned to the better way of sobriety.

A Fight Against Radicalism

In recognition of the fact that serious danger threatens our nation by reason of hidden but nevertheless pernicious plottings against law and order, all the forces of religion and civilization are being massed to combat that stealthy foe, and to preserve the stability of the nation. Churches of all denominations are to unite, under the auspices of the Inter-Church World Movement, to oppose those who are plotting against American institutions, and endeavoring to stir up industrial strife. An aggregate of 200,000 congregations, with a total membership of 25,000,000 people, is pledged for the movement. Plans are now in process of formulation for doing effective work. From the earliest days of the primitive church, God's children have ever recognized the "powers that be" as "ordained of God," and their spirit of loyalty has been unquestioned, in so far as there was no conflict with the teachings of Holy Writ.

Plan of Spreading Religious Truths

To put up, in public places, suitable racks containing Gospel literature and religious papers, costs the "International Christian Truth Investigation Society," of Chicago, $2,000,000 a year. Five dollars will pay for the upkeep of one rack for one year. The society hopes, by its program, not only to disseminate religious truth, but also to familiarize people with the literature of their own denominations. The headquarters of this society are at 401 Marquette Building, Chicago. While our own Church of the Brethren has for some years made occasional attempts along the line of religious literature distribution, as above referred to, no systematic plan has so far been decided upon. A well-selected line of tracts, together with our various periodicals, would seem to furnish abundant material for hundreds of racks in all parts of the United States. Who will move out along the line suggested?

The Bible Instead of Ancestral Tablets

Special plans are being developed by mission workers in China to establish the family altar in the homes of native Christians. Rev. E. G. Tewksbury, Sunday-school Field Secretary, representing the World's Sunday School Association, has made a special survey, in which it was revealed that not more than half the Christian homes observe the practice of family worship. Though this record makes a more favorable showing than that of the homeland, it does not satisfy the missionaries. They desire to see a more

The Great World Family

Nothing more clearly illustrates the growing unity of the world than the common aim of the forces which are moving today in the life of the East as well as of the West. Travelers who penetrated to the most remote sections of Asia, at the time of the European war, tell thousand miles away, saw the direful effects of the great struggle in every country they happened to strike. We are told that there is not a nation or people or individual which is not affected beneficially or prejudicially by the welfare or misfortune of all the world. A disaster from earthquake, from disease, from drought, from war, which falls upon any nation, in these days, affects the status of the whole world in greater or less degree, and, on the other hand, the progress of thought and the spread of religious truth bring advantages to the whole race.

More Than 800,000 Armenians Need Relief

Latest reports to Cleveland H. Dodge, treasurer of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, place the number of people, who will require assistance until next year's harvest, at 800,000. The greatly-needed relief work, done by the above-named organization, has been conclusively proved its value that Congress recently incorporated the "American Committee," to give it a legally-recognized status. While a mandate over Armenia by the United States, as is urged by many, might greatly contribute to the permanent safeguarding of that country there is some difference of opinion as to the propriety of detailing United States troops for that work. As far as indications seem to point at the present time, Armenian residents in the United States will probably be requested by the administration to go to the aid of their countrymen.

Preserving Ancient Jerusalem

Those who have visited the Holy City in past years are doubtless greatly interested in its future preservation and hopes have been expressed that the various places of special interest might be preserved as they have always been, and guarded against hasty and ill-advised reconstruction. To this end a scheme for restoring and permanently preserving Jerusalem has been drawn up by the British military authorities, in conjunction with the municipal directors of the city. The old city within the walls is not to be disturbed in any way whatever, so that its old-time construction and character may be preserved as it was in the days of yore. Then, too, the encroachment of further buildings, immediately outside the walls is to be guarded against. The modern suburban city is to be constructed in accordance with carefully-prepared plans.

Value of College Training

Some years ago most business men did not look upon college graduates with special favor. They did not regard higher educational training as a convincing demonstration of fitness and suitability for office work and business management. How rapidly college men are of late making themselves a factor in the commercial world, is revealed by the statement of a noted business house of Cincinnati, Ohio. Its entire sales force and corps of managers are graduates of a well-known college. The president of the corporation declares that after an experience of years, he has found that the college-trained man brings to his work a fitness not otherwise attainable. And this is true in the world of business, should not the same "fitness" be a most acceptable requisite of the worker who attempts to take the message of salvation to a perishing world?

The Need of Calm Reasoning

Running through the debate on the Peace Covenant and the League of Nations it creates, is the constant assertion that the right to make war is necessary to the discharge of certain national duties. It is but the reiteration of the same spirit that permeated the sons of Zebedee when they wanted fire rained on the villages which denied the ordinary rites of eastern hospitality to our Blessed Lord. Yes, John and James were insistent upon "direct action." So is the extreme radical of today, for whose ends agitation and votes are too slow a path. He simply does not want to wait for a reasonable and peaceful adjustment. He refuses the slower but peaceful road and desires the swifter remedy of force—the much vaunted "direct action." But those who, to meet social ills

HOME AND FAMILY

"Such a Care"

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

"They're such a care," I heard her say,
Speaking of children yesterday.
"I sometimes wonder if it pays.
If all the gladness of their ways
Is worth the pain of parting when God calls his babies home again.
I think it better not to know
A joy that is so soon to go—
And then the risk! You can not tell
Whether or not they'll turn out well;
With all your care, you can not say
How far their feet shall go astray;
I fear I could not stand the shame
If flesh of mine should stain my name."

I answered: "Once your mother's prayer
Was to be given such a care.
She asked that she might know your smile,
Feel your caresses for a while,
Stand vigil by your cot at night
And give her strength for your delight;
Ventured—your days of life to buy—
The pain of parting should you die,
Nor gave one thought unto the shame,
That you might place upon her name;
Whate'er the risk throughout your days,
She only asked a child to raise—
She did not ask a guarantee
That you would pure and lovely be.

"Today a lonely mother weeps,
Whose babe beneath the willows sleeps,
Yet gladly would she bear the pain
To know such happiness again;
She has forever as her own
The days of joy which she has known,
And always, when her heart grows sad,
She can recall the love she's had:
Hers is a richer, sweeter life,
With all the pain and hurt of strife
And all its weight of grief and woe,
Than those who've had no babe to know.
Oh, make unto your God this prayer—
That he shall send you such a care."

Other People's Children

BY J. H. MOORE

Should a family living in town be constantly annoyed by other people's children? This brings afresh to our mind what we said some time ago about "good neighbors and bad chickens." But let us get at this question in another way.

We have lived much in town—more than fifty years—and always had good neighbors. Now and then we had a problem to solve. Here is one of them. We were then too busy to give home matters the attention that we should have devoted to them. This made it only the harder on the wife. We then had children of our own—three of them. There lived, a few blocks away, a mother who seemed to enjoy associating with her friends better than caring for her home and children. It was a common custom with her to send her children to some of the neighbors while she put in the afternoon having a good time in the home of a friend or two.

Several times the children, three in number, were sent to our home for safe keeping. It was the home of the preacher, and why should not the preacher's wife have something to do in helping others along? Then, too, she has children of her own, and for a few hours she can look after six boys and girls almost as easily as half the number. So the neighbor mother may have reasoned. Well, tired mothers often like a bit of quiet rest in their own home. Their bodies may be weak, their nerves unstrung and some unseen burdens may be crushing the life out of them. But six live-wire children racing through the house, upstairs and down again, with now and then a tumble and a scream, would grate on the nerves of even a strong woman. But, should the tired mother, just because she is the preacher's wife, be tormented in this manner, week after week?

One evening, on our return from the office, the good wife told us that she had enjoyed a real restful afternoon; that those children came again, but she told them to return home and be nice until their mother finished her visit. So far as we recall, we passed no comment on the act, but thought that it was a fairly risky piece of business for the elder's wife, for the wives of pastors are often expected to stand being imposed upon six times, and even seven, without a murmur, all for the good of the flock over which her husband has the oversight. In those days Brethren preachers hardly dreamed of a salary, and as we made our own living, and preached a free Gospel, we felt a little more independent than the man whose congregation has to stretch every nerve, in order to raise the money for his salary. We were in a position to say something in support of the rights of tired and nervous mothers, should it become necessary to do so.

Well, wife had more restful afternoons following the incident, for her own children had learned gracefully to tiptoe through the room while mother was taking a very much needed nap.

Time went rapidly by, weeks, months, years and a decade. Our own children came into possession of homes and families of their own, and we found ourselves snugly located in a new home, this time right alongside of a family of six children, with something less than three years between the ages of the children in their order in the family. As parents grow older their nerves get some closer to the surface and they are not able to stand as much racket as they may have stood in early life. Then they may not be disposed to make the allowance for other children that they quite willingly made for their own. Well, there we were in the best house we ever owned, right by the side of a half dozen children, with no fence between us. In their play, as we thought, they will be all over our lot, trample down the flowers, run across the garden and possibly break a glass in the window with a stray ball.

Some years passed over our heads, and during all this time we never knew one of these children to cross our lot. Now and then they might cross the line after a ball, and even then they would apologize for the bit of liberty they were using. By the hour they would play up and down the walk in front, but they disturbed nothing. Occasionally one of the little girls—washing her face and hands and combing her hair back nicely—would come to our home for a short visit. The children were always well dressed, and always polite. We saw them on the streets, in the stores, on the street-cars, and they invariably behaved nicely.

By and by there came a boy into the family. With a half dozen older children to tease a boy, we felt sure that there would be a lively chap around, in the course of a few years. When the boy grew strong enough to be left at play alone, he, too, played up and down the walk, just as his sisters had done, but not once did he venture on our lawn, or on the part of the walk that led directly to our porch. As the children grew up, they seemed to know their place. We noticed other children almost as wild as little animals, and sometimes rude. But by the side of us grew to manhood and womanhood a group of boys and girls, useful and well educated, who never made the least disturbance in the community.

How was it done? The parents had but little property. They both worked hard and possessed only a moderate education. If there was ever any disturbance in the family, it never reached our ears. The children were trained. They were taught to understand their place in church and society, as well as in the immediate community. They were taught the very best of manners, and in this way became examples for other boys and girls, as well as a credit to the family. But how was all this accomplished? We wish some one could tell us. Then we would be in a position to recommend a method for general use in the neighborhood, where a few mothers are wondering what course they can pursue to keep from being greatly worried by other people's children. These mothers can take care of their own children, but how about the other children that enter their premises, and even their own homes, almost any hour in the day? We are asked for a method that will result in better conditions. In this article we have referred to two. The first one is quite risky. We must not urge it. Wrapped up in the last method there is a secret, and we must wait for some one to reveal the inside workings.

The Problem of Daughter's Room

BY REBECCA C. POUTZ

With one arm full of things needing mending, Sister Streeter appeared at the door of Sister Hartling's comfortable little sitting-room and almost without pause entered, as a cheery invitation was given from within. And although she always took some work along, for she had precious little time for neighborly calls, not to mention sitting with hands idle, yet Sister Streeter considered these little visits with the older woman, who had been through all the problems and perplexities, with which she was now struggling, her best recreation, for their talks together were always so helpful and profitable.

For once she did not have anything in particular on her mind, but after a pleasant exchange of greetings and seating herself in an easy chair, she was forcibly reminded of something that caused her constant vexation as she threaded her needle and picked up the top piece off the pile, preparatory to work.

"Dear, oh dear," she exclaimed as she held up a badly-rent blouse of Johnnie's, but explained as Sister Hartling gave an understanding nod, "but really his torn clothing doesn't worry me half as much as his carelessness does. I simply can't get him to keep himself as tidy as he should. I've both coaxed and scolded, but it seems useless. Why, I have to watch after him, to see that he keeps his hair and teeth and clothes brushed, and even that he washes his hands, just as it he was six instead of fourteen." Sister Streeter's tone was despairing.

Sister Hartling smiled reminiscently as she replied, "Yes, there is a stage when it seems one can't teach children such things. I'll never forget when my Anne came to it, but I learned a valuable lesson then that I turned to advantage more than once afterward."

Sister Streeter adjusted the patch deftly under the gaping hole in the troublesome Johnnie's waist, but listened eagerly as Sister Hartling went on: "Well, Anne, being a girl, was always eager to have her personal appearance nice when she went out, but her room, my, my, what a sight and a mess it always was!" This in a perturbed tone, for even yet she could not think of it calmly.

"I actually worried myself nervous over what to me seemed an inexcusable and unpardonable fault in so big a girl. It was enough for me continually to straighten up after the smaller children, for it was always one of my strong points to keep my house tidy. And then to have a daughter with such slovenly habits—well, I simply couldn't abide it.

"But a littered floor, clothes flung around anywhere and the contents of bureau drawers stirred into hash, didn't disturb Anne any more than my scoldings did. I wasn't only ready to give up in despair, but had come to a state where I did not know what I might have done, if Providence hadn't offered a solution and taught me a lesson besides.

"She had a girl friend, a few years her senior, of whom she thought a great deal. In fact, I had not realized how much she did adore and look up to Lena. You see, she was in the hero and heroine-worshiping stage and at this period the object of their affection has more influence over one's children than you have yourself. They'll do almost anything in an effort to stand well in the adored one's estimation. I also learned that this influence can work the wrong way, as well as the right.

"But this is getting off the subject. To come back to Anne and her room. I always tried to see that no one got in it when it was so upside-down, but Anne didn't seem to care whom she took up. One day I was cleaning in the boys' room, which was next to hers, when, what should I hear but Anne bringing Lena up, to show her a new dress. I actually felt sick, for I well knew what particular housekeepers they were at her home.

"I both watched and listened, to see if anything would happen. Lena gave one comprehensive look around, surprise and disapproval showing all over her face. I really think that it was the first time in her life that Anne had ever taken notice of thoughts expressed in looks, for without a word she began kicking odd shoes and slippers out of sight and picking up stray garments.

"With the remark, 'I'll help you; I don't like a mussed room either,' Lena fell quickly to assisting. She showed her how she arranged things so as to keep them nice, how to hang up her clothes properly, and how to fix the contents of drawers so as to be handy. I wish you could have seen the place at the end of a half hour.

"But all the while I could see that Anne's mortification burned deeper and deeper. It was terrible to come so short in the eyes of her adored friend. But it ended my trouble along this line and also forcibly brought home to me, as nothing else ever had, the importance of the right kind of companions for one's children. More than once afterwards I used this influence to advantage and I also had the worry of my life breaking it once when it was for the wrong, but then, that is another story." Sister Hartling sighed as she finished.

"Thanks more than I can tell you," the younger woman said warmly as she rolled up her mending and rose to go. "I think I see a way out of my own difficulty."

War Taught Women How to Dress Well

Simplicity Marks Apparel of London Working Girls

THE working girl in London is gradually winning for herself a place among the well-dressed women in the world, says the London Times. Her neat, tailor-made costume of some dark shade or neutral shade, her well-shod feet with heels much straighter than they used to be, her untrimmed hat, and her plain silk blouse, make up a very comely, pleasant picture. You can see hundreds of girls dressed in this sensible fashion going to work, with their leather cases in their hands, any morning of the working week, and you feel quite sure that English girls, at least, have learned, or are quickly learning, that neatness is the first point in good dressing.

You may get an unpleasant surprise later in the day by meeting girls and women in dresses more suitable to ballrooms than the street, and tawdry even for dancing. You see cheap satins and velvets in pale shades or brilliant colors, with dangling fringes and an assortment of beads, earrings, pendants, bracelets and rings, completely killing any note of simplicity that may remain.

In some cases, though, shoes will peep, shamefaced and sensible, beneath the skirt, and the stockings will wear the pathetic smirk of cheap silk in a shade not suited to dress or shoes. But the great crime is the hat. It is brazen in its unbecomingness. It has no link of sympathy with any other part of the toilet, and it is worn in quite the wrong way. It is either too big or too small, overtrimmed, and with so many kinds of trimming that the mind reels before such incoherence. It is the result of a lack of intelligence in dress. Everything composing the toilet was bought at a different time and with no thought about a harmonic whole. The material was a "bargain," the fringe a "remnant," the stockings an "out-size," the hat a "Paris model"! The shoes a proof that common sense still exists.

In lesser and greater degree there are hundreds of such ill-thought-out toilets to be seen today, but there tion on a method they find hard to attain. Anoth extravagance comes from the fact that they wear the clothes carelessly, and do not take care of them in t wardrobe. A spick-and-span appearance comes large from a good carriage and tidy cupboard shelves.

To walk well, to sit well, to wash and iron, ma and mend, are things girls do not learn at school these days. If they did, and learned to do them w and daintily, they would spend less money and lo better dressed. During the war they cooked a scrubbed and never counted the cost, no matter wh their social standing was. Now they are asked to work that is quite as important but not so excitin They must give up khaki and uniform. They mu leave the hospital and the canteen, and qualify for t nursery, the kitchen, and the household storeroo No matter what their place in the world may be, th must make it as beautiful as they can, and good cloth well worn, will help. Some of them are doing it ready, but not all.—The Post, New York.

DISTRICT MEETING

Thursday, Oct. 23, 9 A. M.

MARKLE, INDIANA

The report for our church at this place will cover what has been done during the summer months. Sunday-school and church services were held each Sunday morning and evening. The attendance has been fairly good, yet there is room for more good work to be done.

Capt. Wiard, of Winona Lake, was with us one week and gave a course of illustrated lectures. At different times during the summer we have had with us ministers from other localities, to deliver messages which renewed the spiritual vision.

Our Christian Workers' Meeting has been very interesting, with programs prepared by our superintendent, Sister Edith Bowman, for both old and young. We regret to see her leave us for the winter. She will attend Bethany Bible School, Chicago. We trust that the good interest may continue, with Sister Lena Heasten to fill her place as superintendent.

At our July council Bro. D. B. Garber resigned as pastor, having served for the past thirteen years. As yet we have no regular pastor appointed, but are having services each Sunday morning and evening, with different ministers to preach for us. A ministerial committee was appointed to secure a home pastor. The committee consists of Brethren David Brumbaugh, Josiah Cook and John Crull.

Our Harvest Meeting in September was blessed with a fine, sunshiny day, and with a good attendance. Dinner was served on the church lawn. Bro. A. R. Eikenberry, of North Manchester, was with us. His talk in the forenoon was based on "The Cure for Selfishness—Jesus Christ." Bro. Goodmiller, of Loon Creek, opened the afternoon services, after which Bro. Eikenberry addressed us on "Consecration." At the close of the service several signified a desire to do more consecrated work. A collection was taken for the Old Folks' Home.

Our regular September council meeting was presided over by Bro. Dan Funderburg. The report of our ministerial committee was given; they have not yet fully decided upon a pastor.

The delegates chosen for the District Meeting were Sister Lina Bowman and Bro. Dan Funderburg, with Sister Flora Funderburg and Bro. John Crull, alternates.

Our love feast is to be held Oct. 25. Lillian Earhart.

NORTHERN INDIANA MINISTERIAL MEETING

The Ministerial Meeting of Northern Indiana was held Oct. 1, in the chapel of the Westminster Building at Winona Lake. Though the attendance was not as large as usual, the interest was excellent. The program was good and the subjects well treated, though several substitutes had to serve on short notice.

The general theme of the forenoon was a trained ministry. Bro. F. A. Myers spoke on "The Minister's Training in the Development of Souls." Among the many good things said we note the following: Instinct, individuality and personality all figure in soul culture, with the emphasis on the latter. Personality is not a gift but a development.

Bro. Chas. C. Cripe then took up "The Minister's Dependence upon God." He said that there is too much of a tendency, in these days of training, education and supported pastors, to let these take the place of dependence upon God for help. Our schools are a valuable asset, but the biggest part of the minister's training is his dependence upon God.

When the subjects were opened for general discussion, there was such a spirit pervading that the suggestion to spend the time in a season of prayer met with hearty approval.

The theme of the afternoon service was "A Trained Church." The first part, "Source of Its Training," was discussed by Bro. I. S. Burns. He referred us to Paul's expression, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

The last subject was "The Object of the Church's Training." Bro. Shull at a late hour was assigned this subject and told us first that he considered a prepared or trained church one whose minister knows his God, the Word, and men and their problems. And the church must be with him in these things. It must be a praying church and a pure church. In the general discussion great emphasis was rightly placed on the power of a life back of the message. Harvey S. Bowers, Secretary.

SPRING CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA

August 10 we were greatly delighted to have Bro. Ober meet with us at the Palmyra house. In his sermon he dwelt upon the wonderful mind and ways of God. July 27 two were received into the church by baptism.

Sept. 7 we met for Sunday-school and preaching at the Palmyra house. Brother and Sister Graybill were with us. The latter gave a very interesting talk to the Sunday-school about the Sunday-schools in Sweden. Following that, Bro. Graybill preached. In the afternoon he gave an address at the Fairview schoolhouse. In the evening he gave a talk at the Spring Creek house. Sept. 10 he addressed an audience at the Palmyra house, describing Sweden and the people in general. At the close of the meeting four of our members appeared on the pulpit, garbed in Swedish costumes. Brother and Sister Graybill have spent some time here in their old home church. By Oct. 22 they will leave again for their field of labor. Brother and Sister Glasmire and three children expect to sail with them, and make their home in Sweden.

Sept. 15 the Spring Creek church met for council at the Palmyra house, with Eld. Longenecker in charge. It was decided to hold our love feast Nov. 1, at 3 P. M., at the Palmyra house. It was also decided to have a series of meetings at the Palmyra house in the near future. Our collections for the Armenian and Syrian Relief Fund amounted to $730.70.

Sept. 20, Saturday afternoon, we held our Harvest Meeting at the Palmyra house. Bro. Harry Nye, of Elizabethtown, preached a very appropriate sermon for the occasion. The services were well attended. A special offering of $54 was taken for the benefit of the Orphanage at Neffsville. Mrs. Elizabeth Blauch.

DALEVILLE COLLEGE

Inasmuch as other colleges of the Church of the Brethren have announced their splendid opening of the present session, it is but proper that Daleville should fall in line.

Daleville, the most southern school of the Church of the Brethren, is pleased to announce the splendid opening of the present session. The opening lectures were given in the College Chapel Sept. 16, at 10 A. M. Mr. Cedric Layman, of the B. A. class of 1912, and recently returned from service over-seas, gave the initial address. What he saw and experienced seems to have intensified his earnestness to waken up young people to their opportunities along the better lines of living in and out of school. He was followed by Rev. G. M. Brooks, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church of Roanoke. His was also a masterful address, in which he stressed a splendid outline for the school-year. The attendance was unusually large, notwithstanding the very busy season at this time of the year.

The enrollment the first day was sixty-seven per cent larger than the first day of any previous year, and eighty-one per cent above the first week of any previous year. Later enrollment is keeping up the record of the first week. Every available space is taken, and yet we always have room for one more. Near by neighbors have very kindly thrown open their doors to roomers. In this way we hope to be able to provide for the accommodation of all yet to come. The dining-room and class-rooms are also taxed to their utmost. More buildings is the one problem before the trustees. They have made good in every former need, and they will heroically meet the demands of the present situation.

The College Department has recovered, and more too, the shrinkage due to the late war. The Bible Department has more than doubled its enrollment over former years. The Volunteer Band started out with an enrollment of twenty-three. This is an exceptionally good start for Daleville. The Music Department is also crowded. Eight pianos are in constant use. Special Music features are already planned for the year. The student body shows an earnestness that bids fair for a good session. Daleville is experiencing the awakening that all other schools are realizing. Our Brotherhood should rejoice that it has come, and bend every energy to make it fruitful to the honor and glory of God. T. S. Moherman.

Ogden church, and all feel much stronger spiritually.—Wilbur L. Ogden, Batavia, Iowa, Oct. 6.

Prairie City.—Our two weeks' revival meeting closed Sept. 28. Bro. Oscar Dicht, of Beaver, was our evangelist, and Sister Sadie Mauger, of Bethany Bible School, conducted the song service. While there were no immediate results, yet we know that much good has been done. Bro. Dicht preached powerful sermons and endeared himself to the hearts of the people. Sister Mauger was with us more than four weeks, having taught a term of singing lessons before the revival began. Bro. O. E. Mesamer, of Bethany Bible School, recently gave a good talk on the "Forward Movement" work in our Sunday-school. The date of our anniversary services has been changed from Oct. 12 to Oct. 26.—Nellie L. Bowie, Prairie City, Iowa, Oct. 6.

KANSAS

Armourdale Mission.—We are glad to report that our little mission is growing in interest, despite the hindering circumstances of the past. Although the reaping time does not seem to have come, as yet, we feel that it is very near. Our Sunday evening stereopticon lectures seem to have done much to help our work. These lectures are given the last Sunday evenings of each month. We find it an excellent way to study the Bible, especially for the children. The Ladies' Aid Society is no small contributing factor to the interest of the work.—A. Miller, Kansas City, Kans., Oct. 8.

LOUISIANA

Rose Pine.—Sept. 28 Bro. J. A. Miller, of Manvel, Texas, began a week's series of meetings, greatly appreciated by the members. When we came to this community, the first of January, the people knew nothing of the Brethren or their teachings. In July a preacher's home was offered rent free, in which to hold union services. A Sunday-school was at once started with thirty-nine enrolled. It now has an attendance of from 100 to 112 at the regular sessions. The necessary furnishings and equipment have been bought and there is still $25 in the treasury. The people of the community have decided to build a union church in the near future and have over $600 in pledges, with a part already paid in. The ground has been donated. There are eight members of the Brethren Church within five miles of Rose Pine, and if others are thinking of locating in the South, we invite them to come and look the situation over before locating elsewhere. An organization will be effected in the near future.—Mrs. Cora Cox, Rose Pine, La., Oct. 7.

MARYLAND

Ridgely church enjoyed a feast of good things Sept. 6 and 7. Two addresses delivered by those from adjoining congregations at our missionary meeting gave us much inspiratioo. Sept. 13 Brother Sister Wampler were with us. The former gave an illustrated lecture on their work in China during the fight against the pneumonic plague.—Deborah K. Reber, Ridgely, Md., Sept. 29.

NEBRASKA

Alvo.—Eld. H. M. Bruhaker, of Plattsburg, Mo., began a ser evangelistic sermons Sept. 21, closing Oct. 5, preaching in all s teen sermons. The attendance was fairly good and while at time we can not report any conversions, we believe there has seed sown that will bear fruitage later. The evangelist made personal calls, which were appreciated. Oct. 4 we held our comm service, with Bro. Bruhaker officiating.—J. L. Snavely, Alvo, Oct. 5.

Hiland.—The writer sometimes feels that we are as sheep w a shepherd, for we no longer have a church here. When the B brethren dedicated their church they offered us the privilege o it whenever we desired to have services. If some of the Bre pass this way, we would be pleased to have them stop and gi a few sermons. No one of our faith has preached here for o year, and at present there is no preachieg of any kind.—H Harry, Moorefield, Nebr., Oct. 5.

SOUTHERN IOWA CONFERENCE

ing of Thursday evening. The climax was surely reached at this meeting.

Bro. M. W. Emmert told us of "The Part That Missionary Effort Plays in the Forward Movement." Sister Sadie Miller told us of "Characteristics That Will Educate Each Individual Member to Better Missionary Activity." Bro. A. H. Brower gave us "A Workable Plan of Systematic Giving."

It seemed that each speaker was at his very best. The wide experience of Bro. Emmert and Sister Miller made it easy for them to inspire us by thrilling statements. The audience seemed spellbound, while being addressed, and surely the Holy Spirit was hovering over the meeting. We are sure that the vision of the entire audience was broadened as the great responsibilities, opportunities and possibilities were set forth.

The business of the District was considered on Friday. There were several items of business besides the queries, but the spirit of the meeting was ideal. Eld. J. D. Brower was chosen Moderator, and did his work very well indeed; Bro. L. A. Walker was Reading Clerk, and the writer, Writing Clerk.

A number of officers were chosen for the ensuing year, and several queries acted on. Eld. A. L. Sears was chosen to represent the District on Standing Committee; Eld. J. D. Brower, alternate.

The meetings closed with the best of feelings. Above all we thanked our Heavenly Father for his goodness and his wonderful works among the children of men.

Wm. E. Thompson, Writing Clerk.

Ottumwa, Iowa.

NEW HAVEN CHURCH, MICHIGAN

We had the misfortune of having our church and contents completely destroyed hy fire Sept. 26. The origin of the fire is unknown. We were preparing to entertain our friends at a Harvest Home-Coming on Sunday. The use of the Methodist church was kindly offered us and about 250 old friends and neighbors gathered there on Sunday morning and enjoyed a spiritual feast. Eld. D. P. Sebeehter gave a very interesting thanksgiving sermon in the forenoon. Eld. C. H. Deardorff gave an inspiring sermon on "The World's Needs" in the afternoon in the church, while Bro. D. E. Sower and wife and the Sunday-school superintendent entertained the children with appropriate talks and songs in the schoolhouse. An offering of $54.60 for World-wide Missions was taken.

Sept. 27 we met in the home of Bro. D. E. Chambers in members' meeting. Eld. C. H. Deardorff presided. The report of the visit was made. We decided to rehuild our church, and a committee of five was appointed to take up the work. We have secured the use of a schoolhouse and our meetings will continue as usual.

Eld. J. Edson Ulery will be with us in a Township Sunday-school Convention on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 11 and 12. Alla L. Emrick.

Middleton, Mich.

LONE STAR, KANSAS

Sunday, Sept. 28, we held a District Sunday-school Convention in our church, with three townships represented. We had two of our county officers with us, and many from adjoining Sunday-schools.

The forenoon was taken up by a general review of the last quarter's lessons, conducted hy Rev. L. Griffith, of Washington Creek. After this, O. J. Nuffer, of Lawrence, our County Secretary, told how to standardize our schools.

Prof. Ehright, of Baker University, Baldwin, Kans., gave us an excellent talk on "Worship in the Sunday-school." In the afternoon Mrs. Ehright gave a reading entitled, "Mrs. Pickett's Mite Box," which was very entertaining as well as helpful. Prof. Ehright then talked about the "Four Portraits of Jesus," which was especially instructive to the teachers.

The evening service was also given over to Prof. and Mrs. Ebright. The latter gave another reading, while Bro. Ebright spoke later on "Three Parables of the Automohile." This subject was ably handled. Every one voted that the day had been well spent and thoroughly enjoyed.

Lawrence, Kans. Mrs. J. W. Gorbutt.

BETHEL CHURCH, FLORIDA

We met in council Sept. 20, with Eld. A. D. Crist presiding. Four letters were received. The members decided to hold a series of meetings and love feast as soon as an evangelist can be secured.

Eld. A. D. Crist, our delegate to District Meeting and associate gatherings, held in North Carolina, gave us some of the inspiration and help which he received in attending the meetings. He reported the District united in her effort for the advancement of the Kingdom. The Bethel church was very anxious to have the District gatherings in 1920, hut by a majority vote of two they go to West Virginia.

We receive many letters, inquiring about our part of Florida. Being a rural church, the advantages for winter tourists are better at other places, unless they buy a little home of a few acres for a winter garden, and enjoy country life. Our part of Florida is splendid for agricultural purposes, as crops and fruit do well. We know of no place where people can get a good home as cheaply as in our Bethel church boundaries. We are twenty miles out from Jacksonville, which is a splendid market for all produce. We are not agents for land, nor do we have any to sell, hut we are interested in building up churches of the South, and especially Bethel, as this is our home.

Middlehurg, Fla. I. H. Crist.

WILEY CHURCH, COLORADO

Sept. 7 was Home-Coming Day, and was celebrated with a hasket dinner and an afternoon program on the history and development of the church from its start, seventeen years ago. There were members present from Hartman, Holly, Cheraw, Rocky Ford, Ordway, McClave and Abilene, Kans.

Bro. Luther Clinc, of McClave, the pioneer member of this section, related some very interesting facts ahout trying to locate members here before we had the telephones and automobiles. That was the time when Bro. Geo. Studehaker, now of Rocky Ford, came in his mission wagon, and held some meetings here.

Bro. Chas. Shank, of Abilene, Kans., told of his experience as a minister, when located here by the Mission Board on the mission farm. Very near the time of his coming, and unknown to each other, Bro. W. S. Ellenberger, a minister from Missouri, and Bro. Homer Ullom, a minister from Kansas, both located here, and the Prowers church was organized. Services were held in the Star schoolhouse on the Santa Fe Trail. Later the church was divided into the McClave and Wiley churches, which now have churchhouses in the two above-named towns. The fact was evident that through all these years we have enjoyed a steady and healthy growth.

Tbis day, too, was the beginning of our series of meetings—a home effort. Our pastor, Bro. Jacoh Funk, did the preaching, and Clarence Heckman led the song service. The meetings lasted ten days and resulted in thirty-eight conversions.

Bro. Funk is now holding meetings at Morrill, Kans. In his absnee Bro. J. J. Yoder, of McPherson, is to fill the pulpit Sept. 28, and Bro. Crosswhite, of Rocky Ford, Oct. 5. Laura V. Ullom.

A PROFITABLE VACATION

Bro. Roy Dilling, wife, and little son, of Bethany Bible School, spent part of their September vacation in the Pleasant Dale church, Ind., conducting a series of revival services, which closed Sept. 28. Sister Dilling led the song service, while Bro. Dilling gave us very impressive messages. The sermons were all highly practical, as well as intensely spiritual. While we can not report any accessions, yet we know that the membership was stirred to a greater zeal in the Lord's work. Sister Dilling's leading of the song service was also highly appreciated.

Many regretted that the meetings could not be continued. But because of the fact that they are connected with the school-work at Bethany, they had to leave us in the midst of good interest. May God continue to bless Bethany, that she may he able to send out workers that are true and loyal to our principles!

Another impressive feature of this meeting was seen in the special songs rendered by Brother and Sister Dilling. Their purpose was to lead up to the sermon or to follow with a song that was aimed to he the final step of the sermon. In this work they are also highly gifted to reach the hearts of the people. John D. Kline.

GOSHEN CITY CHURCH, INDIANA

Sunday evening the Harmony Men's Chorus, accompanied hy our pastor, visited surrounding churches, giving very helpful and inspiring programs. The chorus is trained by Prof. Ebersole, of Goshen College, and adds to the interest of our services on many occasions.

New officers for the Christian Workers' Society were elected, with Sister Cecil Cripe as president.

The Men's Bihle Class gave the program on Sunday evening, Sept. 28. There were several good talks by the men, and selections hy the chorus and hy the Harmony Male Quartette. Oct. 5, Missionary Day, Bro. Otho Winger, of Manchester College, will be with us. Oct. 12 is Rally Day.

Our church has been redecorated and a new heating system has been installed. The hasement is being remodeled, with a room for the Aid Society and rooms for the Primary and Intermediate Departments. These improvements will be of great assistance in carrying on the various activities of the church. Beulah Manahan.

Sept. 28.

MONTICELLO CHURCH, INDIANA

We have had showers of blessings and a season of rejoicing during the past two months. August 24 Eld. Ezra Flory, of Bethany Bihle School, was with us in a Harvest Meeting. He also gave two lectures on child training. An offering of $25 was lifted for missionary purposes.

Sept. 2 Bro. D. B. Hirt, of Portland, Ind., came to assist us in a series of meetings. He continued for nearly two weeks, preaching in all fourteen sermons. Two were baptized. The church was strengthened and the members were awakened to more active service.

Sept. 27 we met in council. It had been previously arranged that an election he held to call a brother to the ministry and two to the deacon's office. Bro. Frank Fisher, of Mexico, Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, of Camden, and Bro. Roy Mishler, of Kewanna, were with us as a committee for the work. Brethren Edward Zimmerman, Walter Marhurger and Dorsey Butterhaugh were called to the ministry. Brethren Willard Cochran, Joseph Dilling and George Kepp were chosen deacons. All were duly installed. This work consumed about all of the afternoon, so the work of our regular quarterly council was postponed until Saturday, Oct. 4.

Sept. 28 Bro. Lawrenee Shultz, President of the Sunday School Board of Middle Indiana, with Bro. Fred Replogle and Bro. Irvin Thomas, all of Manchester College, was with us in the interest of the Forward Movement. They gave an inspiring program in the afternoon, and an illustrated lecture at the Guernsey church in the evening. An offering of $10.50 was lifted to defray expenses.

We expect Bro. Amos Eikenherry, of Manchester College, to be with us on Sunday, Oct. 26, in the morning, and also at our love feast in the evening, at 7:30.

Sept. 29. Orpha Bridge.

CARTHAGE, MISSOURI

It was not my good fortune to he at our Sunday-school Convention at Carthage, last Sunday, hut I have since learned that all passed off pleasantly. Bro. A. W. Adkins, the District Secretary, was there. Elder J. M. Mohler enlivened the work by his peculiar tact of interesting the children. He is to have charge of the Carthage congregation for one year. Sister Hester Harold was chosen to represent our Sunday-school at the District Sunday-School Convention, which convenes at the same time and place as the District Meeting of the church, already announced in the "Messenger."

Eld. Barnhart and Sister Emma Miller are the delegates from Carthage to that meeting. Eld. Mohler was with us yesterday. He delights in paying special attention to the children, and they take interest and delight in his instructions. Eld. Honherger also worshiped with us yesterday. After services in the morning, he, with the writer, went to a council meeting at Joplin, called hy Eld. Oren to take into consideration the present condition of the work there. The membership has been so reduced hy moving out of town, to other occupations and places, that the congregation numbers only what it did fifteen years ago, there heing only four members in the city now, and they widely scattered. There is no resident minister. J. L. Switzer.

FREEVILLE, NEW YORK

We had a splendid summer for crops. A great deal of wheat is being sowed. While we have cold weather, with plenty of good sleighing, in winter, yet the summers are so exceptionally fine that things average very well.

We have so many inquiries about the country that it makes us hustle to answer them all. Many farms are changing hands—mostly to people from the West and South. A number of Brethren have already bought, and others are coming, hut many more of our church people should come without delay, and help us to possess this goodly land. We gladly answer all inquiries, and render all possible assistance to all who come to Freeville.

We have a splendid house for our church services, and at present have preaching at 10 A. M. each Sunday.

We are planning to have a series of evangelistic services in November. After that time we hope to have preaching, both morning and evening.

We had the pleasure of worshiping with the members of our sister church, Lake Ridge, last Sunday.

Pray for us, and let as many as can do so, come and help us. F. L. Baker.

preach a few evenings at Raven Run, prior to their love feast, Oct. 12.—Roy N. Wilson, Sarsen, Pa., Oct. 5.

Viewmont church met in council, with Eld. Horst in charge. The pledge of $100, made by our delegate to Annual Meeting, is being cared for. Our church has been painted this summer, and a committee has been appointed to solicit funds for payment of same. The question of securing a pastor came before the meeting and it was decided that at present we will not hire a regular pastor. Bro. A. W. Berkley and the writer will fill the appointments and also see that the visiting is done. This church is also going to hold an election for a minister or ministers in the near future. The date for our fall love feast was set for Oct. 19, at 2 P. M. We enjoyed the best local Sunday-school Convention ever held thus far, it being our third one. As a result of a talk given at this meeting by Bro. P. J. Blough on "The Preparation for a Successful Future Life" one of our young men and his wife have decided more fully to prepare themselves for greater work in the Master's cause. They are planning to go to Juniata College. Our work at this place is going along nicely.—Wm. H. Rummel, Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 26.

TENNESSEE

Beaver Creek church met in council Oct. 4, with Eld. J. Henry Peterson, moderator. The deacons gave a favorable report. We will hold our love feast Nov. 1, at 3 P. M.—Julia E. Peterson, Fountain City, Tenn., Oct. 5.

Limestone.—We held our communion service Sept. 22. There was a good representation of members present, including five visiting ministers, all of whom we welcomed in the services. Bro. C. D. Reed, of Troutville, Va., preached to a good audience on Sunday. His subject was "Preparedness."—Hopson Bruce, Limestone, Tenn., Oct. 7.

VIRGINIA

Adays Gap church has just closed a series of meetings which began Sept. 6, conducted by Bro. Eugene King. The attendance and interest were good from beginning to end. Twelve were received into the church by baptism.—Clytie E. Holt, Copper Hill, Va., Sept. 30.

Cannon Branch church met in council Oct. 4, with Eld. E. E. Blough presiding. The question of procuring evangelists to hold the series of meetings for 1920 at the Cannon Branch and Bradley houses was considered. If possible we will secure Bro. R. G. Rarick, of Covington, Ohio, for the latter. The latter is still open. Letters of membership were granted to Bro. Wilmer Kline and Sister Nora Harley, who have gone as students to Bridgewater College. Bro. Kline was solicitor for church funds and Sister Harley "Messenger" correspondent. Vacancies caused by their absence were filled by Bro. C. D. Kline and the writer, respectively. The report of the church visit was favorable, the financial reports also were good.—Alvin Kline, Nokesville, Va., Oct. 7.

Copper Hill congregation met for her love feast Sept. 27, with Bro. Isaac Bowman, of Franklin County, officiating. On Sunday the brethren preached a good sermon to a large audience. Our next council meeting will be Nov. 22.—Clytie E. Holt, Copper Hill, Va., Sept. 30.

Kinderhook.—Our ten days' series of meetings, which Eld. G. A. Maupin, of Union Station, has been conducting for us at the Shiloh house, has just come to a close, with one being added to the church. Even though we are not much stronger in number, we feel that we are much better prepared to work for a stronger Chnreh of the Brethren for the world. Our love feast will be held Oct. 18.—L. F. Runion, Kinderhook, Va., Oct. 4.

Mt. Union church has closed a series of meetings, beginning Sept. 17, conducted by Bro. G. T. Stump, who preached nine sermons. The attendance was very good. Four were received by baptism.—Clytie E. Holt, Copper Hill, Va., Sept. 30.

Mt. Zion church met in council Sept. 27, with Eld. D. N. Spitler presiding. The visiting brethren gave a favorable report. The church decided to hold an election some time in October for several brethren to the ministry. Our love feast will be held Oct. 25, beginning at 2 P. M. Bro. L. S. Miller, of Dayton, Va., has promised to be with us.—H. F. Sanger, Luray, Va., Oct. 6.

Notice.—The annual Temperance, Ministerial, Missionary, Sunday-school and District Meeting of the Southern District of Virginia will be held at Antioch church, Franklin County, Va., Nov. 5-7.—Michael Reed, Writing Clerk, Floyd, Va., Sept. 25.

Roanoke.—Sunday, Sept. 14, we met again. This time Bro. Garber gave an illustrated talk. He had several large drawings, which he showed the children, asking them what they were. When they told him, he then explained how it relates to the drawings. The older folks also came in for an application once in a while. A wheel, an anvil, a box, a plane, a hammer, a square, a house and a church, but only eternity will tell the good done in this one service. Friday, Sept. 19, we met in council. The business was a short. Two members were admitted by letters. Our series of meetings having been unavoidably postponed, will be announced later. Our elder being away on important committee work, and our pastor holding a series of meetings elsewhere, Bro. D. F. Hylton is taking care of the work here. Sunday, Sept. 28, Bro. John Crumpacker preached for us. Oct. 5, in the morning, Eld. C. D. Hylton conducted the preaching services. In the evening Prof. I. N. H. Beahm took care of the appointment. We appreciated the coming of these brethren.—Mrs. John H. Shickel, 30 Third Avenue, N. W., Roanoke, Va., Oct. 7.

Selma church met in council August 30 and elected Bro. J. H. Wimmer pastor for the year. The Vacation Bible School conducted here by Sister Elsie Shickel was a wonderful success. One hundred and twenty-five were enrolled, with an average attendance of seventy. Many Bible stories and texts were learned by the children. Besides this, they made some very nice articles—nearly six hundred being exhibited on the last day. We feel that this Bible School meant more to the community than can now be estimated. It not only trained and gave the children employment, but it did as much or more for the helpers. Parents, through their interest in the children, have been interested in their work. Five have been baptized during the past two months.—Ada Kathryn Carter, Selma, Va., Oct. 1.

Syria.—Bro. S. I. Bowman, of Harrisonburg, Va., came to this place Sept. 4 and preached fifteen sermons for us. Thirteen were baptized. Our meeting was held in the Rose River schoolhouse, as we do not have our church yet, but hope to, in the near future.—Ruth E. Utz, Syria, Va., Oct. 6.

WEST VIRGINIA

Berkeley County.—This is a new mission point, though not supported by the Mission Board, as it has been entirely self-supporting since the work began three years ago. We have an evergreen Sunday-school, with an average attendance of thirty-five. Sister Virgie McDonald is our superintendent. We have preaching once a month and prayer meeting every Sunday night. Last spring our school sent an offering of $13 to the Armenian-Syrian Relief Fund. Though few in number we have felt the missionary spirit. We give an offering each month to home missions. Our Annual Meeting offering amounted to $17. Other gifts were $19.25 to a poor family and $15 to Sister Mary Martin, who has done quite a bit of work for us. A few weeks ago we were visited by the Junior Mission Band from Brownsville, Md. An offering of $13 was taken for missions. We had two all-day meetings this summer. An offering of $25 was taken as a beginning toward building a church. The ladies of the neighborhood succeeded in raising $31 for the same purpose. We have only a schoolhouse to worship in and find that entirely too small for our congregation.—R. L. Burns, Bunker Hill, W. Va., Oct. 9.

Packs Branch.—Bro. J. M. Crouse, of Fayetteville, W. Va., began a series of meetings at this place Sept. 18, and continued until Sunday. We had our communion services on Saturday evening, with sixteen members present. Bro. Crouse will preach for us again Oct. 19.—Elizabeth Bowles, Fax, W. Va., Sept. 22.

A Great Chance to Work Up

Isn't it remarkable that such weak things as men, women and children should be admitted into partnership with God? And allowed to work along with him in the promotion of that great enterprise which he has at heart? What greater honor could possibly come to mortals?

Why has he done it? Can it be that he enjoys the fellowship of such inferior beings? Or that he needs us in his business? Which do you think it is?

It is said that certain very refined and intelligent persons, who somehow became possessed with the idea of living with and lifting up certain very uncultured and unclean persons, report that they actually enjoy it. May it be that God rather likes our company?

It is also said that business houses, wishing to introduce their business in new fields, can use to great advantage agents of the same social rank and habits of life as the people whom they are trying to reach. Remembering this and remembering too that the field of God's operations is among human beings, may it be that he does need us to help out?

Don't you think we ought to appreciate such confidence? And the rare opportunity it gives us to get right in on the inside of the greatest business in the world?

Hoarding, Wasting and Spending

It is foolish to try to save things by hoarding them. If moth and rust do not corrupt them, they are almost sure to spoil in some other way.

You can make the river turn your millwheel or water your crops or carry your produce but you can not "save" it. You can keep it from going to waste. You can use it profitably.

A Strange Case in

If two men travel in opposite directions on the sam parallel of latitude they will get farther and farthe apart up to a certain point. After that they will a proach each other again until they finally meet.

This tendency of extremes to meet has often bee observed. To be sure, it has its limitations. It isn true of all kinds of extremes. It is true, in the illu tration given, because the men keep to the curved su face of the earth and hence do not travel in strict opposite directions. Imagine them going off into spa in an absolutely straight line and they will always g farther apart.

So will spirituality and worldliness if the former the strictly genuine brand. But if it is only a che imitation it may show a surprising affinity, in one in portant respect, for worldliness of the most carn kind.

Worldliness is carnality. It is fascination for th things which appeal to fleshly appetites. It is the d sire to have and use material things. It finds its sati faction in them.

Spirituality is interested in the things which appe to the higher nature—the spirit nature. It appreciat the true, the beautiful and the good. It delights in th contemplation of God and his Word and his plans. such things it finds its greatest pleasure.

But how can two such opposites as these have an thing in common? Can such extremes meet?

Worldliness is preëminently selfish. Its life pla are self-centered. Benevolence is contrary to its spir Capable of enjoying only material things, it is stranger to that higher kind of satisfaction which co sists in bringing good things to others. It enjoys on what it has itself. To have and to hold is its a absorbing passion.

Spirituality is normally unselfish. Normally, plea note. The highest type is absolutely unselfish. Havi tasted the superior sweetness of spiritual joys, it turn instinctively to the choicest one of all, the conscious ness of unreserved consecration to the service humanity. It delights to serve because it delights serving. That is, because serving yields the richest r turns in soul-satisfiedness.

But just as a single false note so easily turns th sublime into the ridiculous, so does it turn the genuin type of spirituality into the spurious. The true an false have elements in common. They both enjo spiritual things. They both have found a richer wor of experience than carnal pleasures yield. The diffe ence is that one feels the obligation and even enjoy the experience of doing its utmost to give what it ha to others. The other type has little, if any, sense o such obligation. It seems to be wonderfully happy i its own fellowship with Christ but is quite content t know that multitudes of other people are living in bot physical and spiritual wretchedness without trying t help them. It claims to be able to love God and Chri without loving one's fellow-men! It advocates les

My Mission

I was longing for a mission;
Fancy made it something grand—
Something that would win the praises
Of the world on every hand—
So I squandered time in waiting
For the chance that never came,
Quite forgot to think of others
In my longings after fame.

But one day I had a vision
Of the needy ones nearby.
Of the hearts that starve with hunger
Till they faint and fall and die—
Starve for little deeds of kindness,
Or a word of hope and cheer,
And the smiles that cost so little
But can make it heaven here.

Then it was I found my mission—
Knew what work God meant for me,
And I cried: "Forgive my blindness;
Now, at last, thank God, I see!"
And my heart that had been selfish
In its longings to be great,
Saw great fields of labor waiting
For me just outside my gate.

So I seek to scatter sunshine
In a dark and cheerless place.
Loving words have given courage;
Smiles have cheered the tearful face.
In the joy of helping others
God's good time I waste no more
Since my life has found its mission
Waiting at the very door.

Reverence

BY S. Z. SHARP

Reverence subsists both in feeling and in action. It is manifested towards both human and divine persons. When exercised toward a human being, it implies honor, respect, affection and submission, as Paul says: "We have had fathers of the flesh who chastened us and we gave them reverence," that is, we honored, esteemed and loved them, and were submissive to them. Christ, also, in one of his parables, while speakiog of the vineyard and the husbandman, uses this expression: "They will reverence my son," that is, they will honor him and submit to him. In Eph. 5: 33 it is said: "Let the wife see that she reverence her husband"—respect him and be submissive to him—not slavish submission, but such as is induced by affection. The above injunction is prefaced by the statement: "Husbands, love your wives." Only when a husband loves his wife and treats her with tender affection, is he worthy of being reverenced by his wife.

Kings and high officials in authority have in all ages been objects of veneration, as shown in 1 Peter 2: 17: "Honor the king." It is not the body of a king or president that we are to reverence or honor, but the office which he represents, as alluded to in Rom. 13: 1, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers, for there is no power but of God." We honor our President because he is the head of our Government which we love, but as soon as he is no longer President, we treat bim as any ordinary person.

In like manner, clergymen are honored because of the office they represent. Because of their relation to God, they are called reverend and not because of any inherent merit they possess.

In the second place, reverence is to be shown toward God. This kind of reverence embraces all that is bestowed upon man and, in addition, implies adoration and worship. It relates to persons, places, feeling and action. All true Christians worship God. There are some persons who respect neither God nor man, and the number seems to be increasing. The recent world war seems to have produced a disregard for kingly authority. In ancient times, when kings rode out in their chariots, their subjects reverenced them by bowing before them to the ground. When Joseph was made ruler over all the land of Egypt, he rode over the land in his chariot and the people bowed to the ground before him.

Before the recent war, the Emperor of Russia was highly honored by his people. They called him "The little father." To them he was the head of the church and worthy of reverence. The war upset everything. The Emperor was made to abdicate the throne. He and his family were cast into prison and afterwards most brutally murdered. Now, in place of the emperor, the Bolsheviki sit enthroned. No reverence is allowed to be manifested toward God or man. Immorality, anarchy and chaos reigh supreme.

The reverence, once bestowed upon kings and princes, has been forever abolished by the recent war. In the various countries of Europe, twenty-three emperors, kings and princes have been compelled to abdicate their thrones or relinquish their power. The world war has produced a disregard for kingly authority. Bolshevism is being propagated all over Europe and threatens to invade our own country. It denies all kinds of reverence and forbids veneration of either God or man.

There is not that respect shown to parents and teachers as there once was. Now it is customary for the smart set to call their father "the governor" and their mother "the old woman." Reverence for parents is expressly commanded in the law of Moses and made one of the ten great commandments and it is also incorporated into the Gospel by Christ himself. It is the first commandment with promise.

In all ages there have been places which have been held sacred, and many places where reverence was shown to God. The altar was erected by the first two brothers of the human race. During all the patriarchal age, for many hundred of years, the altar and its service were the principal means by which man venerated God. Later on God ordained that a tabernacle should be built, and that the worship should be centered there.

When the temple was built at Jerusalem and dedicated to the worship of God, it was decreed that it should be "a house of prayer for all nations." When the Son of God came, he took possession of this temple for a day, and cleansed it. He made a whip of cords and drove out the oxen and sheep from the temple court, upset the tables of the money-changers and rebuked all who had desecrated the temple, saying: "It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of robbers." By this act the Savior shows that when a house is dedicated to the worship of God, it must not be desecrated by any secular act, or by any transaction that would show disrespect to the place. When we dedicate a churchhouse to the service of God, then it is his, and we are only stewards to take care of it. We have no more right to use it for secular purposes than we would have to use missionary money for some secular project. We have no right to do anything in God's house for which we could not ask God's blessing. This forbids all loud talking or laughing, and of children running over the floor, or of leaving the house, as they would the schoolroom. Parents and Sunday-school teachers are responsible for the manner in which children conduct themselves in the house of God. It is expressly commanded in the Bible: "Bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." To let the children leave the church, as they would a school-room, is wholly unbecoming.

There is more reverence shown in some parts of the United States than in others. The people in the South show more reverence for a clergyman than they do in the North. To use profanity in the presence of a clergyman in the South would be considered the height of impropriety. When we left the South and came to the North, we heard more profanity in one week than we heard in ten years in Tennessee. There is more reverence shown for the Lord's Day in the East than in the West. The first time we came to Colorado, on the east side of the mountains, we were shocked to hear the reapers going all the time we were preaching on the Lord's Day.

Singing is intended as an act of worship in the church, but too often it is employed more as an act of entertainment than of worship. The highest form of reverence is manifested by prayer to God. When we approach God in prayer, it should he with the deepest feeling of reverence and thankfulness for the multiplied mercies that flow unto us in a constant stream. When we come near to God, his almighty power, omnipotence, omniscience and majesty should impress us as they did the Israelites when they approached Jehovah, as he spoke from Mount Sinai. So vivid were all the elements of terror that even Moses said: "I exceedingly fear and quake."

Reverence to God is one of the activities of the angels, by singing his praise. When the Savior was born, and the angel had announced the fact to the shepherds, then the heavenly choir of angels appeared, singing: "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will to men." John, the revelator, also tells us that he saw around the throne in heaven "ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands of angels, saying, Unto him that sitteth on the throne and unto the Lamb be the blessing, and the honor, and the glory, and the dominion for ever and ever."

Acts of reverence are some of the activities of the saints when they get to heaven. John also tells us that he saw "a great multitude which no man can count, out of every nation and tribe and peoples and tongues, standing before the Lamb, arrayed in white, with palms in their hands, and they cry with a great voice, saying, Salvation unto our God, who sitteth on the throne and unto the Lamb." Therefore, as stated in Heb. 12: 28: "Let us have grace, whereby we may offer service well-pleasing to God, with reverence and awe, for our God is a consuming fire."

"Suspended Judgment"

BY WM. KINSEY

"No doubt this man is a murderer, . . . but they changed their minds, and said that he was a god" (Acts 28: 4-6).

Paul met with shipwreck while on his way to Rome. He, with the others, escaped to the land, the island of Melita. Because of the present rain, and because of the cold, the kindly-disposed natives built a fire. Paul joined them, and as he placed a bundle of sticks on the fire, a viper fastened itself on his hand. And when the natives—barbarians (called so because of being people of another language—compare 1 Cor. 14: 11) saw this, they said: "No doubt this man is a murderer." He has escaped the sea, but justice has seized him at last. So they expected him to swell up, and then fall down dead suddenly. They waited quite awhile—Paul didn't swell or didn't die—and seeing nothing amiss come to Paul, then they "changed their minds," and said he was a god.

First, they said he was a murderer, and they missed. Then they said he was a god, and missed it again. For Paul was neither. He was, however, a man of God. Suspended judgment is our caption. Judgment we use in the sense of the pronouncing of an opinion or a decision. Heaven alone knows how different things would be today if we all had lived according to the law of the suspended judgment. Jumping at conclusions—first one extreme and then the other—does a great deal of harm. And as we speak of the law in a religious sense, we like to think of it as a Christian grace or virtue.

Paul was stung by the serpent, but the people of Melita were stung by hasty judgment. Suspended judgment will save from many a wrong conclusion. She is as "helpless as a log" was the judgment of some critic, with reference to Fulton's steamboat. "Fulton's folly," and "she will never move" were the judgments of still others.

At one time the disciples marveled because they came upon Jesus and found him talking with a woman. "Yet no man said, What seekest thou? or why speakest thou with her" (John 4: 27)? Judgment deferred, until the facts of the case are learned would have saved them from not only wrong but unjust conclusions.

The bite of a venomous serpent, the Melitians knew, meant death, and they interpreted it as a judgment from God. It is easy to draw wrong conclusions from calamitous events. The fact that the tower of Siloam fell over and killed eighteen men was no proof that those men were the top-notch sinners in Jerusalem. Then, too, the fate of the slaughtered Galileans did not prove that they were sinners above all the Galilæans. Exceptional suffering is no proof of exceptional sinfulness. When Johnstown, Pa., was destroyed by a great flood, some said that it was the wickedest city on earth. When the Titanic went down, that Sunday night, some said they were sinners of superlative degree, because they were dancing, playing cards, drinking, etc. The disaster warrants no such conclusion, according to Luke 13: 1-5. That same Sunday night people were dancing in Chicago and elsewhere.

Suspended judgment! Frequently we hear, when Mr. A. and Miss B. marry: "They are not suited to each other; they will not be agreeable." Why not defer judgment? Mr. Smith opens up a business and at once we hear: "He'll not succeed." "In six months or a year he'll be doing something else."

Once a young minister was called to be pastor of a newly-organized church in a small city. It was a good field. Two of the ablest pastors in the District said to each other: "It will be the failure of the young man, as well as the work there." The young pastor grew, and the work grew in such a way that, after a few years, the two pastors agreed with each other that they would never make that remark again. They were ashamed of themselves. It is now ten years and the young pastor is still with that now large and flourishing congregation. Oh, for suspended judgment!

A brother or sister is absent from church a Sunday or two. We express ourselves. Later we find that they were absent for the best of reasons, and are not backsliding. We should have withheld judgment.

"They changed their minds." How often we have had to do this! Suspended judgment will save us from this trouble and embarrassment. But we are forced to reverse our judgments because we do not suspend them. We must change our minds. "Suspended judgment," thou art a virtue! Let it be written in letters of gold, and let it be one of the mottoes first to greet our eyes at the dawning of the day.

The Melitians did not all live on the island of Melita, neither are they all dead yet.

Sowing and Hearing

BY F. D. ANTHONY

THE parable of the sower is recorded in the three synoptic Gospels. The language and interpretation of the parable in each Gospel are practically the same. Aside from the primary truth, that he meant to teach at the time, it is plainly to be seen that Jesus stressed the value of hearing the Word in relation to salvation.

To my mind this parable is an excellent example for some fine, practical teaching on the fundamentals of the Word, and the words of teaching-weight in the interpretation are: Hear, understand, believe, receive and keep. Incidentally, it should be observed that these words, in the order given, are the logical steps to be taken in the proper disposition of the Word. However, it becomes apparent, by a careful reading of Mark 4: 9-24, that the key-word is the word "hear" and it shall be our purpose, in this article, to look at the threefold meaning of this word in the light of New Testament teaching.

First, then, we have the word heor and its modifications in the sense of a medium to obtain knowledge. Hearing of this sort, Paul makes fundamental, and therefore essential to obtain salvation. "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then, shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hearing—to know and to understand—that Peter em phasized when he said, "Ye men of Israel, hear thes words" (Acts 2: 22); and "when they heard,"—rea carefully Acts 2: 22-39 and note verse 40,—the knowl edge obtained led to salvation (verse 41).

In the parable of the house on the rock and san (Matt. 7: 24-27), as also of the sower, Jesus make physical hearing (to learn) an essential medium "t come unto the knowledge of the truth" (Mark 4: 9 23, 24). God now speaks to men by his Son (Gospel and it remains for men to hear him (Heb. 1: 1, 2 Matt. 17: 5; John 5: 24; Acts 3: 22, 23). Hence th importance of the commission: "Go ye into all th world and preach [to hearing ears] the gospel to ever creature." Preaching has been divinely appointed a means of communicating the Gospel to the worl and, as a necessary condition for Gospel reception there must be "ears to hear."

Hearing, then, as a medium of knowledge, is necessary importance because it opens or leads the wa to obtain "faith in Christ Jesus." And this "hearin of faith" is also essential to salvation and we no come to the consideration of the second step in th threefold meaning of the word "hear."

Paul to the Galatians said: "Ye are all the childre of God by faith in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3: 26). Th hearing that produces faith and salvation is also see in John 3: 16; 20: 31; Acts 8: 35-37 and Heb. 11: The "jailer" and "all that were in his house" we saved by that quality of hearing that led to faith Jesus Christ (Acts 16: 31, 34), because faith came on when they heard Paul and Silas speak to them "t word of the Lord." In Rom. 10: 17 the apostle Pa says: "So then faith cometh by hearing and hearin by the word of God." This truth was demonstrate in the case just cited. It was also demonstrated o the Day of Pentecost. For when "Peter, standing u with the eleven, lifted up his voice" and spoke to th Jews the "prophecy of the scripture" (Acts 2: 17-2 25-28, 34, 35), "they heard," and this was followed b faith—"they were pricked in their heart." They i clined their ear (heard) and came unto God by (fai in) him and their souls lived. Hence the need of th hearing that leads to or produces faith. Hearing of th kind reaches "an honest and good heart" and assu ance of salvation follows. "But what saith it? Th word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy hear that is, the word of faith which we preach; That thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, an shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised hi from the dead, thou shalt be saved" (Rom. 10: 8, 9

But there is so much hearing today of the "wayside kind. Man hears, but goes away from the servi "forgetting what manner of man he was," because h is a "hearer only." Unfortunately he stops here "b cause of unbelief" and comes short of the promis To persons of this class the writer of Hebrews wou say: "The word of hearing did not profit them, b cause it was not united by faith, with them that heard Oh, the blessedness of that quality of hearing th brings "salvation through faith which is in Chri Jesus" (2 Tim. 3: 15)!

We now come to the third phase of meaning of th key-word, or hearing, in the sense of obedience. At here it is needless to elaborate. The Scriptures a definite and clear at this point. All hearing of a lif giving kind embodies the elements of knowledge, fai and obedience. "Hear [obey], and your soul sha live," are significant words. Hearing, both as an av nue of knowledge and a condition of faith, is insuf cient, unless followed by "faith which worketh" obedience. The Father's command: "Heor ye him

May the Lord aid us in our meditations, our purposes and our "good works" in life's daily activities, is my prayer!

Making Disciples

BY J. H. MOORE

In Matt. 28: 19 we are told how Jesus instructed his apostles to go and "make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" (Revised Version). After baptizing the disciples thus made, the apostles were advised to teach them to observe all things that Jesus had commanded.

The term "make disciples" implies a lot of carefully-directed teaching, with a view of preparing men and women, boys and girls for entrance into the Kingdom of God. In some instances this preparatory teaching might not require more than a few hours. In others the course of instruction might extend into months. It all depended upon the condition of those to receive the instructions. In order to reach the people, the apostles were directed to go into all the world, and to preach the Gospel to every creature. Preaching was largely the method of teaching, in order to make disciples or learners. The conversational method was also employed—all for the purpose of teaching people and inducing them to accept Christ in faith and obedience.

As for special instructions, the apostles did not enter upon their world-wide evangelistic work until they were filled, or baptized, with the Holy Spirit on the Day of Pentecost. On that day the Spirit came to them in power, and took full possession of each of them. Jesus had told them that when the Spirit would come, he would bring to their remembrance the things that he had taught them, and would also guide them into all truth.

Thus equipped the apostles felt ready for their race-wide work. At Jerusalem, at the time, were men of practically every nation under the heavens. Here was the open door for the apostles, and so they began their preaching. The small start developed into a great meeting. Peter preached to his thousands, and how long he talked no one knows. He was full of the Holy Ghost and spoke as he was moved by the Spirit. The things taught by Jesus were brought fresh to his memory and while he talked to the people, the Spirit guided him in his utterances. In his preaching he was doing the very thing that his Master had told him to do. He was making disciples, teaching the people what was necessary to have them understand who Jesus was, for what purpose he came into the world and the importance of their acceptance of him in full faith. Every man who listened to this marvelous discourse with a sincere heart, was a learner or a disciple. Peter was teaching them—making disciples or learners by the hundreds.

Finally there was a stir. Thousands believed what Peter said, and were now ready to act, so they asked of Peter and the rest of the apostles what they should do. Peter was ready with a Gospel answer. His Master had told him just what to do, to make disciples of the people, and then to baptize them. So the apostle, guided by the Spirit, told those willing to accept Christ, to "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." Peter was careful to follow the instructions of Jesus. Being led by the Spirit he could not do otherwise. His was plain and direct talk—much more so than is heard in most of the modern pulpits. In these days it is common, for those seeking salvation, to be assured of full pardon the moment they accept Christ in faith. Peter, as guided by the Holy Ghost, did not hold to this doctrine, and so we hear him telling these believers to repent and to be baptized for the remission of their sins. Or, as the revision has it, "unto the remission of your sins." Their sins were not pardoned the moment they believed, but they were pardoned, or saved from their sins, the moment that they, as penitent believers, put on Christ in the holy rite of baptism.

The baptism was followed by the gift of the Holy Spirit. In other words, all of the penitent believers, after being properly taught, were born of water and of the Spirit. By the act of baptism they were buried with Christ and arose from the water grave to walk in newness of life. The birth of water and the birth of the Spirit were simultaneous, one outward and the other inward—one visible and the other invisible. All of this meant new creatures in Christ Jesus. It was the new birth—born from above—the outward form being a clear, public and forcible expression of what had happened within.

In this instance it was not a matter of birth first, and then teaching. It was first teaching, then the birth, to be followed by more teaching, with a view of leading up into perfection in Christ Jesus. In entering the family of God, birth is not the first thing. Teaching comes first in order, to be followed by faith. After this we have repentance and confession, as a preparation for what the Master, in his talk with Nicodemus, designates as the new birth—born of water and of the Spirit, born from above. Paul points it out as the act of putting on Christ in baptism. It is the initiatory act for entering the church of Christ. In another way of looking at it, it is the taking of the oath of allegiance—the final and consummating act that makes the penitent believer a citizen of the Kingdom of God on earth. It is the line which all must cross in order to enter the kingdom. And in crossing the line all sins are left behind. The old man has been crucified, and the new creature steps forth into the realm of pardon. The old sins have all been washed away in the blood of the Lamb slain for the sins of the world.

This was the order of the conversion of the three thousand on the Day of Pentecost. They first became disciples, or learners, then seekers for salvation and, lastly, duly installed members of the body of Christ. This is the order in conversion, laid down by the Master in his instructions to the apostles, when he sent them into all the world to preach the Gospel to every creature. It is the order observed by Peter, as directed by the Spirit, when he had in hand the making of the three thousand disciples. They became learners, then seekers and finally, active workers, ready for their second course in instruction. So we read of them continuing "steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship." They were still learners, going on to perfection, laboring to reach the higher plane of Christian living. They were no more sinners, but were numbered with the saints, the saved. Guided by the Spirit they felt that they were children of the Heavenly King, and as such the love they possessed led them to regard themselves as laborers in the Master's vineyard.

In the course followed by Peter will be found the secret of making steadfast disciples and efficient workers. An ample amount of teaching must be done before they are adopted into the spiritual family. They must be made to understand what they are doing, to understand the importance as well as the necessity of the step taken. Along this line the teaching can never be too thorough, and the more thorough the teaching, the stronger the faith, and the more faithful members are they likely to become after entering the church. It is just as important, however, that this be followed up by the teaching of the things mentioned in the New Testament. For the want of this teaching, as well as thorough teaching before baptism, not a few have made shipwreck of their faith, and have gone back into the world. The following of Peter's example, in making disciples, will be found the real secret of soundly converting men and women, and making efficient and faithful church workers of them.

Near East Relief Conference

BY J. E. MILLER

From October 14 to October 17 the Near East Relief Committee held a series of Conferences at Yonkers, New York. About 200 representatives were present from the various sections of our country. It was my privilege to attend part of these sessions and learn some of the present needs and future plans.

One session was devoted to the Sunday-schools and their part in this great work. The boys and girls of our schools will never know just how much good they accomplished by their contributions to the suffering Syrians and Armenians.

Occasionally some one is asking who is paying the expenses of these conferences and trips. My own expenses, as well as the expenses of the other Sunday-school men on the Commission to the Near East, last spring, were not paid by our own Sunday-schools nor Boards, neither from any contributions made for relief. The expenses were all paid out of the private purse of Mr. Cleveland Dodge. Neither were my expenses to the New York Conference paid by any of our contributions, nor by any of our Boards, but these were again met from the special fund which the Near East Committee has for such occasions.

The work of the Near East Relief Committee has been greatly enlarged and has been entirely reorganized. One of the purposes of these conferences was to acquaint the men and women of different sections of new plans and to instruct them properly in their work.

All phases of the relief situation were discussed. Long speeches were eliminated and a fifteen-minute address was a very common feature. When a man has only fifteen minutes in which to deliver a sixty-minute address, he learns how to economize time and avoid useless introductions and apologies.

When the chairman introduced the different speakers he always tried to state some fact that the audience could connect with the speaker. When it came my turn to speak, he said: "Mr. Miller represents the Church of the Brethren, a denomination which is not so very large, but which has given more for relief work, in proportion to its numbers, than any other denomination in America." The New York committee has often used such expressions in its letters, and I have observed on several occasions that it is just as ready to make use of them in public when it refers to the very liberal contributions our people have made.

Relief work is being carried on today as never before, in the Near East. With the approach of winter there will be need of increased activity, for there will be much want. The political situation in the Near East is not as settled as one might wish it were. Practically nothing has been done for Turkey and Armenia by the Peace Conference. When I was in the Near East, both Armenians and Turks were asking for an American mandate. At that time Turkey would have welcomed America. Whether America would find the same welcome now, I do not know. The Conference was of the opinion that the ratification of the Peace Treaty by the United States Senate would go far towards securing a more established form of government throughout the former Turkish Empire.

During this conference I met six of the men with whom I traveled this summer, several others whom I met in the Near East and heard a number of others, direct from the field, who gave vivid accounts of the conditions as they found them in Armenia and Syria. It was the unanimous opinion of the conference that America alone can render the relief that will save hundreds of thousands from starvation during the coming winter.

Peter, the Average Man

BY ROY TEMPLE HOUSE

Sunday-school Lesson for Dec. 7.—Mark 14: 32-54

The disciple who earns a rebuke from the Master by falling asleep in the midst of the most portentous vigil man ever knew, does not hesitate, a few hours later, to undertake a violent defense of his Lord against the dreaded Roman soldiery, or—a little later still—to follow him boldly into the very court of the high priest's palace. Peter's life was a succession of blunders and recantations, of cowardly evasions and acts of surpassing heroism. And for all his genuine remorse, on more than one occasion, he seems ever to have remained more or less unsteady to the end.

At Antioch, twenty years after his Master's death, this founder of the first Christian community, this liberal who had been taught by a Divine vision that nothing of God's cleansing can be held unclean, and who had himself overcome certain Jewish prejudices ccomplished by their contributions to the suffering Syrians and Armenians.

Peter, the Average Man

BY ROY TEMPLE HOUSE

Sunday-school Lesson for Dec. 7.—Mark 14: 32-54

THE disciple who earns a rebuke from the Master by falling asleep in the midst of the most portentous vigil man ever knew, does not hesitate, a few hours later, to undertake a violent defense of his Lord against and consented that Gentile Christians be exempted from the forms of Judaism, weakly relapsed into the old narrowness, incurring from Paul the accusation of cowardice and hypocrisy. And if tradition is to be believed, a dozen years later still, when Nero began torturing and murdering the Christians in Rome, Peter fled out of the city and required another vision to be recalled to a realization of his duty and the privilege of martyrdom.

Peter was foolish and fallible, as most men are; and this is why the Master bade him, above all others, to strengthen the brethren. He could do it as the possessor of a cooler, steadier temperament could not; because he was a living evidence, not once but many times, that the warm-hearted, blundering average man is so dear to God's heart that he is privileged to do the noblest part of God's good work.

Matthew records that the impulsive Simon once so heartened and encouraged his Lord by the hearty unreserve of his confession of faith, that Jesus uttered the glorious prophecy: "Thou art a rock, and upon this rock I will build my church." The words have given rise to endless discussion, and have even been interpreted as the authorization of a pontifical hierarchy, of which the individual Peter is the first high priest. But it seems clear that the Master is addressing Peter only as a type. "Peter," he says, "thou cowardly, foolish, undependable, weak-fleshed, loving, devoted, heroic, wonderful type-man, thou average man, thou hast proved by thy words that the Divine rules within thee and, at thy best, inspires thee. Not of the saints and sages can I or would I build my church—they are too few, too feeble, too much out of touch with the great mass of mankind—but of the millions like thee, Peter. And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, for the good in you outweighs the evil, the wise in you is, in the long run, more powerful than the foolish in you."

And we, who study this lesson, who are not Pauls or Johns, but mayhap Peters, let us pray him for such deliverance as shall make us, for all our faults and follies, meet to strengthen the brethren who are even weaker than ourselves.

Our Trip as Far as Yokohama

BY M. M. MYERS

The appointed time finally came for us to start to China. Those of our party who lived in the East met in Chicago and enjoyed a splendid meeting with the folks at Bethany on the evening of July 31, except Sister Valley Miller, who did not arrive until the next morning. The hospitality and thoughtfulness of the brethren there was much appreciated. A street car strike was on at that time, but our friends were kind enough to take us to and from the trains in their automobiles.

About ten o'clock, the next morning, twelve of us, including children, boarded the Pacific Limited and were soon on our way to the western coast. Soon after we left the city, with its hustle and bustle, our eyes fell on the beautiful, green, waving cornfields of Illinois and Iowa. To see such a promising crop, out on the vast stretches of level land, looked good to those of us who had been reared on the farm. The sky was clear and blue, and the weather was cool, making the overland trip pleasant in every way. It was noticeably cool during the nights, especially when we were crossing the great Rocky system. The highest point on our route was in Wyoming—over 8,000 feet above sea level. Another interesting feature along our route was the Great Salt Lake, with its crystallized and liquid salt, to be seen for miles. The fact that the railroad crosses the lake upon miles of trestlework not far above the water, adds unique interest to this route.

There was nothing exciting along the way, though there were many beautiful things all along our way. Upon our ing to washouts, she was delayed twenty-four hours. B coming a long way around she arrived during the nigh of August 5, before we left the next day.

Bro. J. U. G. Stiverson, pastor of the Oakland churc arranged for our comfort while in his city. The dela made some little confusion, but after some effort we nally got together. With Bro. Stiverson as our pilot, started across the bay to San Francisco, to have our pas ports properly endorsed by the Japanese and Chinese co suls, and to get everything in readiness to leave on th morrow. It required much patience, on the part of o pilot, to lead so large a group of big and little foll through the business sections of a great city. He did h part very creditably. After the busy day was over, San Francisco, we hurried back to Oakland for the ser ices with the members there, and those who came in fro the adjoining churches. Sister Anna Hutchison and Br J. Homer Bright spoke to an interested audience on t "Conditions and Needs of China."

It was the happy privilege of the writer and wife stop in the home of Brother and Sister Stiverson. Thou we had little time to converse, I have every reason to b lieve that he is a wide-awake and capable pastor, and, wi his family, is doing faithful and noble work for the Kin dom in Oakland.

On the following day, at one o'clock, all members our party were ready to walk up the gang-plank to t "China." The vessel was in readiness, all white a clean, for its voyage over the mighty deep. Soon t anchors were lifted, the whistle gave the signal for sta ing. Then we left the pier, crowded with people to s their friends off. While good-byes were being said, tea trickled down over pale and ruddy cheeks alike. Aft voices were hushed, handkerchiefs continued to wa their expression of best wishes and a safe voyage, un those standing on the shore appeared to us as mere spec in the distance. Then we turned to our cabins for a fe minutes, to admire the beautiful flowers—tokens of lo and thoughtfulness presented by our friends. There w a bouquet for each of our rooms and the fine thing w that they lasted until we reached Honolulu.

Every one was anxious to be on deck when we pass through the Golden Gate. Only a few hours could see land; then our attention was turned to the troubl waters of the mighty deep. How great and powerful God, and how weak and helpless is man! The boundle expanse of water suggests the immensity of God's lo On him we may safely depend.

For the first day or two new acquaintances were mad and we were delighted to find thirty-six missionaries board, bound, respectively, for China, Siam and Kore Several denominations were represented in the grou Their fellowship added to the pleasure and satisfaction the voyage.

Among the passengers were about eight differe nationalities, which made the group quite cosmopolit Six prominent Chinese passengers, who had represent their people and country at the great Peace Conferen in Paris, were on their way home. On the evening Sept. 23 a dinner and entertainment were given in th honor. Dr. C. C. Wu, a Chinese Government represent tive, who was once a student in America, and speaks En lish well, gave us a splendid address. It was not difici to see that these men were not at all satisfied with th treatment at the Paris Conference; however, they ha hopes of better things in the future, when once their p sition is better understood.

The religious side of our lives was not overlooked, f each morning, at ten o'clock, devotional services we conducted by members of the several missionary parti to our mutual edification. On Sunday mornings the were preaching services. Our party shared in this t Though we were out in midocean, we could worship o Father and have blessed communion with him.

Just eight days after leaving San Francisco, we stopp in the harbor at Honolulu—that beautiful little spot o in the Pacific. The six hours allowed us there were spe in viewing the grand scenery of the island. By hiri an automobile, the most important places of interest cou be visited while the boat was detained in the harbor, load and unload its cargo. To see and walk upon la again was an agreeable change for us, and we enjoyed thoroughly. We walked, stood and looked until we we tired, and when the whistle blew we were all glad to back on deck again, resting ourselves and trying to e press to each other how much we had enjoyed the d

Shining

BY IDA M. HELM

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5: 16).

It is so very important that the Christian let his light shine, that I am passing on to the MESSENGER readers a quotation from Dr. James Culross, printed in an old paper, dated 1883:

Our business is not to talk about shining, not to have theories about the way of doing it, but by our good works to shine, and so to bear testimony to the Lord. The simple thought meets a thousand difficulties:

"I am very poor, my candlestick is tin instead of silver. If I were richer I should be of more use." Let your light shine.

"I am feeble in health: half my time is passed within a sick room. My candlestick is a broken one." Let your light shine, even if there is no more candlestick than to hold the candle from falling over.

"I am very much out of the way—in a very obscure corner; far off from the general eye and observation. I wish I were in a better position." Let your light shine; the Lord knows why he has placed you where you are. Be sure he has a purpose worthy of being accomplished.

Let your light shine!

Creature-Comforts or Soul-Content

BY G. W. TUTTLE

WORLD-GIVEN comfort is sometimes first aid to selfishness. Comfort says: "Outside the cold winds blow, but my house is warm; the storm rages, but my roof is storm-proof; the cold is bitter, but I know no chill in my warm bed; out in the storm there may be those who feel the pangs of hunger tonight, but my larder is well stocked." So comfort—animal comfort—dozes by the roaring fire, as satisfied, and perchance as useful, as the sleepy cat that stretches and yawns on the hearthstone. Comfort is only a virtue when it causes us to lift up thankful hearts to God, and reach out hospitable arms to our fellow-men, and to say: "Come and share my comforts and my blessings."

The comfort about which a wall of selfishness is built is only a vice that brings the curse of the withholder on the selfish soul. When a man says: "My fire shall warm none but myself," his soul-fire dies, and the chill frost of selfishness nips every promising bud and flower of his soul. When a man says: "I am warm and well clad," and forgets that others are cold and naked and suffering, the chill winds of self freeze the very marrow of his soul. When a man draws into self, as a turtle into its shell, he multiplies self into selfishness, and his soul-life dies of starvation—why not, when he has shut it up in a walled city without food? God-given comforts should be wings to the feet and inspiration to the soul, but oftentimes they are ball and chain to both.

But Christian content is of God. It lifts up thankful heart in sunshine or in storm, in riches or in poverty, in success or in seeming failure; it echoes those luminous words of the apostle Paul: "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." "Learned!" Paul was God's pupil, and he had a praiseful life and a teachable soul. Christian knowledge travels swiftly adown the highway of gratitude and praise. The thankful heart is an open heart—open toward God. The grateful heart is a receiving heart—the streams from the fountain of our God flow down into it. The waters of God's knowledge and content can not flow uphill into the heart of pride—there is a heavenly law of gravitation as well as an earthly law.

Content reaches out to God in thankfulness, to men in desire. Christian content says: "I am rich, for I have a rich Father whose resources are inexhaustible; come, and share my riches." Christian content says: "My warmth is of heaven, it can never fail; come, and share my fire." Christian content says: "There is no Savior save my Savior. He opened my eyes. I repented of my sins. He covered them with the sea of his mercy. Come now, and repent also, and the floodgates will open, and the sea of his mercy will flow in, and your sins will be covered and forgotten forever, and you will know his content, his peace, and his power."

You may have heard the old conundrum: "What is the difference between the North and South Poles?" The answer is: "All the difference in the world." There is all the difference in the world between creature-comforts and soul-content.

Loyalty—To Whom?

BY IRA H. FRANTZ

THE Pharisees were loyal to their traditions and they crucified the Christ. Peter was loyal to his own idea of the Messiah when he drew his sword to fight. I can believe that even Judas may have been loyal to his idea of what Christ ought to be, when he sold him. Saul of Tarsus was loyal to the traditions when he persecuted the church.

But all this is a different loyalty from that which Peter showed when in the home of Gentile Cornelius he put aside his Jewish exclusiveness and, in obedience to his vision, said: "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized?" It is different from that of Paul who "was not disobedient to the heavenly vision," and from that of the elders at Jerusalem who wrote to the church at Antioch: "It seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things."

Loyalty is an excellent quality of character if it describes our relationship to Christ. But absolute loyalty to any one or anything else is dangerous. It is a sad day for any man or body of men when they put loyalty to a tradition, an idea, a custom, or a party, ahead of loyalty to our Blessed Lord. Such an attitude precludes all possibility of growth and of Holy Spirit guidance.

It may easily become treason to Christ.

Be a Gentleman

BY AMOS H. HAINES

WE can scarcely ask a man to become a Christian, without, by implication at least, asking him to be or become a gentleman. There may be and doubtless are many gentlemen who are not professed Christians.

Good manners are always a valuable stock in trade. Next to good sense, good manners are always above par. Dr. Pope, a Bible teacher of Chicago, at one time made the following statement, in the presence of the writer, at a Sunday-school meeting: "If a man is a fool and knows it, there is some hope for him. If he is a fool and does not know it, he is a goner."

Being a gentleman does not mean that one is to submit to the impudence of the bigoted or the self-conceit of the ignoramus. A gentlemanly reproof or mild resentment may, at times, be the best savior of such a self-righteous person. But in this one should not lose balance or poise.

A Christian gentleman should approach all matters and subjects from the view-point of uplift, reconstruction and mutual helpfulness.

Perhaps no person realizes more the meaning of and place for gentlemanly and womanly conduct than the experienced missionary of Jesus Christ. I have in mind, primarily here, the worker on the foreign field. Personally, I have frequently been impressed with the gentlemanly and womanly conduct of the returned missionaries. With them there seems to be sober thought before the expression of opinion. Doubtless their broad experience has made them open-minded and sympathetic.

This can not always be said of all would-be advocates of the foreign missionary cause, who, without the real field experience presume to speak with authority. At times their narrow-mindedness, ignorance and bigotry seem to crop out at every turn. Because of their lack of preparation and general knowledge of the subject, their intolerance and thoughtlessness are frequently manifest. For this class, a study of the real gentleman should constitute a major course in their school of experience.

The Fight Is On

BY VIOLA FRISER

"The fight is on, the trumpet sound is ringing out:
The cry 'To arms!' is heard afar and near."

YES, the great world war is over, yet there is a fight on, and a trumpet sound is heard—a call to arms is made, not by the United States Government, but by King Immanuel. It is he, who would now collect his forces.

The enemy is preparing to make a great and powerful assault, is preparing to undermine the influence of the church and thus cripple its usefulness in the world. He is very hopeful of the outcome of his efforts and, truly, he has good reasons to be. He organizes well his forces and goes about the work in a systematic way. He laughs in glee as he realizes the slackness of the church in this respect. He knows that if the question of opposing the Universal Military Training system is left to the voluntary action of the individual members, it will fail, for there will be so many who, for one reason or another, will fail to take any action whatever in regard to it.

Why should not the church be as wise as the enemy in this respect? Why should she not go about this work in a way that the influence of every member can and will be brought to bear on the side of right? In other words, why could not each congregation supply itself with a printed or written appeal to the Government, setting forth our views on the subject, our opposition to carnal warfare, our requests, etc., with a place provided on the same sheet, or accompanying ones, for the names of all the members of a congregation, willing to help in the cause of the Master by signing their names—the pastor or elder having this work in charge? Finally, and as soon as possible, forward the papers to the proper person or persons.

This will, undoubtedly, be a real struggle between the forces of good and evil, and if the good is to win, promptness, earnestness, wisdom and prayerfulness must characterize the work of God's people.

Are You a Debtor?

BY C. S. IKENBERRY

IF, in deducting the credit side of our accounts from the debit side, we have a deficit, we are, financially speaking, in debt. A true moral and spiritual deficit is the difference between the moral, social and religious influence a church community might, in its greatest efficiency, exert, and the influence it really does exert.

Dr. Carroll suggests the following questionnaire, which may help us to see if we have a deficit:

1. What definite and specific things can be pointed out that your church is accomplishing for your neighborhood?

2. To what extent has your church, as an organization, coöperated with other social philanthropic or religious agencies working in your community?

3. Into how many homes, rich and poor, is a train of Christian influence being directed through the work of your church?

4. How many people in your church community are being definitely influenced for Jesus Christ and his Kingdom?

5. What definite work does your church do for the promotion of the wider interests of the Kingdom outside your neighborhood?

If you strike the line and sum up what has been done and what can be done, and make your balance, will you be a debtor?

Too many failures have been made because we do not visualize the needs of the community.

Industrial efficiency has so revolutionized the movements of men that practically all lost motion has been eliminated and the output has increased from one huneir lack of preparation and general knowledge of the bject, their intolerance and thoughtlessness are freently manifest. For this class, a study of the real entleman should constitute a major course in their hool of experience.

WEST COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO

Since our last report five have been received by letter and four have been baptized.

Our Aid Society was recently organized, with Sister Maude Baker president. We are soon to reorganize our Teacher-training and Mission Study Classes for the winter.

A goodly number of ministers of our Fraternity visited our city this summer—the following since our last report: Bro. Van Dyke, of Newberg, Oregon; Bro. Kurtz, of McPherson, Kans.; Bro. Austin, also of McPherson; Bro. Eller, of Oberlin, Kans.; Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, of Elgin, Ill.; Bro. A. I. Mow, of Chicago.

Bro. Finnell stopped between trains and gave us one of his splendid illustrated lectures on the Five-Year Forward Movement. Bro. Eller also gave us two excellent sermons. Bro. Mow gave us two interesting talks, with many helpful suggestions, relating to the Forward Movement and our individual responsibility.

In the absence of our pastor, who is engaged in a revival effort, Bro. Mitchell, pastor of the Antioch congregation, supplied the pulpit and gave us good, practical sermons yesterday.

We will have a love feast this fall, the time to be decided later. Bettie Root Crist.

DISTRICT MEETING OF NORTHERN INDIANA

The members of the Northern District of Indiana gathered Oct. 2 for their first District Conference at Winona Lake. This place has become famous for conferences of a religious nature, and our people have been here so often that we begin to feel very much at home. Several churches were not represented by delegate. Nevertheless, the spirit of the meeting could not have been better.

There was not a large docket of business before the meeting, but it was constructive and called forth considerable discussion. One thing of interest was a paper calling for a Ministerial Board, in harmony with the General Conference recommendation of two years ago. This board takes the place of the three ministerial committees which the District has previously maintained. Another paper of great importance was one by the Mission Board, calling for help to build a house of worship in Plymouth, a promising mission point.

There are no queries for Annual Conference. The delegates on Standing Committee are Brethren David Metzler and Henry Wysong, with Frank Kreider and S. J. Burger, alternates.

A report given by the member of the Committee on Arrangements of last Annual Conference will doubtless be of interest to all. The income of the meeting was sufficient to meet all expenses and leave a small balance for the General Mission Board. The Winona Assembly has decided to build a large tabernacle next year, which will seat about 8,000 people. The various Districts will be asked to contribute toward the cost of erection.

The meeting adjourned shortly before five o'clock, to meet with the members of the Turkey Creek congregation at Gravelton, Oct. 7, 1920. Chas. C. Cripe.

STANLEY, WISCONSIN

It was the writer's privilege, recently, to conduct two midweek services at Stanley and to make a delightful visit also in the bounds of the two adjoining country churches of Worden and Maple Grove.

Because of the excellent opportunity afforded there for people to obtain farm homes, a number of our members have already located, coming from various parts of the Brotherhood. And now, besides being glad for their material blessings, they are rejoicing because of their increasing force for religious work. It is unquestionably a good place for our people to promulgate the interests of the Kingdom.

Stanley is an enterprising little city of three thousand

The church clerk at Stanley will cheerfully answer a inquiry about the church work, or the country in that pa of Wisconsin. Communicate with Bro. O. W. Henderso Covington, Ohio, Oct. 9. Ralph G. Rarick.

FIRST CHURCH, DETROIT, MICHIGAN

Since our last writing our services have improved wo derfully. Sept. 21 an excellent welcome was given honor of the sixteen young men who were in servic Bro. John S. Smith had charge of the program. Spec music was rendered by our own quartette and one fro the Y. M. C. A., led by Bro. Moore. Our people we appreciative of this splendid music.

Our pastor, Bro. John F. Dietz, called a special coun Oct. 4. Brethren Chas. Deardorff and Harley Townser representing the State Mission Board, and Eld. John Smith, of the Ministerial Board, were present. We fe confident, as a church, that we are qualified to meet t requirements of the Five-Year Forward Movement. Bre ren Paul Coover and Moy Way were elected to the mi istry, and Brethren Earl M. Hoover and H. E. Wagn to the office of deacon. All were duly installed. At pr ent we have five resident ministers and five deacons, O minister and three deacons represent the "Victorian" Young People's Class. There were thirty-eight you people in the class last Sunday. The offering for t class, at the regular service, was $9.60. For the ent Sunday-school the offering was $16.23.

The membership at this place, together with the M sion Board, decided to remunerate, in a small way, B John F. Dietz, who has so ably led in the work and w has given so much time in the interest of the church.

Plans are now under way for the enlargement of c church building. A baptistry and several Sunday-sch rooms will be installed and the basement will be e larged. It is practically impossible to try to hold a lo feast at present, as our membership has increased to c hundred or more.

The "Victorian" Class will have charge of the Chr tian Workers' Meeting next Sunday. They have be preparing special work and music for the program.

A large number of members and friends are planni on moving to this city. The fact that all of our membe and friends, who have come to Detroit, have secu good positions ought to be proof that work is plenti There never were the opportunities of positions offe to men and women as there are at the present time. T city officials are laying plans to take care of 2,0 000 by 1926, ultimately to reach the 5,000,000 mark. W excellent transportation facilities and big business ent prises, Detroit is certain to accomplish this goal. Qu a large number of factories are building large additions

There are still a large number of members and frie here who do not know where we are located. Ple advise them to come to 751 or 816 Cadillac Avenue.

NOTES OF TRAVEL

The writer left Carthage, Mo., June 6, for Winona La Ind. After Conference I went to Seneca Falls, N. to visit our daughter Mary and family. While here made a trip to Freeville, N. Y., to get acquainted w the members at this new mission point. I found Bretht Baker and Bowman, and families, quite alive in the ge cause. They have a good country, the people are e cated and their moral attitude is fine. It seems to be easy place for missionaries to do good work. The abo named brethren bought homes, and that means that th will stay in the field.

From Seneca Falls I went to Lebanon. I am now tending church in the Lebanon congregation, which belongs to the Midway church. This congregation is ve active. Officials, teachers, etc., are in their place in go time. Those who are prompt in their arrival, are gree by a card hanging on the pulpit, which says: "I Early." After school has begun, this card is withdra and another put in its place, which says: "I Am Lat They have a large card on the wall, showing three thin Members on the roll, attendance today and collection day. This is important. I saw nine classes in this sch and the efforts of the teachers are certainly praiseworth Their methods are good. This is sure to make a succe ful school. The membership of the school is 162.

After school comes the church service. The deaco the song leader, and the laity are all generally in pla

For 1920

Every Minister Take Notice

Corrections for the 1920 Yearbook (formerly Brethren Almanac) will close Oct. 31. Every minister's name and address should be correctly given in the Ministerial List, because the Gish Fund Committee, as well as others, must depend upon this list in matters of vital concern to each minister. Please note the following points:

1. Every minister should see if his name and address are correctly given in the 1919 Yearbook.

2. In case the name and address do not appear, or if incorrect in any way, please send us name and address as they should be entered.

Secretaries of District Mission Boards

The editors of the Yearbook are depending upon the Secretaries of the District Mission Boards for a full report of officers and churches for each State District. Each Secretary has received blanks that are to be filled out and returned not later than Oct. 31. Secretaries are earnestly requested to give these reports their careful attention, and to return them as soon as possible.

A General Request

We urge elders, clerks of churches and all others who can help us to make the records in the Yearbook more nearly correct to send in the names and addresses of ministers recently elected, as well as the names of any who should be removed from the list because of death or other cause. We would appreciate it to be informed of any mistakes in the lists in the Yearbook of which you may have certain knowledge. Corrections close Oct. 31. Address:

MISCELLANEOUS

Too late for insertion of the complete program we have received notice of the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of the District of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Eastern New York, to be held in the Germantown church, Philadelphia, Oct. 29 and 30.

The brethren of the Mechaniesburg, Pa., congregation have a number of "Kingdom Songs, Number One," which they would like to place in some mission point or congregation where they will be appreciated. Those interested will please write to David C. Stambaugh, 223 S. York Street, Mechanicsburg, Pa.

One of our Southern Ohio congregations, which had purchased not long ago a supply of "Kingdom Songs, No. 1," has just ordered 110 copies of "Kingdom Songs, No. 2." They have three dozen or more of the No. 1 edition, practically as good as new, which they are willing to dispose of at a reduced price. Those interested should write Bro. George B. Jordan, Eaton, Ohio.

Under the Five-Year Forward Movement, the "Community Survey" is an important factor. To assist in an adequate understanding of this vital movement, the General Mission Board has issued a most excellent leaflet—"The Community Survey"—which considers that work under the following sub-topics: "(1) History of the Survey. (2) What Is a Survey? (3) Why Make a Religious Survey? (4) How Make a Survey?" The Board will be glad to furnish the leaflet to all who are interested.

One reader is "astounded" that a certain article got into the "Messenger." In fact he has "not seen anything so painful in many a day published in our paper." The same mail brings a letter enclosing twenty-five cents in stamps for extra copies of the issue containing that same article. The sender wanted that particular article, which treated one of our distinctive doctrines, for distribution at a mission point where he preaches every Sunday. Such things help to keep an editor from going to sleep and falling off his chair.

We have received and noted with much interest the announcement of a special "Training School for Church Leaders," to be conducted by Bridgewater College from Nov. 24 to Dec. 20. It is planned to have this four weeks' term each year, and it will require three years to complete the course as outlined. Two-fifths of the required 360 recitation hours are given to Bible Study. The remainder are distributed among the following subjects: Psychology and Pedagogy, Denominational History and Ordinances, Sunday-school Administration, Religious Education, Missions, and Departmental Specialization. We join in the hope expressed that "at least one hundred young people in the territory of our college will take advantage of this opportunity."

When Even Our Trials May Be a Blessing.—Failure in our plans and purposes, whether of a business or social nature, is often a bitter and a severe trial for even the best of us. Perhaps some one exclaims: "Surely, there is no way of sugarcoating a failure, to make it bearable." But for all that, there is a very wise and genuine way of doing it. All it requires is that we shall properly appreciate the purpose of our living here. We are here to build up characters that shall be enduring. And everything we undertake to do, with an honest, true purpose, and to which we devote ourselves with a manly or womanly spirit, leaves its deposit in character. Our business venture may succeed or fail; our benevolent purposes may win applause or they may bring on us a sneer; but that has nothing to do with the great result which God is seeking in us—the building up of a good, strong, pure worker for the Lord.

AROUND THE WORLD

One Lesson That Royalty Might Learn

In welcoming King Albert of Belgium, the people of this country extend to him their best wishes. The royal visitor is here to study America. He will find much to admire. This land of ours has many things that the king would gladly take back with him to his people, if he could, but many of them are too big to be moved or too precious to be spared. There is, however, one surpassingly valuable thing that America can well afford to give, and that the king should not fail to take with him—the idea of prohibition. The great American plan of eliminating alcoholism by national law, if adopted by Belgium, would benefit the people of that country more than aught else America could give.

A Good Suggestion

Amid the various suggestions for the settlement of existing labor troubles, the most sensible, to our way of thinking, is that which is offered by the Rev. Dr. Clare in the following: "What workers really need is more religion. They never will be really satisfied with merely higher wages and shorter hours." This, undoubtedly, is true. The needs of man's spiritual nature must be recognized as fully as the claims of his physical existence. Unless the wants of the spiritual man are fully met, there can be no real contentment and happiness. One reason why labor agitators fail to make a lasting adjustment of troublous conditions is due to the fact that they leave out of consideration the needs of the spiritual nature of man—a decisive factor.

Our Overworked President

Doubtless the prayers of all Christian people have been offered in behalf of our beloved Chief Executive. He has broken down from overwork and undue responsibility, because he undertook to do too much himself. Possibly, as some contend, he has neglected to avail himself of competent helpers, whom he might have consulted, and who might have cooperated with him in the solution of important problems, now pending. It is certain that his strenuous efforts in Europe as well as his arduous campaign in behalf of the League of Nations have seriously sapped his strength. Apparently the problems of one country seem to be about all that this nation or its representatives can well take care of. To let Europe attend to its own affairs, while we look after this country and mind our own business, as long as others will let us, might be a good program.

"Back to the Soil"

Just now the words of our heading are becoming the slogan of many Jews, and nearly always it is the soil of Palestine they have in view. Only recently six young Hebrews reached Port Said, after a long and toilsome journey from Siberia, fully determined to reach Palestine, the land of their fathers. Whole communities will go from Poland. About 20,000 Jews are ready to leave Hungary, including men of scientific and technical training. These will prove of untold benefit in the new Jewish realm. In Czecho-Slovakia engineers, railway officials, merchants, manufacturers, and farmers are preparing to liquidate their property, valued at some 20,000,000 crowns, for transfer to Palestine. A great exodus will take place from Galicia, Transylvania, and Bukowina, while migrations are also being arranged for from Germany, the Mediterranean lands, South America and other regions.

Extending the Span of Life

In every age and in manifold ways men have labored assiduously to prolong the days of their pilgrimage here below. Ponce de Leon vainly sought his fountain of eternal youth, and many who followed after him have made fruitless endeavors to learn the secret of restoring youthful vigor to a "tenement of clay," enfeebled by years of arduous toil. The most recent attempt along the line of old age rejuvenation is that of Dr. Voronoff, of Paris, who declares that replacement of the worn-out "interstitial gland" in an aged person can readily be effected by substituting that of a lower order of creation. A practical demonstration of his theory was given in the case of a man eighty years of age and quite feeble. Dr.

Another Prophet of Portending Evil

Sir H. Rider Haggard, of Great Britain, an acknowledged authority on racial statistics, has closely scanned the birth-rate in countries of the white race and also those of the yellow races, inhabiting Asia. He announces a appalling falling off in the birth-rate of Caucasian nations, but an astounding increase among the Chinese an Japanese. His inferences are undoubtedly wholly dependable and it must also be conceded that they are somewhat disconcerting. Leaving out of consideration a possible hostile invasion of western nations by the vast hordes of the Orient, there is still the other danger of industrial invasion of Asiatic cheap labor—a factor of slight significance.

Heredity Tells

Descendants of the early missionaries to the Hawaiian Islands recently formed themselves into an association of their own—there being nearly one thousand members. One significant feature, in connection with that action is seen in the fact that practically all these men and women are intensely interested in the missionary work begun years ago by their ancestors. Truly it may be said that the most precious heritage of the descendants is the fervent love of missionary activities, as shown by the determined endeavor to help present-day workers in every way possible. If we, as a church, would like to see future generations of our people intensely missionary, their souls' highest aspirations, we must nurture the missionary spirit to the highest extent in ourselves.

Unhappy Armenia

At latest reports, poor, tortured Armenia is again threatened by destruction. Some of the leading powers are now in favor of having the reconstructed Turkish Government assume control of that and other of its former dependencies. Any unprejudiced observer, however, can not help but wonder whether even the new Turkish Government is really dependable. Some weeks ago Great Britain requested this country, under the terms of the Peace League, to send 200,000 American soldiers to Armenia, and strongly resented the American failure to do so promptly. "Western Asia is seething politically," says Dr. Barton, head of the "American Committee for Relief in the Near East." That section always has had troubled career, but why should not the great powers unite in a protectorate of desolate Armenia?

The Changing Times

Some years ago the French artist, Millet, painted his celebrated picture of "The man with the hoe." Prematurely aged, the toil-worn laborer is represented just as he might be seen in any of the French fields—with wooden shoes on his feet and the roughest of home-spun clothing. The noted painting aroused world-wide sympathy for the humble toilers, and several poets, even, espoused the cause of toilsome and underpaid farm labor. But times have certainly changed—at least so far as farm hands in the United States are concerned. On the large farm of the Curtis Brothers, near Marion, Ohio, workers have for some months been paid $8 per day and lodging, but now a strike is on to secure $9 per day and lodging. Just what will be the final result of the incessant and often unreasonable demands of labor, now being urged against the employers, is obvious to any fair mind. There is bound to be a point beyond which financial disaster impends for all concerned.

The Aftermath of War

Appalled by increasing lawlessness everywhere, the question has been asked: "Why are there, at this time so many murders, riots and other acts of violence? Why should there be such a startling loss of social control, as compared with the period during the war and that just preceding the war?" Does the augmentation of moral delinquency indicate that human depravity is gaining in far-spread extent? Is the world actually getting worse? Well, the reason for all these perplexing conditions is not as hard to find as might appear at first sight. The American people have just come out of a great war—a vast conflict—in which physical forces grappled in a life-and-death struggle. During an extended period human life was cheaper than it ever was before in recent centuries. Bayonet thrusts and wholesale destruction by every means possible, were essential parts of the military program. Millions of earth's vast population were assigned

The Father's Gifts

BY CLEMMA L. PEEBLER

"Every good and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of lights" (James 1: 17).

God, the Father, who in heaven
Watches o'er his own below,
Riches rare, and gifts perfected
On his children doth bestow.

Peace which passeth understanding;
Joy the world can never own,
Comes in floods our souls o'erflowing,
From the Heavenly Father's throne.

Light divine shines o'er our pathway,
Driving all our night away.
Guiding true our falt'ring footsteps,
With its bright, resplendent ray.

Grace nor favor none can merit;
Yet he freely doth bestow.
Only in its healing radiance
Can our souls expand and grow.

Wisdom does not come with learning,
But it cometh from within,
When we seek him in the silence
And we there commune with him.

Love, supreme, divine and gentle,
Tenderer far than mother's love,
In a mighty stream it shineth,
From the Father up above.

Life divine, which knows no ending,
He to us doth freely give,
And when time no more shall know us,
We with him shall always live.

Father, dear, it makes us humble
That we should accounted be Worthy to be called thy children
And receive thy gifts so free.

When Bronson Tuned the Piano

BY ELIZABETH ROSENBERGER BLOUGH

He was old and carried a little black oilcloth tool-bag strapped to his back, as he came through the front gate up to the old front door. He knocked softly, as if he hated harsh noises. When Grandma heard him, she went out through the old hall to the front door, and invited him to "come into the parlor where the piano is."

"It's a fine day," said Bronson. "Good weather for growing crops. We will have as fine a crop of corn this year as I've ever seen."

"Yes," agreed Grandma, "the rain came whenever we needed it. Our cucumber patch is overflowing with pickles."

Bronson was opening the black oilcloth bag, laying out little tools and placing them within his reach, when he said: "Farming pays these years. It seems as if there's a special blessing in it this summer. I was raised on a farm. When the farmer's pianos need tuning, hereabouts, I've got the job I like best; since I am getting old, I like the country."

Then he studied the piano before him. Soon chords, runs and trills rent the sultry summer air. And Helen heard them. Helen was the oldest daughter. She tried to manage as well as she could. Their parents had been among the first victims of the influenza, which claimed so many from this neighborhood. Helen was tired. When the sound of Bronson's playing came to her ears, she almost screamed.

"Oh, dear, has old Bronson really come at last, and today of all days! How can I listen to that jangling all afternoon? I am ready to drop now."

She held her ears shut for a moment, then went on scrubbing her pickles with a small brush, before she dropped them into the salt water. The smell of spices, tantalizingly fragrant and sweet, was all through the house. Helen forgot the piano for a moment. She worried again over the fact that they were getting nowhere. Her brothers should have plenty of money for college and for an automobile. Their neighbors were thus favored. None of them worked any harder than they were working. Tears came to her eyes as she worked on. What was wrong with them, anyway?

"How can I stand it?" moaned Helen, as awful sounds came from their old piano. Bronson sounded C with his tuning-fork. Then he sounded middle C on the piano, made an adjustment of the wire with his instrument, then sounded middle C again. It was way down. Once again pressure was applied to the pro-testing wire, and it was forced higher and higher. Again and again the process was repeated until the key rang true to middle C on the tuning-fork.

Helen, with set lips, worked on. Her brother had once teased her about her weeping willow mouth. That hurt. He had apologized, but Helen knew that he had reason to remind her that she was given to frowns more than to laughter. Today she felt as if there must be some way to do things better.

From the parlor came sounds that hammered into Helen's brain. Now it was B, then D, then F's and A's that were forced to accord with middle C. There were fifths and thirds and arpeggios and scales that were being set right. Through it all ran that middle C with terrible persistence. Helen shuddered and said: "It can't last forever."

Bronson was through at last, and packed up his tools. Grandma insisted that he stay with them for the night and he was glad for the invitation. After supper, when the stars were shining and the breeze was cool and fragrant through the open window, Grandma asked Bronson to play.

Helen, sitting at her bedroom window, put her hands to her head instinctively when the first sounds of "On Jordan's Stormy Banks I Stand," came floating to her. She could hear only that middle C at first. Then, as he sang and played: "In the Sweet Bye and Bye," and "Over There," the music, instead of racking her tired nerves, soothed and quieted her, and brought blessed tears to her eyes. The strains wandered perturbedly through the halls and galleries of memory. All her suffering and questioning found a voice in those tones.

"We're out of tune. That's the difficulty," exclaimed Helen at last. There was no one to hear her, for the kitchen clock had struck ten and old Bronson had gone to bed. Grandma, too, was sleeping. The boys were at a meeting of their Sunday-school class.

"We're out of tune—I most of all. Oh, I shouldn't wonder but that I've run so far down that I can hardly be brought back to middle C, but I must. I've got to. I've been thinking of what I want—the music lessons—and Dan wants his roadster which, Herbert says, we can not afford, for if Dan gets a roadster he wants to travel to New York and see the sights and, oh, ever so many things. I see it plainly now. I want one thing, Dan wants another, and Herbert is bent on having something else. We've got to get together; we've got to work for some one thing all together. Then we can succeed. I've got to stop thinking of my own ambition all the time—the success of all of us must come first. The general good of the family must be the pitch, and we must tune up to it."

Helen opened her little Bible and read a few verses. Then she knelt by her bed and prayed a long prayer for patience, for strength, for courage to persist in her undertakings; for a tenderness that would bear with the shortcomings of her brothers.

In the morning she awoke with a vision that enabled her to see harmony where discord had been. She found the boys quite willing to do all she requested. "We must work for the general good of the family, first of all," said Helen. The boys, too, understood. They were only too glad to help bear each other's burdens and so enrich the family life, and win success.

"Our Grandmothers"

BY MRS. MILDRED FUNK

The writer was sitting at home, this afternoon, patching overalls, and thinking about our grandmothers. What wonderful lives they have lived. You very, very seldom run across a grandmother who doesn't think life is worth living, although most of them will agree it is a struggle.

We mothers of today shudder to think that we would have to be the mother of ten, twelve and even more, children, and do all our own housework, sewing and mending. But listen! Our grandmothers, and most of our mothers, have gone through this very phase of life and here they are, at the end, as happy and cheerful as they can be.

I sometimes think it is the age we are living in, for if we younger mothers have four or five rooms to take care of, and two or three children to sew for, we grumble every day: "Oh, my! I am so tired. I have so much to do."

There is nothing that pleases, or really does me more good than to go in and spend an afternoon or a day with a real aged Christian grandmother, and hear her relate some of her experiences. They are wonderful, compared with the little troubles we mothers have.

If we become down-hearted over our little "mother problems" let's take an afternoon oft and spend it with an aged mother or grandmother. I think most of us will go home thinking that our troubles are small and our conveniences are many.

I say: "Bless and praise the lives of our mothers and grandmothers, and may God bless them!"

Mothers, Stop to Think!

BY EDITH E. PETERS

As you clasped in your arms that first tender little bundle of humanity that God brought into your home, did not your whole being throb with the thought that the child was yours? And with how many mothers the thought has stopped there! Yours? Has God ever intended that a child should be born into a home merely for the joy and satisfaction of that home? But, sad to say, mothers, many of us have thwarted the plans of God in the lives of our children, and their influence has never reached out as a blessing to humanity.

God has not given you your child—he only loans it to you in all its innocence, purity and beauty, and says (if you only listen for his voice): "Mother, take the child, that has been placed in your hands, as a blossom sparkling with dewdrops of heaven, and instill into the life the principles you see in the life of the Holy Child who 'grew in favor with God and man,' and gave of his life every day that others might live."

Mothers, the task is before us and who can fathom the responsibility? As we look into the upturned face of the child, in all its innocence, and then into our own lives, filled with mistakes and wrong-doings, and realize that the seed sown makes the life placed in our care a blessing or a curse to humanity, and even helps to shape the destiny of their own and many another soul in eternity, we can only say: "Father, I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know."

Study, as you may, the characters of boys and girls who have drifted out on the great ocean of sin, never to return, and very often the trouble budded and blossomed in the home—the greater fault, perhaps, being with the mother who failed in her teaching.

God loans us the child who is the real music of the home, and then, in our selfishness, we even fail to pay the interest due him, by neglecting the great duty of training the child for him.

"Train up a child in the way he should go," and he will follow the heavenly pathway until the bowed form of the pilgrim is taken by the boatman to the other side. And, oh, the joy of the mother already there, who caused him to follow the Guide that landed him safe within the pearly gates! And that is only the beginning, for the influence of that life will touch the hearts of men and women for years to come.

Mothers, do we ever say: "There's so little we can do with our many home duties?" What's the trouble? We're leaving undone so much that God has meant for us to do. May we daily commune with the Father, tell him all our plans and desires for the child; place our hands fully in his, get our own lives in tune with heaven, and then spend and be spent for the right training of our boys and girls, teaching them by our example that Christ wants us to serve others and thus serve him.

Then, from out these homes of ours, will come boys ave to be the mother of ten, twelve and even more, hildren, and do all our own housework, sewing and nending. But listen! Our grandmothers, and most of ur mothers, have gone through this very phase of life nd here they are, at the end, as happy and cheerful s they can be.

A LONESOME ROAD

The exceeding beauty of the mountain was dimmed by the unceasing rainfall. The glory of the valley was entirely lost from view. The small size and delicacy of the umbrella were far from being equal to the downpour of rain. Under these conditions, it is no marvel, then, that the road was lonesome.

At 10:30 the little "Church in the Wildwood," overlooking the narrow, winding valley of Pedlar River, was reached. As a trip, it was a success. One mile down the river landed the footman in the cozy, happy mountain home of a resident minister, Robert A. Figgers. This man of God has an enviable reputation in the community for honesty, faithfulness and efficiency. He is fifty-one years of age. While his total time in school aggregated only about twelve weeks, yet he has quite a library and knows what is in it. He generally walks to his appointments and back. He is crippled up with rheumatism, and must use his pilgrim staff; yet he often walks ten miles to a single appointment and back. In him we surely have an example of loyalty to the cause. His beloved wife is a queen in the home, and is a suitable consort to her official husband. She is a great-niece of the celebrated inventor, McCormick. They have four interesting and promising children.

The rain continued to pour all day long, practically, and all night long. It was said that Pedlar River rose higher than it had been for some forty-two years. Therefore other appointments in the mountainous county of Amherst, Virginia, were not reached, which was a source of great regret, but one could only submit to the inevitable and to trust to an All-wise Providence that all was for the best. Remaining with this interesting family till Sunday morning, the traveler retraced his steps and found his way back to other work.

Such faithful standard-bearers as Samuel Driver, Levi Garber and John A. Kline were religious pioneers of Amherst County. They did a glorious work there. Their labor was not in vain.

Bro. Humphrey, in charge at Buena Vista, is happy in his work. The people are rallying to the cause. The outlook is good. This lonesome road walk will not soon be forgotten, and the rain helped to drive it in.

To chase the dismal clouds of sorrow away, to open the beauty of real life, to shelter from the showers of adversity, to light up the somber path of duty, one needs the congenial, happy company of the Christ and his church.

DISTRICT MEETING OF OKLAHOMA, PANHANDLE OF TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

Tuesday, August 26, at 2 P. M., the elders of the District met in Elders' Meeting in the Washita church, near Cordell, Okla. This year we tried the two-meal system in our District Meeting, so our program was arranged to accommodate that system. We met at the church each morning at 7, for devotional exercises, and at 8 we organized our work for the day. Breakfast came at 9, and the meeting of the day at 10. At about 1:30 or 2, each day, we took a short intermission, and then the work of the afternoon began. Dinner was served at 4 P. M., and we were ready for services again by 6:30. These services were to last until about 10 P. M. This gave us a long day and we had a splendid meeting at every service.

Tuesday evening, at 6:30, Bro. C. D. Fager preached a splendid sermon on the subject of "Heaven," and at 8:30, under the efficient leadership of Eld. Ed. R. Herndon, a splendid temperance program was rendered, in which we took a retrospective view of the achievements in temperance, and looked forward to the tasks ahead of us. Then a general survey of the field was made, and the Temperance Secretary made a report.

On Wednesday morning, the Ministerial Meeting was organized with Bro. F. E. Marchand as Moderator, and Bro. Joseph Nill, Secretary. The general theme for the meeting was: "The Minister as Leader," and it was discussed by the listeners. A cash offering of $530.38 was raised besides considerable in pledges.

At 8:30 Bro. E. M. Studebaker again had the floor for a Missionary Meeting, and a spiritual feast was enjoyed by the listeners. A cash offering of $530.38 was raised besides considerable in pledges.

On Thursday morning the Sunday-school Meeting was organized by the election of the writer as Moderator and Bro. E. J. Smith, Secretary. After breakfast a good program was rendered on the general theme of "Discussion of the Different Officers of the Sunday-school." The importance and need of training and consecration, to acceptably the work of every office of the Sunday-school was dwelt upon especially. This phase was emphasized throughout the meeting. At the close Bro. John R. Pitzer taught a model adult class, after which the crowd in general passed criticisms.

At 1:30 P. M. the Christian Workers' Meeting convened under the same management that the Sunday-school had chosen. The general subject for the program was: "What Constitutes a Christian Workers' Meeting?" The talks were all inspiring and uplifting. If any one thinks that our District is not alive to the needs of the Christian Workers' Meeting, let him attend one of our District Conferences.

Bro. Joseph Sala, of Miami, Tex., favored us with an excellent sermon at 6:30 P. M., and the Child Rescue Meeting was held at 8:30. The writer tried, in his weakness, to bring the needs of the homeless little ones to the hearts of the hearers, and God blessed the feeble efforts in the form of a cash offering of $280.44, making a total of $810.82 for the Child Rescue Work and the District Mission work. This is an index of the life of the Oklahoma District, but truly to appreciate it, one must travel over the District and see the condition of our givers and our churches. The Child Rescue Work gained some real impetus that will materially help it during the coming year. Before the sermon by Bro. Sala, Sister Birdie Morris conducted a Women's Purity Meeting.

All day Friday was devoted to the work of the District Meeting proper. Bro. C. D. Fager was elected Moderator and the writer, Secretary. Eld. E. J. Smith was elected as member of the Standing Committee, and Bro. N. A. Gripe, as alternate.

The entire meeting was a spiritual feast, to be remembered until another season calls us again to our District Conference. May it be a useful and prosperous year for the District! Much credit is due to the members of the Washita church for their splendid care of the visitors and the general care of the meeting, in making it a success.

MIAMI VALLEY AID SOCIETY

The Miami Valley Ladies' Aid Society was organized twelve years ago. At that time only a few settlers lived in the community and they were separated from Christians of the neighboring towns by unbroken prairie, with few fences or decent roads. These few people were of various Protestant denominations and held all services together. As the Valley was settled, the members of the Church of the Brethren increased sufficiently in number to organize a church and later to build a churchhouse. Into their hands fell the religious work of the community. The Aid Society, however, remained undenominational. Any woman of the Valley in still eligible for full membership. For this reason, up to this time, no report has been sent to the "Messenger."

At present all the offices of the society are held by members of the Church of the Brethren, and but one active member is not of that faith. We have twenty-one enrolled. The members have been diligent in service. The past year our attendance has been low, averaging seven. This does not indicate the actual working body. Nearly all our women are mothers of young children who find it impractical to attend meetings, but do in their own homes whatever work they can.

Our gifts in money have a total average of $90 annually, according to the records. Money used in local charity has not been recorded. Besides this, labor has been given where needed, usually about two days a year in private families and one day a year for cleaning the churchhouse.

Our gifts in money have been dispersed through the following channels: Contributions to foreign missions, to the Anti-Saloon League and Orphans' Home of our own State, to local charity and to the improvement of the churchhouse, its grounds, or the public cemetery. The

NOTES FROM JUNIATA COLLEGE, PENNSYLVANIA

Old students returning and new ones coming filled every available space on the first day Juniata College opened this year. They have come from afar and from near. The old chapel is so full, at the hour of worship, that the faculty moved to the platform, to make room for students on the front benches.

This increase in attendance is felt in almost every department, but perhaps it is most noticeable in the School of Theology. Here classes are large and inspirational.

Among the many, worthy of mention, who are in attendance, let me speak of Bro. J. M. Blough and wife, Bro. Quincy Holsopple and wife, and Sister Olive Widdowson—all on furlough from India—who are attending classes regularly. Bro. J. B. Emmert and family live near the college. He is visiting the Sunday-schools of the District this fall, and expects to enter the next term. Bro. A. G. Faust, of Windber, and Bro. W. H. Ulrich, of Tyrone, are two pastors who are attending college, but who return over Sunday to fill their pulpits. Several of our student ministers fill pulpits in churches near by each Sunday.

Oct. 9 the trustees had a meeting, to consider the needs of the college. Among many important measures taken are these two:

1. To begin the erection of two $50,000 dormitories for college students on Round Top, north of Nineteenth Street. These will be the first two of the group of buildings to be erected as rapidly as possible. It is hoped to be able to put in the foundations this fall.

2. The trustees made a decidedly advanced step in the matter of salaries for instructors, in order to meet the present-day conditions and needs.

Juniata is sure that her many friends will not only rejoice but will earnestly pray that, in this larger opportunity, everything will be done to magnify the Christ and his Kingdom in the lives of all. Her motto is "Loyalty to the Word."

BATAVIA CHURCH, ILLINOIS

We met in council Oct. 6, with Eld. G. E. Heagley presiding. The officers for the church and Sunday-school were elected for the coming year. Two letters of membership were received and one was granted. We decided to hold our next love feast Nov. 2, at 6:30 P. M.

Our little church has been the scene of many changes during the past few weeks. Many of our faithful workers have left for other fields, among them our former pastor, Bro. A. P. Musselman, and family, who have taken up the work at Kitchel, Ind. His farewell sermon called out so many friends that the house was well filled. Bro. J. S. Flory and family succeeded him in the pastorate for the coming year.

While Bro. Musselman was still with us, he, together with the other pastors of the city, launched what is known as the "Week-day Religious Educational Movement." This gives every child in the elementary grades the privilege of spending one hour each week in the church of his choice, where he will receive such religious instruction as the pastor shall advise. Our school has been in session now for four weeks, with an enrollment of thirty pupils. As it is still in the experimental stage, its ultimate success is largely a matter of conjecture, though, under favorable conditions, it should prove of inestimable value to the children who come under its influence.

Last week Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, of Elgin, gave us two excellent stereopticon lectures on the "Forward Movement" and "Child Training." He pointed out the fact that the church holds a responsible and prominent position in the present crisis of world reconstruction. He especially urged us to bend every effort toward realizing the goal placed before us by the church.

Sunday, Nov. 19, we expect to hold our Rally-Day program, as well as to entertain the Union Christian Workers' Societies of Batavia, Naperville, Elgin and Chicago. We have our entire basement redecorated, in readiness for the meeting.

Nellie K. Netzley.

Brethren Hollinger and Hilsenberg met with us at various times this summer, among them Bro. Shatto, of Gleichen, Alta., Bro. Switzer, of Illinois,. Bro. Gump, of Ohio, and Bro. Hollenberg, of Gleichen. We very much appreciated these visits.—Pearl Cawley, Irricana, Alta., Can., Oct. 9.

COLORADO

Denver church is progressing nicely. There are still a few members moving in from other States, attracted by our fine climate. Sunday, Oct. 5, we had one of our all-day meetings, which I would like to see every church in the Brotherhood adopt. They are a wonderful inspiration to both young and old. Each one of us filled baskets and after Sunday-school and noon sermon we eat our lunch. Next we always have a fine program of speaking and songs. It is a get-together meeting. Often strangers come in, become acquainted, and later on unite with the church. We recently had a pound party for our pastor, in which about sixty-five participated. Our pastor's pantry and cellar were filled with the good things of life. If you do not believe in such a custom, you should have witnessed the congregation show him their appreciation, just try it. We have lately redecorated our church most beautifully. If you are contemplating a change of location come to the Denver church. Our ambition is to go over the top. We have about one hundred members and worship west of the Missouri River in five years.—W. R. Cline, 1070 Gas Building, Denver, Colo., Oct. 15.

Grand Junction (First Church).—We met in council Oct. 7, with Eld. E. Eshelman presiding. The treasurer's report showed that the church was out of debt and that there was a good amount in the treasury. We decided to have our love feast Sunday evening, Oct. 19. Bro. D. M. Click and Sister Emma Lapp were elected to represent the church at our District Meeting. Our Sunday-school is doing well. —D. M. Click, Grand Junction, Colo., Oct. 11.

IDAHO

Boise Valley.—Sept. 21 our District Evangelist, Bro. M. Alva Long, began a series of meetings. He was ably assisted in the song service by Sister Marie Olsen. The meetings continued until Sunday morning, Oct. 12. Twelve of the fifteen who were baptized were received into the church. Our love feast was held Oct. 11, with Bro. Long officiating. About eighty-five members were present. Eld. Keim addressed a well-filled house of listeners on Sunday evening, Oct. 12. Bro. Keim and wife are leaving this week for a month's visit in the Central States.—Mrs. C. E. Sandy, Meridian, Idaho, Oct. 13.

ILLINOIS

Big Creek.—Eld. I. D. Heckman, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., evangelist, and Sister Edith Bubb, of Astoria, Ill., song leader, conducted revival meetings here, from Aug. 24 to Sept. 14. Six were baptized, and others are expected to follow. Both attendance and interest were splendid. Not only were the members strengthened but the meetings had a good effect upon the community. Sept. 1 and 2 Bro. J. F. Wagoner met with us in the interest of the "Forward Movement." His addresses were much appreciated. Sept. 6 we held our love feast. Eld. I. D. Heckman officiated, assisted by Eld. D. J. Blickenstaff. Eld. J. H. Wright, of Ill.; Eld. U. Mehdel, of Kenmare, N. Dak. Brother and Sister Michael were born and reared in this community and have been here for one month, visiting brethren, relatives and friends. While here, Bro. Michael filled our regular appointment for us. Sept. 21 Sister Ana Cale, of Tennessee, and sisters have meant much to us. Sister Wm. Matthis represented our congregation at the late District Conference.—Dow A. Ridgely, Parkersburg, Ill., Oct. 16.

Chicago.—Bethany church met in council Oct. 8, with Bro. H. F. Richards presiding. We are grateful that Brother and Sister Lear have accepted the oldership of the Chicago congregation. Our pastor stated the unanimous desire of the church, that he devote three-fourths of his time to church activities, rather than one-half, as previously arranged for. Encouraging reports from our various lines of activity show that our work is progressing nicely. Committees appointed to look after the needs of town visitors, face to face with some problems of no small dimensions. But the church was a unit in determining to shoulder our full responsibilities and embrace our opportunities.—Nellie Claybaugh, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 14.

Elgin.—The year is good to keep. We never had such a Rally Day before—like yesterday. The attendance and offerings were way beyond anything that ever happened in the "little church on Highland." We almost tipped the beam at 400, and threw in the baskets $73.021. All through the morning, which turned out to be a long one—because we just couldn't stop—there was an exalted atmosphere, with an undercurrent of thankfulness. Processional, promotions, songs, exercises, recitations, anthems, pennants—and one beautiful banner was awarded. Everybody was there, from babies to veterans, and behaved until the unheard-of hour of one o'clock! And as if this were not enough joy for one day, in the evening we trooped to the church again to hear "Miss Sahib" Sadie J. Miller, missionary to India for the last fourteen years, now on her second furlough, as she rapidly sketched the life on the field from a series of intimate slides. The weather man arrived early, and gave us his blessing.—Adaline H. Beery, Elgin, Ill., Oct. 13.

Woodland.—Our love feast was held Oct. 11 and was a joyful occasion. Eld. D. E. Eshelman, of Canton, and Bro. S. S. Blough, of Astoria, officiated. Visiting members from Astoria and Canton were present. Some of our young members are in school at Mt. Morris and Bethany. The report of our revival meetings, held by Bro. Jesse Shull, stating that six confessed Christ, should be credited to the Woodland church, instead of to the Astoria church.—Mrs. I. H. Bucher, Astoria, Ill., Oct. 13.

INDIANA

Beach Grove church met in council Oct. 8, with Eld. E. O. Norris presiding. Bro. Norris was reelected elder for another year. Bro. D. W. Bowman was present. One letter was received. The writer was chosen "Messenger" agent and correspondent. We organized a Christian Workers' Meeting, with Sister Edna Norris president. We are glad to report that extensive improvements are being made on the church property. The interior of the building has been redecorated, and a new furnace has been installed. A SUNDAY-SCHOOL TOUR IN THE SOUTH nations, as well as our own, felt the need of a Sunday-school here, so one was organized.

Pleasant Valley is about six miles from Mount Carmel. The trip was made on horseback. Here there had been no preaching for eleven months, but their elder was with them the Sunday following my visit. The members felt the need of a Sunday-school, but felt they couldn't conduct it. Finally several took up the work, saying that they would do the best they could.

Peak Creek congregation is about six miles from Pleasant Valley. This trip was made on horseback also. Here there is no church building, but services were held in the schoolhouse, and a union Sunday-school was organized. Bro. Owens, an elder, lives in this congregation, but he is not strong and he and his wife have the care of his sister who is paralyzed. Consequently he can not leave home to do any church work.

Blue Ridge congregation is four miles from here over the mountain. I made this trip afoot, with company. The services were held in the schoolhouse, and a union Sunday-school was started. A dear old sister seventy-nine years old walked from her home to Peak Creek, three miles, and then the next day the four miles to this place. I had two services here, one in the evening and the next the following morning. Then we had a steep climb, getting back over the mountains to Peak Creek.

This was Saturday. We had a service there that evening, and the next day after the Sunday-school. Then I was taken in a car to Pleasant Valley, where we had services that evening.

The next day I was taken to the New Bethel congregation. This is one of the strongest congregations I visited. They need a church building. There is a building belonging to this congregation, but it is not near enough to where most of the members live to have services there. Services are held once a month at the home of the minister, Bro. Alfred Reed. A Sunday-school could not be started, but a Teacher-training Class was organized.

Little Pine is twelve miles from here. At this place are two ministers, W. H. Handy and Norman Reed. A Sunday-school has been organized.

Rowland Creek church was visited next. It is twelve miles from Little Pine to the railroad station, and then some distance on the train to Marion, Va. Here Bro. Levi Sims met me, and he and his family cared for me over night, and the next morning he took me to the church, six or eight miles. Bro. Sims is a remarkable man. He said he had attended school only three weeks. He knows not only chapters, but whole books of the Bible by heart, and he can not explain how he has gotten them, as he has made no conscious effort to memorize them. As we were going along on Sunday he said: "Let us read some from Job." I told him he would have to do the reading. He repeated two or three chapters and then recited from another part of the book. At another time he gave the life of Samson, and other passages. There is a good Sunday-school at Rowland Creek. They are also starting a prayer meeting.

At the Mountain View church the work is run down, but a few members and some others were willing to try to get a Sunday-school started.

This ended my visit among these churches. Later I spent a Sunday at the Melvin Hill congregation where there is a live Sunday-school.

Now a few general impressions: I appreciated very much the kindness shown me in so many different ways, the invitations, more than could be accepted, to visit in their homes, the friendliness shown me in the many homes I did visit, the kindness of those who took me from one place to another, the urgent invitations to remain longer and to come again. It was with a feeling of regret that I left each place.

I didn't see the "typical mountaineer." Bro. Sims told me of a hundred or two hundred families of them within a two days' journey of Marion, among them grown men who have not heard a Gospel sermon, and grown girls who will hide when a stranger comes. He feels something should be done for them, and according to his idea the way to carry on the work would be for two brethren to go there and travel from place to place afoot, giving the message from house to house as in so many cases the people are far apart.

The people I came in touch with are not of this class, but they are intelligent, whole-souled people, and yet they are in need of leaders. There are some good, faithful workers among these churches, but not nearly enough, and some churches are practically without leaders. More of these must be had if the members are to be saved to the church and grow spiritually. More leaders there must be, if the young people and children are to be saved for Christ and the church.

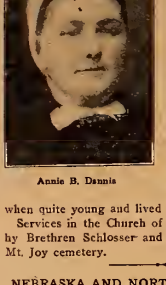
Some of our children are hearing from ministers of another denomination such poison as this: "There is no need of praying. If God has decreed for you to be saved, you will he, and you can't do anything, and if it is his plan for you to be lost, nothing you do will change the plan." We must give the true message. There are fine people unreached by any church. What is our duty?

"The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest." Pray, also, for the ones who are working in these churches and Sunday-schools and other lines of service.

Modesto, Calif. Laura Gwin Swadley.

IN MEMORY OF ANNIE B. DENNIS

Annie B. Dennis, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Brandt) Heisey, was born in Rappho Township, Lancaster County, Pa., March 10, 1853, died at her home, Elizabethtown, Pa., August 21, 1919, aged sixty-six years, five months and eleven days.



Annie B. Dennis

She married Samuel B. Dennis Dec. 27, 1871. To this union were born six children, four of whom survive. They lived in Mt. Joy for many years, later moving to Elizabethtown, where they have lived for the past nine years. Sister Dennis joined the Brethren church when quite young and lived a consistent Christian life.

NEBRASKA AND NORTHEASTERN COLORADO

The District Meeting of Nebraska and Northeastern Colorado convened Sept. 30 to Oct. 3, in the Sterling church, Sterling, Colo. This meeting was important from a historical standpoint, being the fiftieth anniversary of the coming of the Brethren to Nebraska. This event was properly celebrated by one entire session of the meeting. The present and future of the Church of the Brethren in Nebraska was looked at in the light of history, and being thus presented, exercised a much stronger appeal than might otherwise have been the case. The struggles of the early settlers and their devotion to the cause of the Master created a deep spirit of earnestness and consecration to the work of carrying forward the Gospel Story, both here and abroad.

The Sterling church, which so hospitably entertained the meeting, is situated in the beautiful valley of the South Platte river in Northeastern Colorado. The town of Sterling is a center for the region and is a very prosperous and growing little city.

Although the time of meeting was a very busy one for the people in the valley, there was a fair attendance at the programs of general interest. The weather could not have been more ideal, and all who came were privileged to enjoy some of the beauties of the locality, as well as the spiritual feasts of the various sessions.

The Conference opened on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 30, at 2 o'clock. The first hour was given to the Sunday-school, presided over by the writer. In this short service the representatives of the various Sunday-schools showed a splendid determination to see the realization of the goals of the Forward Movement. This was followed by a splendid program, prepared by our historical committee. This dealt with the establishment of the church in this District, with the progress made and the lives of those who had made this possible. The whole was used as a background for a large forward look.

In the evening the Child Rescue Committee held sway from 7 to 8 o'clock, presenting a touching appeal on behalf of unfortunate children. At 8 o'clock Bro. J. B. Moore, who has just assumed charge of the Sterling congregation, delivered a powerful address on the subject: "God's Will for the World, God's Will for Me," using Matt. 28: 19-20 as a text.

Wednesday forenoon was given to the Christian Workers and the Ministerial programs. Here again was felt the pulse of a steady purpose and determined will that the Kingdom of God should be speedily enlarged in the next five years. In the afternoon the Sisters' Aid Meeting, the Elders' Meeting and the Mothers and Daughters' Meeting were the attractions. The evening was given to the Annual Missionary Meeting. An excellent address by Eld. W. W. Blough, of Omaha, was given on the theme, "Man the Master of His Environment." Text, Rom. 12: 1-2.

It would be difficult, indeed, to say which of the various programs marked the culmination of the enthusiastic, aggressive spirit which pervaded the entire meeting. The Ministerial Meeting, the Missionary Program and the most excellent material presented by Dr. Kurtz and Prof. J. J. Yoder, of McPherson, who came to us for two lectures on Thursday evening, and an all-day Institute on Friday, were the outstanding features of the Convention. The note of advance was sounded in nearly every talk. Plans were discussed whereby the work in this District might be put on a more permanent basis than in the past. It was pointed out that we have suffered, in some localities, by the emigration of the workers, and that we must provide a permanent class of members in every community, if the church is to be the real leader in the world, which she is intended to be. The fact that progress had not been everywhere apparent, was but a stimulus to greater endeavor in the future.

The business session of the meeting was called to order on Thursday morning by Eld. S. G. Nickey, the Retiring Moderator. The following organization was then effected: Eld. Edgar Rothrock, Moderator; Bro. Elmon Sutphin, of the Bethel congregation, Reading Clerk; Eld. W. W. Blough, Writing Clerk. The business in hand was disposed of in a united, orderly way, only one session and an hour in the afternoon being necessary to attend to all that was brought before the meeting. Eld. J. B. Moore, of Sterling, was chosen to represent the District on Standing Committee next year, with Eld. W. W. Blough as alternate. One paper was passed to Annual Meeting. While the delegation was not large, owing to the far-western location of the meeting, yet all were agreed that the Conference, as a whole, was most spiritual and impressive.

The inspiration gained by all who attended this District Meeting will surely bear fruit. Some results will no doubt be reported at next year's meeting, to be held in the Afton church, a few miles north of Cambridge, Nebr.

evangelistic campaign, which we expect to hold in January, with Bro. Chas. D. Bonsack, of New Wladsor, Md., in charge. We have a Bible Study Class every Sunday evening, a hall hour before preaching service. Much interest is manifested in the study. We are also planning to hold a Bible Institute here sometime this winter. Our Sisters' Aid Society is quite busy at present, quilting and making other articles. Since our last report two have confessed Christ, one of whom has been baptized.—Narcissa Ferguson, New Bethlehem, Pa., Oct. 13.

Shade Creek.—We held our Home-Coming Meeting Sept. 7. Bro. A. Brown Miller, of Juniata College, preached a splendid sermon in the morning and gave an address in the afternoon. Sept. 15 Bro. H. S. Replogle began preaching at the Ridge house. The meetings continued until Oct. 4. Fourteen were baptized and three reclaimed. We held our love feast Oct. 5. Our Bible Institute will be held at the Berkey house Nov. 24-27. The instructors are Brother and Sister J. M. Blough and Bro. Galen B. Royer. At our last District Sunday-school Convention, in August, it was decided to hold Bible Institutes in the different Sunday-school circuits, rather than one Institute for the entire District. As our plans were already made, we invited the Scalp Level and Rummel congregations to join us, and make this our Circuit Institute for this year. We expect to use the duplex envelope for the next year, and steps are being taken for an every-member canvass at the beginning of the year.—Mrs. J. L. Weaver, Windber, Pa., Oct. 16.

Spring Grove.—We held our love feast Oct. 11 and 12. Brethren J. H. Kline, J. A. Buffenmyer, D. Kilheiner, A. F. Wenger and M. Ebersole were with us. We expect to open a series of meetings at the Blue Ball house Nov. 9. Bro. Milton Taylor, of Louisville, Ohio, has promised to be with us. Our Children's Meeting will be held at the Kemper bonse Nov. 23.—Florence L. Mohler, New Holland, Pa., Oct. 12.

VIRGINIA

Bethel church met in council Sept. 27, with our elder, Bro. W. H. Byer, presiding. The visiting brethren reported the members in peace and union. We expect to have our love feast Oct. 25. We are trying to secure a minister to hold some meetings for us.—Mrs. Lillie M. Thompson, Eagle Rock, Va., Oct. 11.

Bethel church met in council, with Eld. W. H. Byer in charge. The annual church visit was reported. We made arrangements for our communion service, which will be held Oct. 25, at 4:30 P. M. We held our Harvest Meeting Sept. 13. A large crowd was present during the whole day. At the close of the afternoon service two were baptized and four reclaimed. We feel much encouraged. Bro. A. F. Pursley preached for us. We expect to hold a series of meetings this fall or winter, if we can secure a minister.—Mrs. Cora Byer, Saltpetre Cave, Va., Oct. 14.

Bethlehem.—In an article, sent in by Eld. L. A. Bowman recently, it was stated that the writer of this little sketch was engaged in a series of meetings at Boone Chapel, a preaching point in the Bethlehem congregation. We had a fine meeting. Crowds were good throughout the meetings, and the interest was excellent. Twenty-nine made the good profession, ten of whom were baptized. One was received, who had, at one time, been a member of the Progressive Brethren. Sixteen were baptized into the Progressive Brethren church. Two have not yet been baptized. Fourteen sermons were preached to very attentive crowds.—E. E. Bowman, Nafis, Va., Oct. 10.

Elk Run.—Since our last report a call came from the Shenandoah mountain side, asking admittance into the District. Oct. 2, Brethren W. H. Zigler and C. W. Zimmerman responded, traveling a distance of about eighteen miles to reach the home, and found four that were ready to be baptized at the first meeting. Our love feast, held Oct. 4, was very much enjoyed by all present. Bro. L. G. Humphreys, of Buena Vista, Va., officiated. He began revival services, following our love feast, and at this writing we are having very interesting meetings.—D. H. Smith, Elk Run Solon, Oct. 9.

Little River.—It has been planned that our visiting brethren be with us Oct. 23 and 24. If possible we will have preaching on these two nights. Saturday morning, Oct. 25, at 10 o'clock, we expect to have our council, and at 2 P. M. the communion services.—Birdie C. Carper, Fordwick, Va., Oct. 9.

Mt. Joy.—Eld. J. F. Britton, of Bristow, Va., began a series of meetings Sept. 27, continuing for two weeks. He made a number of calls in the homes of the community. Two were baptized.—A. F. Pursley, Buchanan, Va., Oct. 14.

Redoak Grove church met in council at Stonewall, Oct. 4, with Bro. Asa Bowman presiding. Brethren G. A. Whitlock and A. T. Naff were chosen delegates to District Meeting, with Brethren Asa Bowman and J. S. Vest, alternates. On Sunday Eld. W. F. Vest preached an inspiring sermon to an attentive audience.—Clara V. Vest, Floyd, Va., Oct. 13.

WASHINGTON

Centralia.—Sept. 21 Eld. J. Edwin Jarboe and wife, of Chicago, began a series of meetings here. Bro. Jarboe preached fourteen inspiring sermons. Sister Jarboe conducted the sang service. The church has been built up through their efforts. The attendance and interest were good. At present we are without a resident minister. Bro. Jarboe goes from here to the Richland Valley church to continue evangelistic work.—Etta E. Fox, Centralia, Wash., Oct. 6.

Forest Center church met for council Sept. 26, with Eld. Tigner in charge. Three members received, and the report of the annual visit was given. Seven letters have been granted since the last report. We held our first love feast Sept. 28, with Bro. Tigner officiating. Nineteen members were present.—Nora A. Willey, Valley, Wash., Oct. 7.

WEST VIRGINIA

Harness Run.—Bro. Ezra Fike, of Eglon, W. Va., began a series of meetings at Harness Run schoolhouse Sept. 27, preaching eleven interesting sermons. His talks on "Personal Evangelism" were very helpful. An interesting service was held at the home of an aged brother and sister Oct. 3. Four were added to the church, and we feel much encouraged.—E. Grace Bane, Burlington, W. Va., Oct. 9.

Mountain Dale.—Our meetings closed at this place Sept. 28. Bro. B. W. Smith was the evangelist. Eighteen confessed Christ. Everybody seemed much interested and we had a glorious meeting.—Jeremiah Rodeheaver, Hazelton, W. Va., Oct. 11.

Old Furnace.—A very interesting series of meetings was held by Bro. Obed Hamsteel, of Oakland, Md., beginning Sept. 27, and continuing until Oct. 8. He preached in all thirteen inspiring sermons. Nine accepted Christ. Oct. 8 we held our communion with forty-seven members present. Bro. Jeremiah Thomas stepped off on his way to District Meeting and preached for us Oct. 9. Our Bible Term will be from Nov. 30 to Dec. 7, with Brethren Obed Hamstead and B. W. Smith in charge.—Mrs. Effie Abe, Old Furnace, W. Va., Oct. 13.

WISCONSIN

White Rapids Settlement.—About the middle of September we organized a Sunday-school with four classes. We have sessions every Sunday evening, followed by Christian Workers' Meeting. The weekly prayer meeting and Bible Study is held on Thursday evening in the homes. There is a good attendance at all the meetings. August 31 Bro. Wm. Overholzer, of Warsaw, Ind., gave us a splendid sermon. Since that time we have not had any preaching service. If any of our ministers pass this way we would be very glad to have them stop with us, as we have no minister here. Bro. J. M. Myers, of Stanley, is planning to be with us again the first of November. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bennett have donated the land for a church. The ground will be cleared as soon as possible. Two Brethren families have purchased land here this summer and expect to locate early in the spring. Many letters have been received from others who are interested in this country. This is the best time of the year to locate the land over, as prospective buyers can see how our crops turn out.—Mrs. Pearl Kulp, Amberg, Wis., Oct. 15.

Worden church met in council Oct. 6, with Bro. J. M. Myers presiding. Bro. I. Cripe, of Lena, Ill., was also with us. Our love feast, previously announced, was deferred and will be held Nov. 1. A call election of $11 was taken. Bro. J. M. Myers and family are now located on a farm near the Worden church. Many of the Brethren are coming to Wisconsin, to get homes where land is cheaper. We are anxious to have them buy near the church and a committee was appointed to look after such members. Those wishing to come here with the intention of getting a home should write Bro. I. D. Cripe, R. F. D. 2, Stanley, Wis.—Mollie Turner, Stanley, Wis., Oct. 14.

Evangelism and Revivals

The winter months have long been those in which our churches, especially those in the country, have had their revival services. Of course, in this the first year of the Forward Movement, your church is planning some special efforts along this line. Unless each church makes extra efforts we fear that the evangelistic goal of 15,000 will not be reached. The first need toward that end is a spirit of prayer. We list here some books very helpful on that line.

MEANING OF PRAYER, THE, ...75c
Harry Emerson Fosdick

A vigorous and impressive treatment of prayer as communion with God, as petition for the things we need and as the expression of dominant desire. The discussion of obstacles to effective prayer is also very enlightening. An excellent book.

MINISTRY OF INTERCESSION, ...$1.00
Rev. Andrew Murray.

A companion volume to "With Christ in the School of Prayer." This series of studies treats especial emphasis on the need of more prayer. A well-written, deeply spiritual and wonderfully helpful book.

PRACTICE OF PRAYER, THE, ...75c
Rev. G. Campbell Morgan

The aim of this book is purely practical. "Teach us to pray" is taken to mean not teach us how, but teach us the habit of prayer. This work is an effort to revive the family prayer circle. 128 pages. Cloth.

DYNAMIC OF ALL PRAYER, ...$1.00
G. Granger Fleming.

A new and vital statement of the importance of prayer indicating its true place and power in the great redemptive plan of God. Heartily commended by the Rev. Andrew Murray, author of "With Christ in the School of Prayer."

GETTING THINGS FROM GOD...... Paper, 55c; Cloth, $1.00
Charles A. Bisnebard, D. D.

A very thoughtful and practical book for the individual or for the family or for prayer groups. A simple and interesting treatment of the vital subject of prayer.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM

H. Clay Trumbull, former editor of the Sunday School Times, expressed the opinion that many more people were won to Christ through the personal interview than through the power of sermons. In following out this idea the beginner in this line can find strengthen those who have done this in the past.

R. A. Torrey, D. D.

A clear and forceful exposition of the methods of soul-winning by a minister who has been singularly successful as an evangelist, preacher and teacher. Should be in the hands of every one interested in personal work.

BOOK OF POINTS FOR CHRISTIANS AND PERSONAL WORKERS, ...Cloth, 25c; Keratol Morocco, 35c

This little book answers the objections usually offered by the unconverted, simplifies Bible doctrine, outlines Scripture readings and teachings, and gives a large collection of personal experience testimonies for use on all occasions. It is a vest-pocket size, contains 128 pages, with a full index to the contents. It is just the kind of help a busy Christian Worker needs.

EVERY CHURCH ITS OWN EVANGELIST, ...50c
Loren M. Edwards.

A good many pastors, together with their churches, would be a little more normal and sometimes frantic "S. O. S." calls for an evangelist if they would get and read this little fifty-cent book. It contains a record of the experience of a pastor who proceeded in his work upon the hypothesis that every church is its own evangelist. All the forces of the church were properly coordinated and the pastor was himself leader and evangelist. Experience under the most varied conditions, —with rural, suburban and city churches—proved that the hypothesis was in reality a law. Every church may and ought to be its own evangelist. Get the book that will tell you how to do it.

TAKING MEN ALIVE, ...60c
Charles G. Trumbull.

The principles underlying personal work illustrated by incidents from the life of his father. Cloth.

THE MINISTER'S PART

Many of the books listed above will be of interest to ministers in the general direction of the work. The following bear more particularly on the work of the pastor.

ONE HUNDRED REVIVAL SERMONS AND OUTLINES, $2.00
Frederick Borton.

PASTOR HIS OWN EVANGELIST, THE, ...$2.00

This book will help every pastor to be his own evangelist. Here is the proof: The introduction was written by J. Wilbur Chapman, himself a great evangelist. The preliminary chapter, on preparing for a revival, is the work of Charles L. Goodell, D. D. Finally, the book itself is a compendium of suggestive and helpful thoughts from fresh illustrations.

Added to all this is the provision of practical, actually tested plans for the details of services the influence of which it aims to make cumulative by following a natural order of sequence.

EVANGELISTIC SERMONS IN OUTLINE, ...$1.00
C. Perren.

Some Christians Ought to Be Ashamed

SOME young men fought in the late war because they had to. Some were driven into it by the love of adventure and reckless daring. And some were lured on by the spirit characteristic of "mob psychology." But there is no doubt that thousands of them deliberately chose to walk into the very jaws of death rather than live with the sense of shame which they felt would be theirs for having failed their country in its hour of peril.

Should men feel less ashamed of failing the purposes of God in the building of his Kingdom? Why should a Christian prefer a life of ease for himself to the progress of the Cause? How can he? How dare he do it and look his brethren in the face? Or into his own eyes in the mirror?

If a man would rather die than purchase his life at the price of his country's safety, how is it that so many of us can be content to let the Kingdom lag and other men and women die in physical and spiritual wretchedness, so we can enjoy ourselves?

How can we enjoy ourselves? That's the mystery.

We can not and we will not when we realize how unspeakably selfish such procedure is. The problem of Kingdom progress is the problem of cultivating a proper sense of shame.

How Is It in Your Congregation?

Is the Forward Movement moving forward in your congregation? We know some in which it is, but we wondered how things are going at your place.

The Brotherhood is made up of local congregations. The success of the Movement in the church, as a whole, depends on its success in the local churches. And your church is one of these. Is it doing its share?

A Forgotten Princip

AFTER a very remarkable experience, which n not be repeated here, an ancient preacher found hi self in the midst of a great city, delivering his messa It was short and to the point: "Yet forty days a Nineveh shall be overthrown." There were no "i about it and only one "and." And that one failed materialize. The forty days elapsed but Nineveh not overthrown.

There was a reason. The reason was not satisf tory to the preacher, but it was to Jehovah and to people who were saved from destruction. More ab this reason later. The first point to be noted is t here was a prediction, definite and unqualified, wh was not fulfilled.

It may be urged that Jonah must have said more his preaching than the few words quoted. That his text, but his sermon, no doubt, included the ne sary explanation and qualification.

The answer is that whatever else he may have s he gave no assurance that the impending disaster co be averted. This we know from his own subsequ disappointment, as well as from the anxiety of penitent Ninevites. "Who knoweth whether God not turn and repent, and turn away from his fie anger, that we perish not?" About to drown, t clutched at that straw of hope, and it proved to b rope of safety, to their great joy, of course, and to equally great discomfiture of the narrow-min preacher. No, there is no escape from the abso character of this prediction. There were qualificati in the atmosphere somewhere about, but they were in the prophecy itself.

To get the proper bearing of this, we ought to sider, very carefully, the light in which the preac Jonah appears in this transaction. He tried to away in the first place, because he was afraid his sion would be successful! That is, that Jehovah's pose would be accomplished and he would not ge see his own desire gratified. He knew very well was in Jehovah's mind. But that was not at all own view of the fitness of things. What a picture is of the pouting prophet, sitting out there under gourd vine, still hoping against hope that he will no cheated out of that big bonfire! He would rather h seen the destruction of a great city, full of people longing to a nation he did not like, than to be compe to witness their repentance and forgiveness. Did s a spirit ever receive a severer rebuke than that wh was dealt out to this preacher in that heart-mov question with which this great little book comes to climax? "And should not I have regard for Nine that great city, wherein are more than sixscore th sand persons that can not discern between their r hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?"

A Plea

Grant to me this: the strength to do my duty,
And smiles of love to welcome my return;
Open my eyes to all the world's bright beauty,
Teach me to make the most of what I earn.

What though I toil, let me be brave and cheerful,
Glad there are tasks that I am called to do;
Let love of life keep me from being tearful,
And love of truth keep me from deeds untrue.

I would not dwell too much on cares that fret me,
Nor magnify through selfish eyes my woes;
When failures come and trivial wrongs upset me,
Let me rejoice that I can bear such blows.

Keep me from envy and the jealous madness
Which blinds men's eyes to joy that they possess,
And makes them think another's hour of gladness
Is robbing them of fortune and success.

Through every day and every hour that passes,
Let me press forward, glad to take and give;
Looking at life through clear not murky glasses,
And, come what may, finding it good to live.

A Challenge of the Master

BY EZRA FLORY

When Jesus said: "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves," he called for the very best that was in his followers. He endeavored to attract and utilize, to the fullest extent, the latent powers and splendid ideals of the young of this generation as well. This is as religion should be. Large tasks make large men. Small tasks shrivel us up. No quest, no conquest. The ambition and energy to do great things puts men into a class that the world needs.

Within the last year we have put the question purposely in many forms and in different places, thus: "What Is the Chief Purpose of Church Membership?" We have invariably received the reply: "For the salvation of our souls."

True, we are to consider the salvation of our souls, but we have not half learned the truth and wisdom of Jesus' words, in that iron challenge: "Take up thy cross." Nothing can be worse for religion and for our young people than the slackness of will and feebleness of purpose with which we too frequently make our approach. Moses appealed to Jethro in the fact that Jethro could be eyes to the Lord's hosts, as they moved toward the land of promise. We have been guilty of advertising religion for what it gives, rather than for what it demands. We have coaxed and persuaded, but have not provided for the heroic nor summoned the allegiance of people by appealing to the chivalrous in winning them. Follow Jesus' method again:

"He that taketh not up his cross and followeth after me, cannot be my disciple."

"He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life shall save it."

"Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, the Son of man shall be ashamed of him when he cometh in the glory of his Father."

"Whosoever would be first among you, shall be servant of all."

"Whosoever he be of you that renounceth not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple."

We are in danger of making religion seem tame—a mere matter of course, too scant of adventure of youth. We dare not present them with a church that has a finished task. We dare not shift the center of moral gravity to some past state nor to a future existence. God's challenge is now and here and everywhere, in the actual service of life.

He is a great worker who, instead of attempting everything himself, puts others to work and who sees that they do it. The task of devising and inventing forms of service for young people and the joy of encouraging them to do their work faithfully, ought to be the chief business of older people, whose characters are formed. The wisdom of the old should guide, but the enthusiasm of the young should drive. Of all the doors to the heart of youth none stand so widely open as that of the active powers. Youth is a time of ideals and service, and religion ought to be made to appeal to these years through these avenues. Our very church architecture reveals the fact that we have not been thinking of challenging the virility of our youth—their services, their ambitions. We have provided kitchens for supplies, rooms for infants, quarters for the ladies and adults, but not for youth. We have not yet shown them the church as a big, unfinished task and we have found few Alexanders weeping lest the fathers would leave nothing for them to conquer.

"It was better youth
Should strive, through acts uncouth Towards making, than repose on ought found made."
—Browning.

"Our ideals are pioneers that push out into new territory and call our hearts after them to conquer the promised land."—Fosdick.

"Truth that is not translated into deed perishes in the mind."—Froebel.

The challenge of Jesus in the church today is as big as in his ministry on the earth. The church is not only a place for worship and praise, but for organized endeavor as well. Inspiration comes to the young people not through sitting down in meditation and conversation, and the church can never satisfy these young people unless it has some definite and difficult objectives that will challenge the best that is in them.

The Broken Bread

BY D. W. KURTZ

"This is my body." "Unless ye eat my flesh, and drink my blood, ye have no life in you." "This is my body which is broken for you." Does the bread signify the body of Christ, or does it signify the body which suffered and was broken, bruised, and killed for us? We are taught to "break" the bread.

If the broken bread stands for the "body" of Christ, does it not, in the last analysis, mean the same things as the "body which was broken" for man? Surely, we are not interested in the magical interpretations of transubstantiation or consubstantiation. They are worse than legalism—they are pagan magic applied to a Christian symbol. According to true Christianity, the only values are spiritual and moral values, and the true worship must be worship in spirit and reality. What, then, is the spiritual, the vital, meaning of this symbol?

The body of Christ here stands for the "life" of Christ—the life of purity, justice, love. "Unless ye eat my flesh, ye have no life in you." Unless we feed upon him and grow into the spiritual likeness of Christ, into personalities of love, justice, mercy and purity as Jesus, we do not have spiritual life, eternal life, in us. To have Christ, is to have infinite love. But love is measured by sacrifice. "God so loved that he gave," sacrificed, the best he had—his only Son, for our salvation. Jesus so loved us that he gave—the best he had—himself, in sacrifice and suffering for man. We must feed upon him—upon his love, which will sacrifice for others.

It is not enough to have John 3: 16. We need also 1 John 3: 16: "We know what love is by this, that he laid down his life for us; so we ought to lay down our lives for the brotherhood." This self-sacrifice for the brotherhood is explained in the verses that follow: "But whoever possesses the world's goods, and notices his brother in need, and shuts his heart against him, how can the love of God remain in him? My dear children, let us put our love not into words or into talk, but into deeds, and make it real."

Love is the supreme virtue, and sacrifice is the measure. God's love was expressed in an infinite measure, by an infinite sacrifice. The love of Christ was demonstrated to us by sacrifice. So must our love be demonstrated to others. "The way of the cross leads home."

Sacrifice is a fundamental part of the Christian life. Jesus did not hesitate to make demands upon his followers. "Can you drink the cup that I drink?" Are you willing to count the cost? Will you leave father and mother, brother and sister, houses and lands, husband or wife or children—for my sake and the Gospel's? Are you willing to be loyal to Jesus at the expense of all other loyalties? Will you sell all the goodly pearls for the one pearl of supreme value? Will you surrender self, ambition, fame, money, all—for the Kingdom? Are you willing to be humble, and serve the cause of truth in seclusion, if need be, without the applause of men, and the comforts of this life? Such are the clear, ringing questions put to the saints of God. And the true saints of God have always answered these questions in the affirmative. The cross has become the symbol of the church. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." By the spirit of the cross we conquer.

Sacrifice is the measure of love, and love is the essence of God, and of the religion of his Son. We must follow him in the way of service and sacrifice. We must identify our lives with him, and his life and ours will be one. There must be unity, harmony, oneness of purpose and character. We must eat his flesh and drink his blood. His body was broken—in sacrifice for us. Our bodies must be a living sacrifice for the brethren. The broken bread, representing the broken body, is the symbol of sacrifice, which is essential to the Christian life.

The world today needs more love, more sacrifice for one another, and for the common good. The broken bread becomes the symbol of a religion of power. It must have the dynamic of the cross to get men to repent, and get in tune with the Infinite.

The doctrine of vicarious sacrifice is the foundation of Christianity. But, you say, Jesus died for the world, paid the debt, and all men are saved by his death. Are they? Why did Paul give his life? Why did Peter and the other apostles follow Jesus and all give their lives for the cause of the Kingdom? Why did our fathers suffer if Jesus did all the suffering? Is there no cross for me?

"Shall I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease
Whilst others fought to win the prize,
And sailed through bloody seas?"

No! Jesus showed us "the true way of life" (John 14: 6). The true way of life is the way of the cross. All Christians are called upon to sacrifice—not on the Jewish or pagan altars—but sacrifice their time, their talent, their money, their comforts—if need be, their luxuries, their children, their fame and egotism—for the cause of the Kingdom.

During the war, all loyal citizens were asked to sacrifice—time, money, children—for the cause. Every Christian has enlisted in a cause—the cause of the Kingdom of God. Loyalty to this course demands whole-hearted devotion and service for the cause. But when this cause becomes the supreme good, then it demands personal sacrifice to promote it. The true Christian believes in Christ and his Kingdom; he loves the Kingdom above all other causes; and he serves the Kingdom with supreme self-sacrifice.

Sacrifice—a living sacrifice, wholly acceptable to God—is an essential part of the Christian religion. This ideal is expressed by the symbol of the broken bread. When we partake of the broken bread, we remember the sacrifice of Jesus. Why should we remember? There is just one answer—that we may follow him, go the way he went and keep on going—do as he did—give our lives for the cause of the Kingdom. When we partake of the broken bread, let us pray in the Spirit—"even as thou didst love the world, and give thy life for men, so I pledge to love men and give my life, a living sacrifice for the salvation of men and the cause of the Kingdom."

The religion of the future must have reality. Men are ready to do heroic things for a big cause. The cause of the Kingdom of God—or the Democracy of God—the Brotherhood of Man—with God as Father and Sovereign, is the biggest cause on earth. Men are not afraid to sacrifice for this cause if the leaders of religion will lead people toward this goal.

Religion must have reality—ethical and spiritual reality. The symbols of the church are sham unless they lead to Christian character. But these symbols, nd mother, brother and sister, houses and lands, husand or wife or children—for my sake and the Gosel's? Are you willing to be loyal to Jesus at the exense of all other loyalties? properly understood, are the "language of the Spirit," the "means of grace," the pathway to the Christian character, which puts men in tune with God, and in harmony with each other. Love is the supreme virtue, and sacrifice is its measure. God's infinite love was revealed by sacrifice. The broken bread represents this perfect love in sacrifice. The symbol is intended to create in us the same divine love that sacrifices all selfishness for the Kingdom of God.

This symbol is not intended to change the mind of God—he is always good and holy and loving, and needs not to be changed. It is not an arbitrary command, to be obeyed because commanded by a God of power. It is a symbol, a means to an end—the end is the Christlike character of self-sacrificing love that seeks first the Kingdom, that serves first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, that lays down one's own life for the salvation of others.

The Enemies of Education

BY PAUL MOHLER

EVERYTHING has its enemies, education not excepted. He is wise who takes account of his enemies and overcomes them as far as is possible. Those of us who are in earnest, in promoting education, should do the same.

The enemies of education are not all outside of the camp; some of the most dangerous are listed as its friends. Let me name some of them.

1. The educated fool—the man so lacking in common sense that what he learned in college is of no help to him in any line of work he undertakes. It actually hinders him, because it makes him unwilling to learn from others, who have no education, but are succeeding. Too many boys see the contrast between his failures and the successes of unschooled men, and decide against education for themselves.

2. The educated knave. This man knows how to use his education to his own advantage and to the injury of others. Men seeing this and resenting it, blame education for it and withhold support from schools. Every man that goes out from school with selfishness in his heart, is a menace to society, the more dangerous for the training and skill he has acquired, and his life always reacts to the disadvantage of education.

3. The educated boor. For some reason, many highly-educated men are rude. Their words are smooth but they sting. When they get into a conference, they appear to be acting as gentlemen, but they are really taking unfair advantages. Sooner or later, the plain, common people find them out, and when they do, they not only place a black mark against each name, but also against the schools—all schools, in fact.

4. The education enthusiast—the man that overestimates the value of a college education. Some day, perhaps, education will be somewhere near what it ought to be. In that great day, every man will find what he needs in a college course. At present it is not so, and he is wise who recognizes it. Colleges should be so fully supported, financially, that they need not accept a student for the sake of tuition fees. Then entrance requirements should be radically changed, and every student that is not likely to be benefited by the course, should be rejected, no matter how good his standing in the preparatory school. Until that is done, colleges will continue to be humiliated by seeing too many of their graduates fail, where men that can scarcely read, succeed.

The Enemies Without

1. The uneducated fool. This man has seen some

2. The uneducated knave. This man finds it easier as a rule, to take advantage of uneducated people that of those that have been to school. Moreover, when he is brought to time, caught, exposed, and punished, it i often, if not generally, by somebody that has had school training. This man hates education. If you don't believe it, go to the penitentiary. There you will find the sentiment against education at its strongest.

3. The uneducated boor. This man has made money and is proud of it. He counts nothing of any value unless it has the dollar mark on it. He counts himself the superior of the man that teaches his children, just because he is able to hire him, and he openly flouts a the teacher's best and finest work, because he does no appreciate its value. Unfortunately he, too, has his influence, and it keeps his own children, and perhaps a good many others, from looking to a higher standard of thought and living.

4. The self-culture enthusiast—the man that admires the self-made man and only thinks of that class as admirable. He has a list of self-made men that have succeeded: George Washington, Benjamin Franklin Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Edison, Andrew Carnegie Henry Ford, etc. He forgets that these men drew heavily from educated men—schooled men that furnished them with information, without which they could never have succeeded. Go into any institution presided over by a self-made man, and you will be amazed at the number of schooled men in his employ without whose aid he could not succeed. Talk with the self-made man, and you will find him saying things that he got from books, doing things that he learned from others that learned from books—books that were written by men in the schools. Yet there are men of influence that advise young men to stay away from school because so many men have succeeded without going to school. These are not all of education enemies, but they are enough for our present consideration.

What Is the Remedy?

The next question is how to overcome them, eliminate them, neutralize their influence, or make them into friends.

1. Recognize the facts. Our schools are not what they ought to be; they do not serve all classes; they can not make something out of nothing; they are making mistakes. This is because our schoolmen, like other men, are human, but this fact does not correct evils; it only serves as an excuse for them. Having recognized the facts, let us set about to correct the faults of education. I have already made one suggestion—that of rejecting students who are not likely to be benefited or who are not likely to use the skill and knowledge acquired, unselfishly. Right there was one secret of the remarkable success of Tuskegee Institute under its founder, Booker T. Washington. He rejected unpromising students.

2. Strengthen the religious element in education. I think it is a mistake to make Bible study optional with college students. The college graduate without religious principles is a dangerous animal, and should never be turned out by any institution supported by the public. A Christian college should list as a failure every student that graduates without being a devout student of the Bible, and an earnest, humble Christian worker.

3. Eliminate the bad features of college contests athletic or intellectual. You know, it is such a common thing for one side to excuse anything its partisans may do, just so it helps to beat the other side. The old saying, "All is fair in love and war," is extended to they will not listen to argument, all our appeals fall on deaf ears. There is but one thing to do and that is never impossible. We must pray for the sinning; they are slipping. God is losing them. Perhaps our prayer is the life-line by which they can be saved. We can release spiritual forces by our prayers that are more powerful than any weight of argument. "If any man see his brother sinning a sin not unto death, he shall ask and God will give him life for them that sin not unto death."

Are you concerned about some loved one's condition? Whether the door to personal effort be closed or not, pray first and all the time. Are you concerned about your congregation—the low spiritual level upon which some of your people are living? Gather the faithful ones into a prayer-band for intercessory prayer. Nothing will bring results so surely.

We are inclined to become discouraged sometimes about the condition of our church at large and to fear for its future. Are we praying?

"Preach the Word"

BY LEANDER SMITH

"If thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul" (Ezek. 3: 19).

When I read a recent Saturday's issue of our daily paper, which carries announcements of subjects to be used in the pulpits of our city the day following, I am made to wonder, as I read them, whether there is to be preaching or lecturing, whether the people are to hear of the awful consequence of sin and the atoning blood of Christ, or whether they are to be entertained. This seems to be the hour of all hours for true Gospel preaching, and to stand squarely for the fundamentals of the Gospel. God's ministers should preach the Gospel to lost men and women.

Men in the army have been entertained; it was the business of the chaplain to help entertain. This is not saying a word against his work as an entertainer, nor is it, in the least, belittling the efforts of those who sought preeminently to win men to Christ during the most strenuous days. But the entertaining influence is coming home to us and is manifesting itself nowhere more powerfully than in the pulpit.

The duties, pertaining to the pulpit and the lecture platform, are distinct. Preaching is not lecturing, and God grant that it may never be. Preaching has ever been a rather dangerous profession. Socrates persisted in it. He would, no doubt, have been spared the experience of the fatal hemlock had he been content to lecture only, and refrained from preaching.

John the Baptist was a popular preacher, and for a time held his position without question, but one rebuke—one short discourse pointedly rebuking sin—caused him not only to lose his position, but his head as well.

So far as I can find, Jesus' discourses were never lectures, but sermons. True, his pastorate lasted only about three years, but he was crucified for being a disturber of the peace.

Stephen's work seems to have been a very brief one. In fact, if he ever preached more than once, no record has been kept of it, but it was preaching. And before the sermon was over, there was howling and teeth-gnashing, on the part of those who were rebuked for sin. This was Gospel preaching under which men never sleep. Yet no man ever preached with more tenderness, or with a sweeter spirit. Study his dying words.

Tradition tells us that all twelve of the apostles died a violent death save one, and that for no other crime than that of preaching the Gospel. They made no apologies for the directness of their sermons. They were not courting popularity, but pointing out to men the path of personal duty, nor did they hesitate to insist that men walk in it. They did not draw the nails out of truth in order to make it acceptable, nor did they tell their hearers that Christian duty was an easy task.

My brethren, they preached for a purpose, and that purpose was to induce men, by the help of God's Spirit, to break off from sin. And I think that when their hearers returned home they did not go, congratulating themselves on the attractiveness of the discourse to which they had listened, but rather pricked in heart because of personal sin.

Beloved, holiness is the same as it was twenty centuries ago, and sin is the same. The two are no nearer agreed. Sin hates holiness now as much as it did the moment Jesus Christ was nailed to the cross. Were he to come to earth today, I fear he would be just as unpopular as he was when he was here in the days of old.

It seems to me that the weakness of the pulpit of today lies in the fact that its portrayal of holiness and sin impresses people neither with the attractiveness of the one, nor with the repulsiveness of the other, and so obliterates the contrast between them. A pastor once said to me: "If I were to preach the whole truth and bring it home to the consciences of my people I would not be allowed to remain in my pulpit." He is not in that pulpit now. Is the sense of sin declining? The sense of sin and that of helplessness go together. One can not be without the other and sin is not a frequent topic of pulpit discourse today.

If I understand the purpose of the pulpit, its chief aim is to bring men to Christ, to bring the soul to its Savior, where it may be emancipated from sin and sin's power. And the more the pulpit fulfills its distinct purpose of bringing the soul from the prison-house of sin, the more inadequate become the claims of all other agencies for reconciling man to his God. Man is not bettered by any influence that does not tend to some kind of moral or religious action.

Today people everywhere are in a condition of unsettlement and revolt. No man can secure quietness and steadfastness of mind apart from the Gospel. People in the pews are slow to believe that a thing is true simply because the minister says it is true. The situation is a hopeful one, for this age is a thoughtful one. Today the minister in the pulpit is the prisoner in the dock, and men in the pews are the jury. What I know, I know, even if it is something I do not like to confess. Nathan had to penetrate to the very heart of David before any confession could be had, but he gained his end by keeping to his subject.

The man who is passive and who does not reflect upon nature, man, God or destiny, knows next to nothing. The man who reflects little, and the man who summons himself to reflection that is vigorous, searching, sustained and extensive, knows much. This power can not be inherited. It can not be put on and off like a suit of clothes. It is a power that can only be gained by being filled with the Holy Spirit.

Then, my brethren, wrestle like Jacob of old until you receive the power to handle the great problems.

The attempt to minimize sin by giving it other names, has not been successful. Men are selfish and cruel to one another. They quarrel and fight and hate. The strong oppress the weak. Men ruin women and trample them in the mire. The ruined women retaliate by tempting other men.

But at last the whole world is coming to realize in a sense that the Christian religion is the one factor in human life which offers any hope of relief and deliverance. Jesus Christ set out to save men by sacrificing himself, by seeking not his own, and he opened the Kingdom of heaven to all believers. "How shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?" God give us men whose hearts are strong as steel, and whose souls are afire with the Message Divine!

It takes a real disciple of Christ to preach the real Gospel, because only such a man can make sacrifices commensurate with the sacrifice required to preach the real Gospel to the world. It takes a true disciple of Christ to stand up against the persecutions, calumny and lies of the unregenerate in the pulpit and out of it, in the press and in the forum, on the streets and throughout the world. The pulpit offers a greater opportunity for the faithful minister who possesses Christian courage, than any other position in the world. The work of the pulpit will outlast the stars, and will make up the record of the future.

The way to fill the pulpit with true and faithful ministers is to follow Christ's program—"Pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into the field." Parents ought to dedicate their sons at birth, and begin prior to birth to plead with God to call their sons into the Gospel ministry. It will bring out all the manhood, all the courage, and all the power that may be latent in the boy. God help us to do thy will!

The New Auditorium at Winona Lake

BY J. E. MILLER

Those who attended the Conference at Winona Lake in June will recall the interest manifested in a new and larger auditorium. Dr. Dickey announces that a number of the denominations have signified their readiness to coöperate in his plan. He is now having plans made and expects to begin work some time in January. In going to the different denominations for help in the erection of this auditorium, the Winona Assembly issues stock certificates which are nonassessable and pay no dividends, but they do secure to the stockholders the voting power of the corporation, so that they may say what shall and what shall not go to Winona Lake. This assures a safeguard as to the character of meetings and entertainments that may be held there.

Our people have already subscribed and paid toward this new auditorium. Plans have been perfected by which others may have an opportunity to help in raising $10,500 towards the project. When we consider the location of Winona Lake and the splendid accommodations for our Annual Conference, this should be considered a small amount, especially in view of the fact that the Conference has become self-sustaining, while held at Winona Lake.

It is probable that, in the near future, the churches of the nine State Districts, gathering around Winona Lake, will be given an opportunity to assist in the matter of funds, and it is believed that the amount asked will be so small that each District will readily furnish a proportionate amount. Individuals can subscribe for one or as many shares as they wish, or the shares may be taken out in the name of the local congregation.

The one advantage that has been lacking, when the Conference assembles at Winona Lake, is a suitable auditorium. With each one doing his part, this lack will be remedied in the summer of 1920. When our Conference again meets at Winona Lake, we will have a large, modern, one-floor auditorium, seating 7,500 people, with a platform large enough for 500—the whole built after a plan that will insure splendid acoustics. The large, temporary tabernacles, built by "Billy" Sunday, have given him ample opportunity to know how to build an auditorium. "Billy" is greatly interested in the Winona auditorium and is one of its staunch supporters. When a representative from your District lays the matter of this auditorium before you, help him to put it across.

Noise or Light

BY IDA M. HELM

Did you ever hear the story of the man who wanted an electric light on his desk, but did not want to pay much money to get it? He decided on rigging one up himself—so the story goes. He remembered there was an electric bell on the door of his office, and then he knew what he would do—he would locate the battery, then run wires from it to his desk, fasten an electric lamp there and when the lamp was connected with the battery, he would have his desk-light.

Immediately he went to work and made the connection. Then he turned the switch in the lamp, expecting to flood his desk with light. But, alas and alack, there was no light!

He went over the connections one by one to make sure that everything was clean and tight. Then he tried the lamp again, but there was no light. What was the trouble, he could not make out, so he sent for an electrician and asked him to locate the trouble. The man showed the electrician the lamp and the wires, then the battery.

The way to fill the pulpit with true and faithful ministers is to follow Christ's program—"Pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into the field." Parents ought to dedicate their sons at birth, and begin prior to birth to plead with God to call their sons into the Gospel ministry. It will bring out all the manhood, all the courage, and all the power that may be latent in the boy. God help us to do thy will!

The New Auditorium at Winona Lake

BY J. E. MILLER

THOSE who attended the Conference at Winona Lake in June will recall the interest manifested in a new and larger auditorium. Dr. Dickey announces that a number of the denominations have signified their readiness to coöperate in his plan. He is now having plans made and expects to begin work some time in January. In going to the different denominations for help in the erection of this auditorium, the Winona Assembly issues stock certificates which are nonassessable and pay no dividends, but they do secure to the stockholders the voting power of the corporation, so that they may say what shall and what shall not go to Winona Lake. This assures a safeguard as to the character of meetings and entertainments that may be held there.

Our people have already subscribed and paid toward this new auditorium. Plans have been perfected by which others may have an opportunity to help in raising $10,500 towards the project. When we consider the location of Winona Lake and the splendid accommodations for our Annual Conference, this should be considered a small amount, especially in view of the fact that the Conference has become self-sustaining, while held at Winona Lake.

It is probable that, in the near future, the churches of the nine State Districts, gathering around Winona Lake, will be given an opportunity to assist in the matter of funds, and it is believed that the amount asked will be so small that each District will readily furnish a proportionate amount. Individuals can subscribe for one or as many shares as they wish, or the shares may be taken out in the name of the local congregation.

The one advantage that has been lacking, when the Conference assembles at Winona Lake, is a suitable auditorium. With each one doing his part, this lack will be remedied in the summer of 1920. When our Conference again meets at Winona Lake, we will have a large, modern, one-floor auditorium, seating 7,500 people, with a platform large enough for 500—the whole built after a plan that will insure splendid acoustics. The large, temporary tabernacles, built by "Billy" Sunday, have given him ample opportunity to know how to build an auditorium. "Billy" is greatly interested in the Winona auditorium and is one of its staunch supporters. When a representative from your District lays the matter of this auditorium before you, help him to put it across.

Noise or Light

BY IDA M. HELM

DID you ever hear the story of the man who wanted an electric light on his desk, but did not want to pay much money to get it? He decided on rigging one up himself—so the story goes. He remembered there was an electric bell on the door of his office, and then he knew what he would do—he would locate the battery, then run wires from it to his desk, fasten an electric lamp there and when the lamp was connected with the

The electrician was amused. "Why," he said, "you have connected that lamp with a bell battery."

"Of course I did," replied the man. "I wanted light. The battery rang the door bell all right, and I don't see why it doesn't light the lamp."

"Don't you see," laughed the electrician, "that a bell battery won't light a lamp like that? It takes a lot more power to make a light than it takes to make a noise."

Then the man understood why he got no results from his work. He knew the electrician had spoken a truth that fits in many places in life, besides experience with bells and light.

Because men and women, boys and girls talk a lot and make a big fuss and lots of noise about what they are doing, does not prove that they have power to accomplish something great. There are blustery chaps who attract one by loud talking and making lots of motions, and we may think: "Surely, here is a fellow with lots of energy and force. He certainly will get things accomplished." But a quiet, modest-looking fellow waits till the noise dies down, then he says and does the right thing at the right time. The people comprehend the truth and look to him as the light-giver—the man of power.

One time, when Lincoln was speaking of Grant, he said: "He's such a quiet little fellow that you scarcely know he's around, but whenever he is, things go."

When Elijah was at Horeb, the hurricane, the earthquake, and the fire did not awaken his conscience as did the still small voice that followed the tempest.

Mighty forces of nature work silently, and the earth gives forth grass, herbs, flowers, grain, vegetables and forests. Thereby the heart of man is made glad, and the life of man and beast is nourished. We need to learn the difference between mere noise and light and must not mistake bluster and talk for power.

The Second "Hanger" of the Law

BY J. F. GRAYBILL

WE, as true disciples of the Master, seek to be taught by our Lord. If we do not utter the same words as did the lawyer, who asked the Savior: "Teacher, which is the great commandment in the law?" we often ask what the Lord would have us do, that we may be his faithful followers and acceptable workers in his vineyard. In short, the answer might be the same as that given to the lawyer: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God. . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbor. . . . On these two commandments hang the law and the prophets." The whole duty of man hangs on two hangers—love to God and love to our fellowman.

If our love to God is perfect, our love to man will not be wanting. But in this stage of imperfection, in which we live, there is danger of busying ourselves in seeking how we may prove our love to God, that we forget that there are neighbors—not those living next door, but far away—who are in great need of a little bit of love. We sometimes say that "the world is dying for a little bit of love." This is true in both a natural and a spiritual sense. It was love to his Heavenly Father and love to the world, that brought the Savior to this world to live a life of service to mankind, and die an ignominious death on the cross, to save us from a second death.

Let me refer you, reader, to two incidents that lately came to my notice. These, I think, fulfill the condition of the second hanger of the law. I believe these donors were by love—their love to God—constrained lowing instructions: "I give this with no condition save those of former donations to this same cause—that it be used to clothe the poor and feed the hungry and I do not want my name published in connection with reporting this. This kind of mission work appeals to me."

Yesterday a young sister handed a dollar bill to me with the following words: "Here is a little donation to the relief work in Sweden." Measuring with the same rule as did the Savior, this sister may have given more than the brother of greater worldly possessions, but I have reason to believe that both were actuated by the same principle—that of love to their neighbor.

During the years of the great war we have been trying to bring aid and relief to those less fortunate around us. We believe that our works of sympathy and charity have met with the Lord's approval, and that he is blessing the work accordingly. Our brother was right when he called it a form of mission work. In India and China we need schools, homes for widows and orphans, and hospitals, to prove our love to our neighbor. In Sweden and Denmark we need funds to help the poor who are always with us and to whom we can do good when we will, if we have the means.

The church in the homeland, which has been bountifully blessed, these last years, has been responding nicely and we trust that our members will again lay this matter upon their hearts and act as the Spirit prompts. Christmas is the time when our joy reaches its climax, because of its great significance. While our joy is full, let us think of the less fortunate and of the conditions of doing the Lord's will. I do not believe that we can enjoy Christmas as we should, if we have not done our part in causing joy in the hearts and lives of the unfortunate. Consider, who, to the greatest extent, is your neighbor and how the Savior taught inquirers of his time to treat him and then go and do likewise.

Send your donations to the District Solicitor, or to the Treasurer of the General Mission Board. Attend to this at once, so that we may have it on hand for Christmas.

Sunday-School Notes From India

BY A. T. HOFFERT

The Indian Sunday School Union, through its Anxiliary branches, conducts Sunday-school examinations every six months. Some schools follow the British International Course, and others the American, hence examinations have to be given, covering the work of both courses. Concerning these examinations the following note from the "Indian Sunday School Journal" will be of interest: "Upwards of 280,000 candidates have been examined in Six Months' Bible Study since 1896. No less than 200,000 have been granted Illuminated Certificates, and in 19 nearly fifty medals were awarded."

The Gujerat Sunday School Anxiliary conducted Sunday-school examinations in July, to cover the lessons of the first half of the year. At our five Gujerati stations these examinations were held. Smaller children and those who can not write, took the oral, while the others took the written. Sister Alice K. Ebey was one of the examiners. Concerning her work as examiner and the Sunday-school work at Ahwa she reports:

"I graded 261 Junior papers. The largest bunch of papers—came from Karipur, I. P. Mission. The best three papers were from Vyara, 99 and 98%, the next two—one from Bulsar and one from Dolka—95%, and the next three—Anklesvar, Bulsar and Dolka—94% each.

"Our Sunday-school at Ahwa, during July, has been large, owing largely to the fact that we give an amount worth of grain to all who come—but we hope they will something besides grain. Average attendance for July 184; average collection, Rs. 1-13-9.

"We need more teachers. We have only five classes and we should have eight or ten—but we do not have

THE ROUND TABLE

"Planted by the Streams"

BY ORA E. WEDDLE

DAVID says that the man who walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, and whose delight is in the law of the Lord, shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

What a fine example of spiritual prosperity—the river representing Christ, the tree representing the true righteous man! Then there is a relationship which exists between Christ and the Christian. We find Christ supplying the needs of the Christian; and, on the other hand, the Christian partaking of the life that is in Christ Jesus. This life, which is in Christ, is going to be the source of our power, and wonderful is the power that cometh from Christ. If we abide in Christ, and Christ in us, then we are fruitful. We shall prosper in whatever work we undertake. Our leaf shall not wither, but we will be able to stand during the temptations and trials of this world.

"Success" is the blessing insured to those who are planted "by the streams." There may be times when it seems as if we were going to lose the victory, and as if we were going to turn back in defeat, but right then remember the words of the Psalmist David: "And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." This, then, is a promise to those who are alive in Christ Jesus. Let it be our motto "to win."

The well-developed, well-rooted tree is firm, it is solid, and the storms and winds which try its stability only serve to make it stronger, and to prepare it for the next storm.

The men and women whose faith is rooted deep in Christ, and whose love for him is such that they are willing to die for his cause, are stable. They are firm and unmovable because of their faith in God.

We are told in God's Word that a double-minded man is unstable in all his ways. That is the man who needs to be transplanted in God's love.

"Let whosoever will, partake of the water of life freely." "For whoso findeth me, findeth life." "I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." "He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son hath not life."

Wonderful, then, is the life that comes to us from Christ, if we are "planted by the streams."

"Thinketh No Evil"

BY G. W. TUTTLE

THE heart that "thinketh no evil" is an unsullied human pool, into which the angels look and see the reflection of the Father's face. The breezes of heaven blow gently upon it, the rich perfume of heaven is about it, the unsullied azure of the Father's approval rests upon it—it is a taste of heaven in the scenes of earth.

You have a friend in whom you have implicit confidence. His heart is pure; love prevails in all his words and actions. The best in you springs to the surface as his warm handclasp meets yours, as you look into his eyes. He "thinketh no evil." His eyes of love look for the best in your life. Your best quickens into new life at contact with him. Love begets love, life begets life.

Here is one of the great magnets to draw men to God, the love that sees the good in men, that puts the best construction possible on what they say and do; the love which looks for good, and not evil, to prevail in the lives of those about us—not the blind optimism which says—cheerily, or carelessly—"O, everything will turn out all right!" but the Christian optimism that trusts God, that remembers that he rules and overrules, and that he makes even the wrath of man to praise him.

God pity the man who gathers evil thoughts and plants them in the seed bed of his heart—envy, covetousness, anger, malice, evil gossip of his neighbor. The crop of briars and thorns that spring up will drive him to despair. Ah, listen while love speaks! Does not love whisper softly into our ears: "Believe the best, hope for the best, inspire the best, in thy neighbor"? Love ever reminds us of our Great Example. Love says: "Even if thy neighbor has sinned, did not the Master say to a great sinner: 'Go, and sin no more'?"

Sin is great, but love is greater,
Love that echoes o'er and o'er
Words so full of heavenly music,
Saying: "Go, and sin no more."

The love that "thinketh no evil" speaks louder than words. Through it men see the Master in the servant, God luminous in the humblest life. It is our thoughts of others that determine our influence over them. "Thinketh no evil" is our ticket of admission to needy hearts and lives. See "Admit one," inscribed upon it.

"The Potter"

BY A. E. HECKER

DID you ever see a potter at work? His is a very old business and one that has come down to us through the ages. In fact, in the eighteenth chapter of Jeremiah, the prophet is told by Jehovah to go down and watch the potter. Of what interest to a prophet could a poor potter be? He is just a common, every-day worker, handling the muddy clay. Jeremiah, however, learned his lesson. Perhaps we can glean a few helpful ideas from the potter and his work.

In the first place, the potter has to have good clay to work with. To be sure, he may have partial success with poor clay, but the better the quality, the greater his success. Then comes the moulding process. The clay is worked from the raw state until it becomes plastic. While yet in this green state, it is moulded into the shapes that suit the necessity or fancy of the moulder. Having decided the shape and moulded the vessel, it is then set aside to dry. When it has dried sufficiently, it is then put into the oven and burned. This is the testing time. Any defects that the vessel may have, will be brought out by the burning. Defects may be due to many different causes. Perhaps it is only a slight one, not likely to destroy the usefulness of the vessel. Again, it may so impair the value of the vessel that the potter destroys it on the spot, for should he send it out to his customers, it might break when in service and ruin many times its value in the spilling of its contents.

Man, too, is made of the clay of the earth. Jehovah is the Potter who moulded his form. His is the will that designed each one of us differently. In looks, no two persons are exactly alike. In temperament all are different. Heredity largely governs our usefulness in the Divine Potter's hand, although environment does much. For his masterpieces in art the potter chooses the best quality of clay obtainable. Just so in choosing his vessels, Jehovah must have quality. When born, we are as the plastic clay—easily worked and moulded. Youth is comparable to the green state in which the process of setting is taking place. Young manhood and young womanhood are the drying period in life, when we are being prepared for the burning and testing fires that are to follow. From this time on our spirits are put through the fire. Financial reverses may overtake us. Death may call at our door, not only once, but often. Numerous discouragements may come in many and unexpected ways. These are a part of the burning process. Daniel's brave companions were put through the actual flames. They never faltered. No defects were found in their characters.

After the potter puts the vessel through the fire, he carefully examines it for defects and if any are found it is either destroyed or put in the cull class, where it is used for some less important purpose. The vessels without defects are selected for the more exacting uses. Perhaps a beautiful design is to adorn the surface. It is painted on and the vessel put back into the furnace the second time. This fixes the figure upon the vessel, so that it is there to stay.

Just so it is sometimes necessary for the Divine Potter first to test his chosen men and then, when they have withstood the discouragements of the world, still further to put them through the fiery furnaces of adversity that they may experience, within their own lives, the world's heartaches and troubles, making them the more mellow, sympathetic, and willing to listen to the problems of those among whom he chooses they shall labor. When reverses overtake us, and we feel frustrated, depressed and defeated, let us recall Jehovah's words to Israel: "Behold, as the clay in the potter's hand, so are you in my hand." There is a Divine purpose in it.

John 3: 16

BY RUTH M. LECKRONE

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

WHAT love! What a Giver! What a gift! What a promise—everlasting life to "whosoever believeth"! Wonderful message that, compressed into twenty-five words—only four words of over two syllables!

This verse has been called the most wonderful verse in the Bible. It is the golden text of the Book. Thousands find peace with God through this verse. Untold thousands of messages have been given with John 3: 16 as a basis. Many missionaries date their call and first desire to go to the "uttermost parts of the world" from messages based on John 3: 16.

The writer was at the great missionary meeting at Wichita, two years ago, when Bro. Crumpacker, of China, delivered that most excellent address from this text, and its message will never be forgotten, though all others fade wholly. "God so loved the world"—not the white man alone, but the red, the black, the brown, the yellow—one and all, rich or poor, alike. It is said that an evangelist went to a city to hold a series of meetings. Each night he took as a text the verse quoted above, using a single word for a sermon. Scores were saved.

"For"—the greatest conjunction. "God"—the Greatest Lover and Giver. "So loved"—the greatest degree. "The world"—the greatest company. "That he gave"—the greatest art. "His only begotten Son"—the greatest Gift. "That whosoever"—the greatest opportunity. "Believeth"—the greatest simplicity. "On him"—the greatest Attraction. "Should not perish"—the greatest promise. MINISTERIAL AND DISTRICT MEETINGS OF MIDDLE MISSOURI

This year was the second time the Spring Branch congregation has entertained the above-named gatherings. Difficulties of access to the church and to homes were soon forgotten in enjoyment of the wholesome friendship and warm hospitality of our Benton County church people. More than two days of work, worship and Christian fellowship were enjoyed.

While the elders were in council on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 30, the Sisters' Aid Society, Mothers and Daughters', and Temperance Meetings were held. The Educational Meeting in the evening was led by Eld. W. O. Beekner, of McPherson College.

Wednesday evening there was a Sunday-school Conference, followed by a missionary address by Bro. J. H. B. Williams, Secretary of our General Mission Board. The offering at this time was for our District work and amounted to over $170.

The Ministerial Meeting of Wednesday was devoted to two general topics, "The Ministry" and "Organization." Every speaker on the program was present with a well-prepared address. Little time or occasion was left for general discussion.

The call to the ministry was prominent in the beginning as a distinct call of God. It is not so much a matter of our choosing a profession, as of God calling us to a service. We need to get away from the idea of the ministry being a side-line, and make it the real issue of our lives. God calls his ministers to a work that is worthy of our best, and that can not be really done short of that. Let our work be not called a sacrifice, but a service in which we learn to solve our own problems while solving those of others. In our study for teaching and developing others, let us reach our own highest development.

Changes of conditions, customs and demands necessitate other changes. Among these we are needing a greater portion of the pastor's time—more than has been available under the self-supporting ministry. Under our present system too many opportunities are missed, and too much that might be accomplished, is not done. Lack of teaching has prevented much needed progress, but the conditions call for changes in our customs as well as in other things.

Much of our best talent is being devoted to other pursuits. Financial help will be necessary if such are to be interested in the work of the ministry. And such talents must be held for leadership in the church if we are to hold our young people and make a proper growth and development. There will be new problems with the increase of pastoral work, but it is our duty to press forward and care for the new problems as we meet them.

Church organization is a uniting for team work, and in unison with God's plan. There may be such a thing as too much organization, too much machinery; but the greater danger is of either leaving out a necessary link, or of failing to connect our organizations with power. The church is organized for preaching the Gospel, the Sunday-school for teaching the Word. Related to this we have the Christian Workers' Meeting, which is organized for service. In their own field we have the Sisters' Aid Society, Child Rescue work and various other organizations. Each is a part of our great organization of the church, filling its own place.

In the work of the District Meeting we had the usual reports of committees and boards. In consideration of District Missions it was decided to set $1,500 as a goal for our giving for the coming year. It was also recommended that each church set a goal for like giving, and then go over the top. A paper was sent to Annual Meeting, asking for the printing of a new church manual for guidance in official church work.

DISTRICT MEETING OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

The Thirteenth District Meeting of Northern California, with the associated meetings, was held in the Empire church Oct. 7-10. The District was organized in 1907. At that time there were four churches, but today there are twenty, with a total membership of between thirteen and fourteen hundred. There were twenty-eight elders of the District present.

The Ministerial Meeting, on Wednesday, was excellent. The need of a conference for ministers, in which their real problems can be discussed, was brought out. At the business session of this meeting a committee was appointed to arrange for such a meeting between now and next District Meeting. This is a splendid step to take. At the Educational Meeting, the same day, Bro. J. P. Dickey, of La Verne College, gave the address.

The business session was held on Thursday. Bro. A. Blickenstaff was Moderator, Bro. M. H. Miller, Reading Clerk, and Bro. A. O. Brubaker, Writing Clerk. The one day was too short for the amount of business. The delegates wisely decided not to crowd out the evening service, to which many in the community were looking forward. It was also deemed best not to encroach upon the time of the Sunday-school program the next day. To finish the program of business, the delegates worked until nearly 1:30 the next morning. A situation of that kind will be avoided in the future, as a decision was made at this meeting to begin on Friday and to have the meetings last over Sunday—the business session to come the last thing on Monday. The special purpose of this change was to give the young people an opportunity to attend the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings on Sunday. One query was sent to Annual Meeting and a call was sent in, urging that the Annual Meeting of 1921 be held in California. Bro. M. H. Miller was elected Annual Meeting delegate and Bro. H. F. Maust, alternate. The next District Meeting is to be held at the Figdale lowed by a Consecration Meeting for the Elders' Wive One evening before the sermon, the Sisters' Aid Socie gave a program.

The evening sessions were well attended and were spiring. On Tuesday evening Bro. M. H. Miller gave timely message, especially to the ministers, on the subje "Take Heed Unto Thyself." He gave no uncertain sou concerning the responsibility of the ministers, in bei true to the doctrine. The missionary message, on Wedn day evening, by Bro. M. S. Frantz, and the temperan message, on Thursday evening, by Bro. J. H. Stover, w both strong and uplifting. The sermon on Friday even was a call to steadfastness.

The missionary spirit of the meeting was excelle It was decided to have a Missionary Secretary. Dur the last few years the duties of the Christian Worke Sunday-school and Missionary Secretary have been co bined in one office. It was the sentiment of this me ing that the entire time of one person is needed for t line of work. The District has a fund for the support school of young people, preparing for foreign miss work. At the Missionary Meeting an offering of $460 was ceived. The Mission Board was granted $3,000 for th work during the coming year. Lack of money is not problem of the Mission Board. The social spirit was good. The people were well physically also. The church provided the meals a charge of twenty-five cents. The Gujerat Missionary Conference met at Mehm abad August 27. This station is occupied by the Am ican Missionary Alliance. The number present was l er than usual, there being nearly fifty missionaries p ent. Those who attended from our mission were Br ren Stover, Long, Eby and Hoffert, and Sister Eliza Miller. Major S. Burfoot, of the Salvation Army, elected chairman of the Conference for the coming y and Dr. H. R. Scott, of the Irish Mission Press, Sura Secretary-Treasurer.

The first item of business was the appointment c committee to draw up resolutions of sympathy to sent to Mrs. Steel, of the Irish Presbyterian Miss whose husband died in June. Mention was made of wide experience of thirty-five years of missionary w his wise counsel on mission problems, his mastery of language and his excellent Gujerati Commentaries on of the Pauline Epistles. All stood with bowed heads the resolutions were read. It was a fitting tribute t great missionary statesman and scholar, who has gone his reward.

Dr. G. P. Taylor, of Ahmedabad, who has been a m sionary in India for forty years, is preparing a series lectures on "Comparative Religions," which he expe to give next year at the Presbyterian University in land. The Conference had the pleasure of hearing seventh lecture of the series on "Hinduism and Ch tianity." It was a vivid, scholarly and yet simple tr ment of the subject. When these lectures appear in b form, they will be a very valuable contribution to study of Comparative Religions.

"And the Greatest of These Is Love"

When a mother loves, though she be a queen, she becomes interested in soap and water, sheets and blankets, boots and clothing and many other mundane things. And when the church loves, she will have something to say about rents and wages, houses and workshops, food and clothing, gardens, drains, medicine, and many other things.

Where is the church's mother-love? Where is her fierce mother-wrath, as she sees the children trampled in the mire? It is easy to go to church, and to abstain from drinking, swearing, and gambling, but it is not easy to love. Love brings labor, and sorrow and self-sacrifice. Love sometimes says: "Sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me."

This is not like going to a home missionary meeting and giving the price of a meal to the collection. It is leaving beautiful houses, and pictures, and gardens, and music, and going into mean streets and dirty dwellings. It is leaving congenial friends and joyous fellowships for service among the unfortunate, unattractive, and, perhaps, depraved. It is giving where you cannot hope to receive in return. There is the sweat of heart and of brain, the carrying of sickness and sorrows. To your own cares and troubles there is added the unspeakable trouble of the multitude.—From "The Cross at the Front," by Thomas Tiplady.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Floyd M. Irvin expects to be located at Homeworth, Ohio, within a few days, as pastor of the Reading church, and should be addressed accordingly.

Bro. A. W. Dupler has changed his address from Bridgewater, Va., to Huntingdon, Pa., having been appointed Professor of Biology in Juniata College.

Bro. J. E. Wagoner, of La Place, Ill., is in a position to assist a few churches in evangelistic work, while waiting with others for available transportation to the India mission field.

Those who have friends or relatives in Springfield, Ohio, whom they desire to get in touch with the mission workers at that place, will please address Orma Smith, 211 South Shaffer Street, Springfield, Ohio.

Bro. B. D. Kerlin, of Garrett, Ind., is contemplating a trip to the West, and will be open to assignments for several series of meetings, beginning with the second week in November. He should be addressed at Twin Falls, Idaho.

Bro. M. M. Eshelman, of 1247 Maryland Avenue, Glendale, Calif., would be pleased to hear from any one having a copy of his book "Two Sticks" and willing to part with the same. He wishes to secure copies for libraries in Boston and London.

Bro. A. F. Wine and family, of Chicago, wish to express in this way their appreciation of the many kind letters of sympathy which came to them in connection with the tragic death of their son Ardys, as they do not feel equal to the task of answering each one separately.

Bro. Chas. M. Yearout is now located in Chico, Calif., as pastor of the church at that place. His correspondents will please address him accordingly. Any one having children or friends in Chico, whom they desire Bro. Yearout to look after, will please notify him of their names and addresses. He will be glad to look them up, and to get them in touch with church influences.

Bro. Walter T. Klinek, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, favors us with clippings from the "Evening Gazette" and "Evening Times" of that city, in which reference is made to the meetings, recently held there by Bro. James M. Moore, of Lanark, Ill. The journals referred to speak of the revival services in a most creditable manner, well calculated to arouse the interest of the community. Publicity of that sort is of value, and may be secured in practically every locality, if some one will take the trouble to furnish the desired information to the press. Editors of local papers are always glad to make room for matter of that sort.

Did every reader in Ohio give careful attention to Bro. Levi Minnich's article in our issue for Oct. 18 on the subject, "Ohio to Be the Storm Center of the Prohibition Contest"? Better read it again. If the "wets" should win the referendum election, it would not defeat the cause of National Prohibition, but it might delay it greatly and would make a lot of bother. Let no reader of the "Messenger" fail to do his duty on election day.

The National Reform Association will celebrate "Armistice Week," Nov. 9 to 16, by a World's Christian Citizenship Conference in Pittsburgh, Pa. A very elaborate program has been provided, commanding some of the ablest talent in America and many other countries.

Do you realize how urgent the demand is, right now, for competent pastors to take care of our churches? One brother, who has lately accepted a pastorate, received thirteen calls within two weeks, some of them so insistent that it was almost heartbreaking, he says, to turn them down, and yet he could respond to only one. The call for leadership sounds louder every day.

We Can Not Escape from Our Influence.—Much as men have tried to shirk responsibility for the influence of their words and actions upon others, the fact remains of their words and actions upon others, the fact remains that our accountability can not be evaded. No word that we speak is without its echo, and no act of ours is without results of some sort. Influence is the most silent, yet the most potent and magnetic thing about us all. We can not escape the final results—be they fair or foul. Our influence is our life, as others see it, and our life, in its summation, may decide not only our own destiny but that of many others.

The Interchurch World Movement has discovered a district in New Mexico of five hundred square miles without religious services of any kind. In response to inquiries, the people frankly said they would welcome preaching and Sunday-schools for their children, but that no religious ministrations ever had been offered them. In Pennsylvania a whole township has been found, in a rich farming community, almost untouched by real Christian work, although in the center of the section there are four churches within sight of each other. One minister preaches every two weeks on a ten-church circuit. Another has a four-point circuit. The third has services about once a month, and lives in Washington, D. C. The fourth church has simply closed up shop.

AROUND THE WORLD

Let Not the Ban on Liquor Be Lifted!

In an effort to concentrate public opinion against the lifting of the war-time liquor ban by executive authority, the Anti-Saloon League officials point out that the result of such a course would be to fill the homes of the country with whiskey during the open period before constitutional prohibition sets in next January. Drunkenness would be multiplied and the unrest and lawlessness which now prevails, would be aggravated. Liquor-inflamed mobs would undoubtedly destroy life and property. Past experience should be sufficient to convince any one that national safety, at the present time, can only be insured by total abstinence from liquor.

Why It Failed

For some weeks public attention was riveted upon the National Industrial Conference, in session at Washington, D. C., in the hope that the conflicting claims of capital and labor might be duly recognized—at the same time keeping in mind the rights of the general public. Now the deliberations of the body, as a whole, have come to an end, and the unprejudiced observer is somewhat puzzled why the great gathering, with untold possibilities within its grasp, should have accomplished so very little. The reason for the failure to agree on a basis absolutely fair and square to all concerned, is seen in the fact that self-interest, rather than the "golden rule" principle, was allowed to sway the great gathering.

He Appeals to the Women

Attorney General Palmer and his official associates, in their fight on the high cost of living, recently decided to enlist the aid of the women of America. The chief appeal of the officials is, that the gentler sex discourage the frequent changes of style in clothes. They are pointing out, to the women of our land, that from eight to thirty-five per cent of clothing prices is charged wholly for "style" itself, and the claim is confidently made that a proportionate amount will be saved by reducing the style changes to a reasonable number. That Mr. Palmer and his aids are fully warranted in the arguments advanced, is amply confirmed by leading authorities in the business world. Today, as always, mankind pays more for its extravagances than its necessities.

Leprosy Can Now Be Cured

From Honolulu comes the startling announcement that admittedly complete cures of leprosy are being made at the Kalihi Territorial Hospital in that city. Within the last few months twenty patients have been paroled without a single recurrence of the disease. Blood tests of these patients have failed to reveal even the least trace of the leprosy germ. Other patients, now under treatment, are showing marked improvement. Chaulmoogra oil, obtained from the seeds of the Taraxogenes Kurzii—for fifty years known as the specific for leprosy—was the only medicine used, the oil having been perfected by a refining process, originated by Dr. A. L. Dean, a chemist, and president of the University of Hawaii. Further particulars of these remarkable cures will be awaited with interest.

The World Language

Some years ago there was strong agitation for the creation of a world language—taking the best features of existing languages for such a linguistic effort. With the close of the war, the necessity for a move of that sort seems to have wholly disappeared. When questioned in the French chamber, as to the official language of the Peace Conference, Premier Clemenceau recently said: "It is not my fault if two-thirds of the earth's population speak English." Without question, the English tongue has become definitely predominant in the affairs of the world. As the product of other leading languages, it is the speech of the wealthiest and most powerful nations. Its position everywhere, on the front line of advancing civilization and in literature, is unquestioned. Even on most mission fields it is the language of the future.

Few Conscientious Objectors Still Held

While successful efforts have been made by the "Amnesty Committee," of Chicago, and the "Civil Liberties Bureau," of New York, to bring about the release of con-state, in this connection, that an apparently fair-minde review of pending cases and recommendations for clem ency, coupled with good conduct, have served to reduc the terms of the majority of objectors. No disposition toward clemency exists, however, in the case of agitato and propagandists, who, of their own volition, or as e ponents of societies to encourage resistance to lawf authority, have sought to convert others to their peculi views.

"The No-Tobacco Army"

With M. E. Poland as its educational director, and i main offices at 1308 Liverpool Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., t No-Tobacco Army is urging its claims as a reform organ zation of undoubted value to the people in general. Son of the statements advanced in the first number of the jonrnal, the "No-Tobacco Educator," are decidedly illun nating: "There is enough nicotine in the average cig to kill two men. The annual tobacco expense of the pe ple of the United States would build four Panama Cana Two thousand American boys begin the tobacco hal each day. Insurance companies estimate that one-thi of all the loss by fire is due to tobacco." These are fac well worth pondering.

Pitiful Plight of Europe's Children

In its investigations of the appalling needs of childhoo in war-swept Europe, the World's Sunday School Asc ciation is discovering some deplorable conditions. T great problem in reconstruction, apparently, is not mer the rebuilding of houses and towns, the replanting shell-ploughed fields, the manufacturing of tools and n chines, important as all this no doubt is. Nobody h been injured more—physically, morally and spiritually than the children and young people. Competent investig tors, after a special study of the effects of the war up child-life in the various European countries, declare th the results of their investigations are decidedly alarmi In order to save the next generation, some really co structive work must be done for the children of today.

Yellow Fever Peril Ended

Sanitary measures which have terminated the outbr of yellow fever at Guayaquil, have practically eradica the yellow fever scourge from the earth, according Major-General William C. Gorgas, former surgeon g eral of the United States army, who recently returned Panama after directing the fight against yellow fever west coast localities. The success, attained by intellig medical measures, in the elimination of the yellow fe menace, is but a precursor of ultimate victory over ot malignant diseases. It will be observed that success attained by the removal of predisposing causes, rat than by merely curing those affected by the disea There is a great lesson for those who would bring ab more healthful conditions in the spiritual realm. Cre more desirable and salubrious environments, and th will be fewer weakly and dormant believers.

They Reap as They Had Sown

Sacred Writ emphasizes the unalterable law that reap as we sow. That is true not only of individuals, also of nations and even churches. Our readers read remember how the Russian Church with a heavy ha persecuted Baptists, Stundists and other evangelical ganizations. Thousands of Jews were murdered in e blood at the instigation of would-be shepherds of Russian Church. With the prevalence of Bolshevism time of retribution set in for those alleged religious le ers. All their church property has been confiscated, a many of the buildings destroyed. Leading ecclesiasti leaders have been tortured and finally killed. Competent students of Russian affairs maintain that the very fail of the Russian Church to prove itself a power for tr and righteousness, in days gone by, has led to the pres deplorable reign of terror, known as Bolshevism.

Startling Growth of Mormonism in England

Possibly Miss Winifred Graham, the noted writer, Europe's best authority on Mormonism, having made t religious cult a life study. She is now on her way America, hoping to participate in the third "Worl Christian Citizenship Conference" at Pittsburgh, Nov. 9-16, where the increasing spread of Mormonism will be given special consideration. According to Miss G ham, Mormonism in England does its work stealth even more so than in America. With bold effronte however, it covertly snaps its fingers at law in both co

HOME AND FAMILY

The Two Villages

Above the river on the hill
Lieth a village, white and still,
While all around the forest-trees
Shiver and whisper with the breeze;
Over it sailing shadows go
Of soaring hawk and screaming crow,
And mountain grasses, low and sweet,
Grow in the middle of the street.

Beside the river, 'neath the hill,
Another village lieth still;
There I see on a cloudy night
The twinkling stars of household bright,
Fires that gleam from the smithy's door,
Mists that curl from the river's shore,
But in the road no grasses grow,
No wheels that hasten to and fro.

In that village upon the hill
Never a sound of smith or mill;
Houses thatched with grass or flowers
Bloom and fade with changing hours;
Doors of marble always shut,
Closing entrance to hall or hut;
Silent at rest, they lie in sleep,
Never again to sow or reap;
Never to dream, to mourn or sigh;
Done is their task here, quiet they lie.

In that village 'neath the hill,
When the night is starry and still,
Many a weary soul in prayer
Looks to that other village there,
And weeping, sighing, longs to go
Up to that home from this below;
Longs to rest from this world of strife,
Through the Redeemer to be with wife.
May to that prayer this answer fall,
"Patience, that village shall hold you all."

Let Him Conquer the World

BY BESS BATES

"Yes," agreed the wise mother, "Junior is going through a trying time now and you, too, John. You say nothing suits him; that he thinks he knows the one and only way to do everything. I guess we have all passed through that time. I would give him responsibility if I were you, John. Let him go ahead. There is nothing like responsibility to take the starch out of a young person. It will probably cost you something, but all education costs. Don't worry too much about that side of it but let him do some of the things he wants to and be sure to let him take the consequences.

"I well remember when I was a girl. I think I must have been quite a trial to my mother. I know I was critical and must have been frank with my criticisms. Mother trained me well in all kinds of housework, but she was always there to boss and I resented that, at times. It seemed to me that if I could have run the house a while, things would be different. And they were, for I had the chance.

"One morning my mother asked me if I thought I could keep house while she went on a little visit. She needed a rest and wanted to go away alone. That would leave me with my younger brother and sister and older brother and father to cook for. I was pleased that she would trust me with the housekeeping and immediately began to plan how well I would do everything.

"On the day she left, she told me that father would give me a certain sum each week, which must cover the household expenses. It was a little more than she was in the habit of spending, but she knew that I had not done much buying, so she made allowance for that. And I was to have all of the money I could save out of that allowance. In addition, she gave me money to buy my two winter dresses. I was to have complete freedom in selecting the patterns and materials and was to have Mrs. Weller for two days to help me make the dresses. I thought that nothing could make me happier and gave my mother good-bye without a misgiving.

"I began at once by giving meals of the kind I had always longed for. I was a pretty good cook and so I did not have much trouble in making the food good, but we lived in town in those days, and had to buy everything. It did seem to me that some things were pretty high. Mother certainly did not leave the pantry well supplied when she left. Before the first week was out, I discovered my allowance running short. I had planned on saving at least a third of it and had already invested those savings in my mind in various treasures which I had been longing for. By the end of the week we had to go two days without meat. Father was very patient and said nothing about it, but my younger brother and sister were perfectly free with their comments. I resented what they said, when suddenly it occurred to me that I had been saying nearly those same things to my mother for some time. I did a little thinking that evening. And I resolved that the next week should go better.

"When it came to buying the dresses, I had perfect assurance. I knew just what I wanted. I had decided to make them the second week, while mother was gone, and give my whole time to housework the first. So, on Monday afternoon, I went to the store to do the buying. The dresses were to be worn week about for school, that winter. Mother had always gotten me substantial, dark-colored materials and brightened them with a little trimming. For several winters I had coaxed for something brighter and now was my chance to get exactly what I wanted.

"I selected a delicate shade of blue, neither dark nor light and very pretty, for one. The other was a plaid and quite bright. I let my fancy have free play in selecting the way in which they were to be made. In order to buy plenty of trimming, I got cheaper materials, and I was perfectly certain that I would never have two dresses which I would like so well. When Mrs. Weller came to make them up, she protested faintly at the style and material, but I quieted her by telling her that I was to have my own way and most certainly knew exactly what I wanted. She declared that she washed her hands of the whole deal and would not take any responsibility for the way they were made. I returned that I was perfectly able to take that responsibility myself. So the dresses were made and finished.

"I tried them on and was happy. But during this orgy of dress-making the housekeeping had been lax. My younger brother and sister were perfectly frank in reminding me of it. Even father, in his mild way, suggested that I take a little more time to prepare the meals, and my older brother declared that his bed had not been made for a week. I silenced him by saying that if I had raised him, he would have been taught to make his own bed. And he answered by declaring that he was thankful I had not had his raising in charge. Defiant as I was, their criticisms went in, and I well remember the night when I lay awake and wondered how mother ever got through as well as she did.

"Day by day I saw my hoped-for savings vanish, and day by day I fell a little behind with the allowance. But I had one great consolation—I had two perfect dresses. Nothing could take away that pleasure.

"At last mother returned. I was glad to see her and will never forget with what relief I turned over the reins of the household. When I showed her the dresses, she said very little, but her tactful silence did not shatter my faith in the perfection of those dresses. I wore the plaid one on a Sunday for the first time. I overheard some one express surprise why my mother ever let me have a dress like that. It certainly was the loudest thing they had ever seen.

"I was furious, but still believed in my clothes. I heard other similar remarks and Grandmother was quite outspoken in her ideas on the subject. I began to have doubts myself about the good taste of those dresses.

"I wore them though. I suggested once that I might need another dress before the winter was over, but mother said she could not afford another. The plaid one faded out and the blue one took an endless amount of cleaning to keep it looking nice. I was the first girl in school to put on a gingham dress that spring, and I certainly was glad to get rid of those two dresses. When my mother suggested blue serge for the next winter, I raised not the slightest objection.

"So, I say, John, let Junior conquer the world a little. He thinks he knows how and the easiest way to teach him he doesn't, is to let him go the way he wants to, but be sure to make him 'wear his dresses' through the winter."

The Importance of Telling Stories to Children

BY LOTTIE OBERLIN HIRT

The child, by nature and of necessity, lives largely in the land of the imagination. In fact, some writer has truthfully said that a child lives chiefly on the imagination. It is a psychological law that after one has passed the age of twenty, his imagination almost wholly ceases to exist. Things become real and we do not think in terms of the child. But if we, as mothers or teachers, recall those stories of our childhood, and gather our little ones around us, and tell them of the beauties of nature and the love of our Heavenly Father, we will again become as a little child, living in the same world with him. And, oh, the joy we experience, when we see the apparently unknowing baby eyes suddenly light up with a knowledge of things unseen! How charming to see the understanding smile spreading over his tiny face, revealing that he at last has entered a world where he comprehends, even though he can not express his knowledge.

The "once upon a time" has worked its charms in many ways. The temporarily sick child, or the invalid, can be amused hour after hour by a good story-teller.

If you are not gifted in telling stories and can not put into beautiful form the every-day happenings of the home, why, get a book on stories for children and how to tell them. It is a great art to be able to tell a story which a child will remember and which will teach him a great truth.

The story of the Christ-Child is an excellent one to begin with, but it should be told in terms that the child understands. Our graded Sunday-school lessons will give you an excellent example of story-telling.

A child's character is moulded, to a great extent, by those who care for him. He needs something to feed his imagination. We must be very careful how we train him so that life will be beautiful and a pleasure to him as he grows older.

Fannie Crosby, although blind, has said that she owes her power of beautiful description to her grandmother, who would take her out daily and teach her about the birds, the flowers, trees, sunset, insects, rain, clouds, snowstorms, and, in fact, every element in nature. She was a teacher and story-teller who formed a character whom the world loves and respects.

Oftentimes, when we feel like Wordsworth, "that the world is ever with us, and our perceptions of the beauty and the truth of God's universe are becoming dull," then we can learn the great lesson of patience, beauty and love from childhood, by associating with children. Our hearts grow purer; our minds lighter when we listen to their pleasant voices making happy music. Then we, in turn, can not refuse to tell them a story when they beg it of us. So let us be more thoughtful, and when we are busy, if it is necessary, let us drop our work and tell them what they want to know, for in so doing their confidence in us will grow stronger and stronger. We will have so many opportunities to help mould their characters.

Let us not be too tired, mothers, to tell our child the story he asks, or to give him the kiss that belongs to him, when he is near us.

"A little elbow leans upon your knee,
Your tired knee that has so much to bear;
A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly
From underneath a thatch of tangled hair.
Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch
Of warm, moist fingers, folding yours so tight.
You do not prize this blessing overmuch,
You almost are too tired to pray tonight.

But it is blessedness! A year ago
I did not see it as I do today—
We are so dull and thankless; and too slow
To catch the sunshine till it slips away,

When my mother suggested blue serge for the next winter, I raised not the slightest objection.

"So, I say, John, let Junior conquer the world a little. He thinks he knows how and the easiest way to teach him he doesn't, is to let him go the way he wants to, but be sure to make him 'wear his dresses' through the winter."

The Importance of Telling Stories to Children

BY LOTTIE OBERLIN HIRT

THE child, by nature and of necessity, lives largely in the land of the imagination. In fact, some writer has truthfully said that a child lives chiefly on the imagination. It is a psychological law that after one has passed the age of twenty, his imagination almost wholly ceases to exist. Things become real and we do not think in terms of the child. But if we, as mothers or teachers, recall those stories of our childhood, and gather our little ones around us, and tell them of the beauties of nature and the love of our Heavenly Father, we will again become as a little child, living in the same world with him. And, oh, the joy we experience, when we see the apparently unknowing baby eyes suddenly light up with a knowledge of things unseen! How charming to see the understanding smile spreading over his tiny face, revealing that he at last has entered a world where he comprehends, even though he can not express his knowledge.

The "once upon a time" has worked its charms in many ways. The temporarily sick child, or the invalid, can be amused hour after hour by a good story-teller.

That while I wore the badge of motherhood,
I did not kiss more oft and tenderly
The little child that brought me only good.

If I could mend a broken cart today,
Tomorrow make a kite to reach the sky—
There is no woman in God's world could say
She was more blissfully content than I:
But ah! the dainty pillow next my own
Is never rumpled by a shining head—
My singing birdling from its nest is flown.
The little one I used to kiss is dead."

to Bulsar. Whether any such arrangements will be made, remains to be seen. While it is felt that she would be of very great service to our new missionaries, yet the task seems too great for one of her years. Even should no such arrangements be made, her kind offer will be gratefully remembered!

The rains have been abundant this year—just what India needed—and for them many were praying. God does not forget his people! The Nerbudda River, which flows between Anklesvar and Broach, just four miles to the north of us, for several days last month was out of its banks, and overflowed much of the country for three miles, this side of its channel. Several hundred miles inland there was a rainfall of eighteen inches, which caused the river to rise higher than it has been since 1903. Thousands of people were driven from their homes. There was little damage, however, outside of crops. The Government is loaning the farmers money, so they can replant. The railroad bridge, crossing this river, is 4,500 feet long. It was completed in 1881, its construction requiring three and one-half years. One afternoon, before the water had fallen, the Anklesvar mission family went to Broach for a short outing, and to see the high water. Well could we understand why the bridge was made so strong, as a wall of water, twenty-six feet deep, was making a mad rush for the sea! The night before it had risen to thirty feet—just one and one-half feet less than it was in 1903. That bridge stood without a tremor, for its immense pillars were resting upon the rocks beneath. How important it is that our lives be firmly resting upon the Rock, Christ Jesus, that we may stand unshaken when the floods of temptation and adversity beat down upon us!

September and October afford a vacation time for some of our mission who were unable to get away last spring. Dr. Nickey and Sisters Miller and Mohler are at Landour, Sister Royer is at Ponchgani, and Bro. Ross and family are at Naina Tal.

Brother and Sister I. S. Long returned to Vyara on Thursday, Sept. 11, after an absence of ten days, visiting the missionaries of the American Mennonite Mission, at Dhamtari, Central Provinces. While they were away, two of their children, Albert and Magdalene, were cared for by Sister Kathryn Ziegler at Anklesvar. It is always profitable to visit other missions, as in that way we learn from one another. The hope has frequently been expressed that there might be an exchange of visits between our India and China Missions, for the mutual benefits that would come to both.

Several weeks ago Sister Pittenger went to Miraj, with the expectation of undergoing an operation which, we are happy to state, the doctors decided was not necessary. After returning she has been at Bulsar for some time, taking treatment from Drs. Cottrell. She is able to return home this week. Sister Howard Alley, who has been under the doctor's care for several weeks, is reported to be much improved at this writing.

Brethren Stover and Pittenger attended the regular yearly session of the Bombay Representative Council of Missions this week. All the missions of Bombay Presidency have representation on this Council. Brother Stover was elected Chairman of the Council for the coming year. While at the Council, he had the pleasure of meeting Rev. H. K. Wright, of the American Presbyterian Mission, who is a graduate of Bridgewater College. Before coming to India he taught for a time in Blue Ridge, and also in Bridgewater College. He said he was not all that might be expected of a minister's son, during his early days as a student. He met Bro. Stover when, upon his

I quote from the "Times of India": "In connect with educational matters a scheme was provision adopted . . . for the establishment of a Woman's C lege, in close relation with Wilson College, Bombay, for a hostel where women students and professors m be accommodated. The scheme was heartily endorsed the representatives of the various missions, who communicate with their Home boards and with the In Church Movement in America."

The Government has also recently taken action on hi er education, to meet the demands of the Presidency, deciding to establish a new college in Bombay, to enla others, and to provide hostels for women, in connect with the colleges now in operation.

Six missions—one of which is the Brethren—are co erating in the publication of a Marati Christian wee Resolutions of thanks were sent to the "Christian H ald," New York, for contributing $60,000, and to the dia Famine Relief Committee, Toronto, for contribut $50,000 for famine relief work in India.

"Dr. W. J. Wanless, of Miraj, urges upon the Cou the formation of a standing medical committee, wh was unanimously agreed to. He desired also that Miraj Medical Training School should become a uni scheme, under the control of all the missions, the n ter being relegated to the newly-appointed commit which was also asked to deal with Dr. Wanless' furt recommendation that the missions join in the erection a hospital in Western India for the treatment of tub culosis." Dr. Cottrell, with Dr. Wanless, and oth was appointed on this committee. The action of Council on the temperance question will be reported la

The new building for the Anklesvar Girls' Boardi school was dedicated Sept. 13. Bro. Govinji Khengar Bulsar, conducted the services. Afterwards the board girls gave a very acceptable program. The teachers fr the villages were present and also a number of the p ents. Bro. Khengar gave a good Sunday-school talk the afternoon, and on Sunday morning, Sept. 14, preached for the Anklesvar church. A. T. Hoffer

NOTES FROM AHWA

Abundant rains have been falling for the past th months. Some eighty inches have fallen since the firs June. The bridgeless rivers between us and the railr have been higher than for many years. Even our m carrier, who is an expert swimmer, was not able to cr the swollen streams, sometimes, for a week. Then w he came, he would have a great pack of letters and pers from far and near, and we were in touch with outside world again.

Crops promise a full harvest; there is abundant past for the cattle, and plenty of water everywhere. Surely people of these forests should praise God for his wond ful kindness to the children of men.

There have been hungry people round about us, dur the last few months. We bought all the grain we co Government had several thousand bags of imported r At the beginning of the rains the supply was exhaus and the roads became impassable. The mission had c a limited supply. With about sixty children in the Boa ing-school and a Christian community of nearly a h dred, most of whom look to us directly or indirectly their daily bread, what was this amount among so ma Hungry people from far-away villages came with mo in hand, to buy rice, but there was none to spare. La we were able to get a little rice from the Governm supply store at Vaghai, about twenty miles away. Se carts made a trip through the rain and mud, and brou what they could. Then the mud became too deep and rivers too high to risk the carts. We sent about thi men and women who carried small quantities on th heads. Thus we have been able to meet the most urg needs of our own Christian community, as well as th of a few of our most needy Hindu neighbors and offici But often our hearts ached when we had to turn aw hungry travelers, who had tramped a long distan through these jungles. However, few people in these f csts really starve. Roots, seeds, fruits, game and f abound. But without some grain to eat, the people not have strength to work. The many underfed childr arouse sympathy in the hardest heart.

MOUNT CARMEL CHURCH, GREENE COUNTY, VIRGINIA

Bro. Walter W. Hartman, of Annville, Pa., came to us Aug. 25 and began a series of meetings at Mountain Grove Chapel. He remained with us two weeks, preaching the Word with power. As a result the church was much built up and seventeen young people stood for Christ. Thirteen have been baptized—twelve young men and a mother.

Our love feast was held on Saturday evening, Sept. 5. Bro. Hartman officiated. It was an enjoyable occasion. Eighty surrounded the table of the Lord—the largest number we have ever had at any one time. The meetings closed on Sunday night with an overflowing house of eager listeners. Bro. Hartman preached on "Sowing and Reaping." He did not fail to drive home the great importance of careful sowing, to gain the blessing at the harvest time. Bro. Hartman is a wide-awake worker and by his sociability made a number of friends while here. His stay among us will not be soon forgotten.

Bro. W. H. Zigler, of Churchville, Va., began a series of meetings at the Evergreen house Sept. 16, and continued until Sept. 26. He preached twelve soul-inspiring sermons. Weather conditions, and other meetings in progress at the same time, lessened the crowd to some extent but the best of interest and quietness prevailed throughout the meeting. Four of our Sunday-school girls came out on the Lord's side. We feel that the church was much strengthened. Sisters Minnie, Rosa and Pearle Wampler, from the Pleasant Valley congregation, were with Bro. Zigler during the meetings. Their presence and help were very much appreciated. Our love feast is dated for Oct. 25, at 4 o'clock. Bro. S. A. Sanger expects to be with us for a few meetings prior to the love feast.

Bro. Sanger held a two weeks' series of meetings at Parrot's schoolhouse, in the same congregation, in September, resulting in eight baptized and one awaiting the rite. The Sunday-school has progressed nicely, with Sister Fannie Snow as superintendent. This is a new school, organized in the spring. We have had preaching services there regularly during the summer.

Bro. G. A. Maupin, of Free Union, Va., spent ten days with the Shiloh people, near Fletcher, resulting in three accepting Christ as their Savior.

Our work has been growing steadily during the year. The Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings have gone through the year without a break, for which we praise the Lord. Sister Helen Sandaal has resumed her work in the public school and is helping in the various church activities.

We opened school Sept. 29, and it is moving on nicely. Just now there seems to be a smallpox excitement. Several cases are reported on the mountain, near our school. Quite a few of us have been vaccinated. We trust, however, that the epidemic is not a serious one.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT IN MIDDLE IOWA

My work being in Iowa, this summer and autumn, gave me the opportunity to be at the District Meeting of Middle Iowa, which convened in the Panther Creek church Oct. 11-13. The hospitality of these people was beyond the ordinary, in that they furnished board and lodging for every one free.

This District is doing things along some lines that are not mentioned in our Five-Year Forward Movement. They have an Old People's Home, located at Marshalltown, Iowa, with thirteen inmates. Both Northern and Southern Iowa, however, are contributing to this work. A receiving home for orphan children has been built at Ankeny, Iowa, and donated to the District. This home is doing a great work in caring for the most helpless and needy of earth—homeless children. They have secured seventeen children since Jan. 1.

The District Mission Board has a membership of five men of business ability and vision, who are endeavoring to do their part in the great Forward Movement by opening a new point in the District. And their constituency manifested an interest in their work by holding up their hands with an offering of $2,000 for the new point and the child-saving work.

The Elders' Meeting convened on Saturday afternoon, and in the evening Eld. N. E. Baker, pastor of the Des Moines church, and a new man in the District, gave a masterly address on the temperance question. Bro. J. Q. Goughnour, of Ankeny, Iowa, spoke for the Child Saving Committee.

The Sunday-school Meeting convened on Sunday morning and the report showed only a slight decrease in attendance, notwithstanding the fact that most of the schools of the District were closed from two to three months on account of influenza.

The Ministerial Meeting, in the afternoon, claimed the largest crowd of any of the meetings. It was estimated that there were nearly 200 autos on Sunday. In the evening Bro. John Heckman, of Illinois, gave the missionary address, which was very practical and helpful. He stressed the missionary and educational activities of the Five-Year Forward Movement. The spirit of the meeting was splendid throughout.

In the District Conference proper, Bro. C. B. Rowe, of Dallas Center, Iowa, was Moderator. The delegates voted to coöperate in assisting to carry out the Five-Year Forward Movement. Bro. D. W. Wise was chosen to represent Middle Iowa on Standing Committee of 1920, and Bro. J. F. Burton as alternate. Frank N. Sargent.

PART OF REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SIMPLE LIFE AND DRESS REFORM

We take courage in the general awakening over the country, voiced in the formal action on dress reform, taken by many organizations, and we plead with our people to seize this opportunity to help in this aggressive movement which, we believe, indicates an early moral victory over this evil.

The response in the "Essay Contest" of a year ago was an agreeable surprise, considering the necessarily short notice of the offer. There were four contestants from the following churches: Elgin, two; Waddams Grove, one; Polo, one. The manuscripts all possessed merit, some showing much thoughtful preparation.

The judges selected by the committee were Bro. O. A. Faekler, Ashton; Sister Eva Lichty Whisler, Milledgeville; and Sister Ella Moore, Lanark. The prize of $5 was awarded to Sister Bertha Sanford, of the Franklin Grove congregation, living for the school year in the Polo congregation.

The committee has decided to offer several prizes for the coming year. They will give $5 for the best, $3 for the second best and $1 for the third best original manuscript on the subject of simple dress.

Before being submitted, the manuscript shall be rendered at the Christian Workers' program of Nov. 30, 1919, and shall have attached (on separate sheet) the name and address of the author, with an endorsement of the pastor or elder of the local church, and must be in the hands of the secretary of the committee not later than Dec. 15, 1919. The contestant shall be not over twenty-five years of age.

We wish to urge parents, ministers, Sunday-school superintendents and teachers to encourage the young people of the various congregations to take advantage of the contest.

Committee: P. R. Keltner, Chairman, Eva Trostle, Secretary, Grace Wolf.

suggestive hints for teachers for each lesson. A Graded Sunday-school Course is being introduced, the first three years of which has been prepared. At the recent meeting of the Gujerat missionaries, Bro. Long was reëlected chairman of the Gujerat Auxiliary of the Indian Sunday School Union.

At Bulsar 59 sat for the written and 68 for the oral. Of the latter 54 passed, 18 of whom received honors and 23 first-class. Their Sunday-schools have 150 on the register, and report an average attendance of 133 for July, and an average offering of Rs. 2-11-8. Jan. 12 there was an attendance of 238, the largest for the year, and the largest offering for the year, thus far, was on June 15, when it was Rs. 8-3-11.

Vada is one of our smaller churches. Their largest attendance for July was 60, and their largest offering was Rs. 3-2. The average was 48, and the average offering was Rs. 1-4. The missionaries have daily prayers with the Christians. The Marathi Sunday-school examination does not occur until the winter season.

The Sunday-school Secretary of Gujerat reports that there was a total of 3,270 who sat in the recent examination, but this is only about half of the number that should have taken it. Of the above number 2,890 passed. He was well pleased with the record of our Sunday-schools, in the number who passed, and those who received honors.

ELIZA ARDINGER LE DANE

Sister Eliza Le Dane was born near Bedington, W. Va., and died at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Sept. 4, 1919, aged seventy-eight years and fifteen days. She married George Le Dane in 1862. To this union were born six daughters and three sons, seven of whom survive. Her husband died in 1895 in Washington, D. C. With the exception of two years, all her married life was spent at Downsville, Md. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1871 in the Manor congregation, Washington County, Md., and lived a most consistent and faithful life.

Eliza Ardingar Le Dane

Her tragic death cast a dark shadow over the Washington City congregation. Sept. 3, in company with her granddaughter, she went to visit her daughter, Mrs. Bentley Moore, at Harpers Ferry, W. Va. The evening was happily spent in the home of her daughter, with the grandchildren. During the night it was discovered that the house was on fire. Sister Le Dane, her daughter, Mrs. Moore, and her little son perished in the same room.

Services were conducted in the home of Brother and Sister J. H. Hollinger by the writer, assisted by Eld. Albert Hollinger, of Gettysburg, Pa.

Seldom has it been my privilege to come into fellowship with one whose life was so great a benediction. When any one was discouraged, she brought sunshine; when any one was troubled she gave cheer and hope. She was a blessing, not only to her pastor but to every one who met her.

She was one of the eight charter members of the Washington City church, and had been keenly interested in the spiritual progress of the church. Criticism never found any place in her thoughts. Her every effort was constructive and uplifting, both in the church and community.

ENTERED INTO REST

Bro. Joseph Cherry, son of Jacob and Anna Elizabeth Cherry, was born August 16, 1844, near Bellwood, Blair Co., Pa. In 1871 he married Jane Douglas. Seven children were born to them, four boys and three girls, all of whom survive.

In his early life he joined the Lutheran church. A few years later Eld. Conrad Imler and wife moved into the community. Interest was aroused and regular services were held in Bro. Imler's barn. This was a mission point of the Warriors Mark church. When Bro. Cherry became acquainted with the Brethren and understood their doctrine he was convicted and was baptized. He remained faithful and always took an active part in all church work. He was a great lover of Sunday-school and served the church as superintendent for a number of years. Bro. Cherry loved the church of his choice and was always ready to encourage every good work for the furtherance of Christ's Kingdom. He was a friend of young people and found great joy in their growth and development.

Joseph Cherry

During his last illness he called for the anointing, which was administered. He bore his affliction patiently. He died August 30, 1919, aged seventy-five years and fourteen days. Services by the home minister at the church at Ridgely. Interment in the Greensboro cemetery.

CALIFORNIA

Bethel.—Oct. 4 we held our first love feast in the home of Brother and Sister Stutsman, with nineteen members present. The next day Bro. Garst gave us a most excellent sermon. After services a dear sister received the anointing, and the following Sunday she testified to a miraculous healing, whereby our faith in a Divine Physician was strengthened. Brother and Sister Stutsman are leaving this week for Chicago.—Mrs. H. J. McDaniel, Chowchilla, Calif., Oct. 16.

Covina.—A very appropriate Promotion Day exercise was given by the different grades of the Sunday-school. The attendance and offering for the day were fine. Oct. 3 the regular council was held. Bro. G. F. Chamberlen resigned the clerkship of the church in July. At this meeting it was decided not to accept his resignation since the year's work closes within about three months. The church exceedingly regrets to lose Bro. Chamberlen, as he has been with this church almost a quarter of a century. Eld. E. S. Young, of Claremont, will begin a Bible Study Oct. 26, to continue one week, closing with a love feast Nov. 2, at 6:30 P. M. Eld. W. E. Trostle's lectures on Revelation, every Thursday evening, are very instructive and interesting. Oct. 5 the Mothers and Daughters' Association reorganized for another year's work, electing Sister Jennie Brubaker president. Bro. Welty Lefever, of La Verne College, preached for us Oct. 12.—Mrs. S. W. Funk, Charter Oak, Calif., Oct. 14.

Inglewood.—The children from the Chinese Mission in Los Angeles, under the direction of Sisters Early and Hilton, gave us a splendid program on Sunday morning, Oct. 12, which was greatly enjoyed. Several members of the Inglewood congregation kindly furnished machines for a means of conveyance. A light lunch was served them before their return to the mission, where they hold their Sunday-school in the afternoon. Oct. 19 our Christian Workers' Society gave a miscellaneous program at the Hermosa Mission, which seemed to be greatly appreciated by the members there.—Susan L. Stoner, Inglewood, Calif., Oct. 20.

Long Beach.—Sunday evening, Oct. 12, we held a very enjoyable love feast, with about seventy communing. Bro. Chamberlen, of Covina, was with us in both morning and evening services. We regret very much the moving away of Bro. Earl Rexroad, as Sister Rexroad was the primary superintendent. Sister Dora Nelson was chosen to take her place.—Blanche L. Frantz, Long Beach, Calif., Oct. 18.

South Los Angeles.—Our quarterly business meeting was held on Friday evening, Sept. 19. Bro. A. B. Crist was elected Sunday-school superintendent. Sister Ethel Smith was chosen superintendent of the primary department. Sunday morning, Sept. 28, was our Rally Day service. Fifteen pupils were promoted from the primary department into the main school. Although the attendance was not what we expected for the day, on account of sickness and rainy weather, a splendid spirit of enthusiasm was manifested, and since then the school has been increasing in attendance. The teachers and officers of the Sunday-school, with several members of our number, spent a very profitable evening in meeting at the pleasant home of Brother and Sister J. W. Cline, Oct. 1. Ways and means were discussed whereby we might bring our school to a higher degree of efficiency for the coming year. On Sunday morning, Oct. 5, Bro. Cline conducted the installation and consecration services of the Sunday-school officers and teachers. Bro. George Hilton occupied our pulpit on the morning of Oct. 12, and delivered an inspiring message. In the evening Bro. N. J. Brubaker gave a splendid discourse on the subject of "Adaptability."—Lena Irene Swank, Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 13.

Washington City.—With the coming of cooler weather and the return of the members from their vacations, the Washington City church enters on its winter schedule. The annual fall council was held Oct. 6. All the business before this session was of a very constructive nature. Matters for the improvement of the internal organization were perfected. Of greatest importance is the action of the church to grant financial support to a student in Blue Ridge College. This was thought to be in keeping with the spirit of the Forward Movement, and to be a good thing to help both the congregation and the college. Rally Day, unfortunately, fell on the Sunday when the recent cold wave, with rain, reached Washington. Notwithstanding the very unpleasant weather, however, a good-sized audience was present both at Sunday-school and at the church services. The date for our autumn love feast is set for Nov. 2, at 6:30 P. M. Since the last report to the "Messenger," two have been baptized. The congregation, also, has kept up the pace set in the first

The teachers and officers of the Sunday-school, with several others of our number, spent a very profitable evening in meeting at the pleasant home of Brother and Sister J. W. Cline, Oct. 1. Sargent, in the interest of Bethany Bible School, for which he collected $1,670; M. W. Emmert, in the interest of Mt. Morris College. August 27 our council convened. Sept. 7 Bro. H. E. In the afternoon we held our annual Sunday-school Meeting, which was well attended. A number of inspiring talks were given along the line of activity, and of doctrinal teaching in the Sunday-school. In the evening of the same day we began a two weeks' series of meetings in the Creek Hill church, conducted by the home ministers. The interest in the meeting was good from the beginning. The members of the church gave their loyal support, and a united effort was put forth. We feel that much good seed has been sown, which will bring forth a harvest in due time. During these meetings seven were received into the church by baptism, and one reclaimed. See our last report four others have been received into the church by baptism. Oct. 18 we held our love feast in the Broadfording church with a crowded house. Nov. 1 we expect to begin a series of meetings in the Broadfording church, to be conducted by Bro. W. H. NORTH CAROLINA Spring Brook.—Sept. 14 Eld. D. M. Sborb, of Surrey, N. C., began a two weeks' series of meetings, which was very interesting. Attendance and interest increased as the meetings continued. Two confessed Christ and the Master's cause was much built up in this place. Spring Brook, in the Ray congregation, is rather isolated. There are a few families of Brethren scattered over this section, but there are other Christian workers with whom we are worshiping. We have an interesting little union Sunday-school of about forty-five. A cottage prayer meetings each Sunday evening. We held our meetings and we also have our Sunday-school in the hall, as there is no church. The Brethren have no regular appointment here. The Methodist people have had charge of the work until now. At present there is no one in charge. We feel that much good may yet be done in this place and hope that some of the Brethren passing this way will stop and preach for us.—Rebecca Myers, Epping, N. Dak., Oct. 20.

OHIO

Ashland (First Church).—On Sunday, Oct. 19, we were made to realize that the peace and good will feeling can abound at other times than during the Christmas season. Following the Sunday-school session a brief but beautiful service was held in recognition of the return of our boys from war service. Bro. Leckrone delivered a short, appropriate address, after which Sister Maud Shelley, assisted by Bro. Walter Leckrone, pinned slips of paper, each one bearing the name of one of the boys in service on the sixteen stars in the service flag. Then, while Sisters Awiller and Kerr sang the doxology, Bro. Walter and Sister Maud slowly furled the flag. It was a most impressive service. Tears fell and prayers were breathed that the occasion might be the last time to require the necessity of any service of the kind—that from henceforth the white flag of peace may wave above the entire earth. Bro. Leckrone followed this with a splendid sermon with a strong discourse on "What Think Ye of Christ?"—Oma Karn, 908 Orange Street, Ashland, Ohio, Oct. 20.

Baltic.—We have just passed through a very interesting and profitable series of meetings, conducted by Bro. W. D. Keller, of Dayton, Ohio. The meetings opened Sept. 21 and closed Oct. 5. Eight precious people were added to the church. The success of the meetings was due, in part, to the inspiring song services, under the direction of Bro. I. H. Bashore, of Canfield, Ohio. We also held our love

STANLEY CHURCH, WISCONSIN

The work at this place has been progressing very nicely. The Sunday-school bas been working hard to reach the one hnndred mark in attendance. We hope to reach that goal in the near future. We have decided to hold our teachers' meetings in the homes during the winter months. We have held them during the past summer in the home of our superintendent. Sister Chas. Guyer is president nf our Christian Workers' Meeting, Brn. Riland Shock having resigned. Mrs. O. W. Henderson.

NETTLE CREEK CHURCH, INDIANA

Having received inspiration for greater missionary work through the messages of Bro. A. D. Helser, who was with us several weeks ago, the missionary committee met and arranged for more definite activities in stirring up missionary spirit in the congregation. We decided to have a program as often as possible and to distribute missionary literature among the members. Later other work will be taken up.

Our first program was rendered at the Olive Branch house Sept. 21, during the series of meetings held by Bro. O. D. Werking. This proved to be a very interesting meeting. At the close a call was made for those who wish to become members of the Volunteer Mission Band, which was started at our recent District Conference. Twenty-two came forward. However, about half these had volunteered at District Conference. From this number a local band was then organized, with the members of the Missionary Committee as officers.

At our council meeting, last Saturday, a young sister, Pearl Jackson, confessed to a call to greater Christian service, and expressed a desire to become a home missionary. She further stated that if the Lord saw fit to call her to the foreign field she would not be unwilling to go. The church then decided to create a fund for the purpose of helping her through school, provided she would agree to give at least five years of her life to mission work.

We have arranged for another missionary program, to be given at the Locust Grove house on Sunday evening, Oct. 19, during the series of meetings to be held there by Bro. B. F. Petry. Perry R. Hoover.

DISTRICT MEETING OF SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI AND NORTHWESTERN ARKANSAS

From Oct. 7-10 we enjoyed one of the most spiritual and successful meetings of the kind ever held in our District. The meetings were held in the Oak Grove church, which is in charge of Eld. A. Killingsworth. He is assisted in the ministry by Bro. A. W. Adkins.

The elders of the District met on Tuesday afternoon and talked over the work and needs of the District. Nearly all of the ministers are elders—most of them getting up in years. One great need of this District is more ministers. A number of the churches have no minister, while the ministers of some of the others are quite old and need the assistance of younger helpers.

The business session was held on Wednesday, and was opened by Eld. J. B. Hylton, the retiring Moderator. Eld. A. Killingsworth was chosen Moderator; Eld. W. R. Argabright, Reading Clerk; Bro. Orin Harvey, Writing Clerk. The churches of the District were represented by thirteen delegates. One very important action was taken when the delegates voted to send a petition to our State representatives in Congress and Senate to use their influence and vote against military training in our public schools. The different local congregations of the District were also urged to send like petitions to our State Representatives.

Bro. L. W. Stong, of Springdale, Ark, was elected a member of our District Mission Board for three years. Eld. D. W. Teeter was selected as our trustee of McPherson College for two years. Eld. P. L. Fike was chosen to represent this District at our next Annual Conference, with Eld. A. Killingsworth, alternate.

Wednesday evening Bro. J. B. Emmert, of India, gave an illustrated talk on India, which was very inspiring.

Thursday was Ministerial Day. Much time was spent in discussing the different phases of the Five-Year Forward Movement, and its application to the world at large and to our own District in particular. The evangelist and his work and field received considerable attention. The needs and problems of our District were presented and many good thoughts given to stimulate the workers.

Wednesday evening the members present met to enjoy a love feast, which was very ably presided over by Bro. J. B. Emmert.

The last day of the meeting was spent in discussing the Sunday-school and missionary work, and was presided over by Bro. A. W. Adkins, our District Sunday-school Secretary. The workers of the District were much interested in having an up-to-date Sunday-school, and desired that our churches become missionary churches, interested and working for the saving of souls.

An offering of over $42 was taken for foreign mission work and $22 for home missions. Seven or eight pledged themselves to support a scholarship in the boarding-schools of India. One was reclaimed during the services. Two of our young people pledged themselves to dedicate their whole time and life to the service of the Master. Then, too, all the parents present were called upon to pledge themselves to dedicate their children to the Master's cause, and quite a number responded.

Bro. J. B. Emmert, of India, Bro. Jas. M. Mohler, of Middle Missouri, and Bro. W. O. Beckner, of McPherson College, were a great help in making the meeting a success.

The number of members in our District is not large, but the workers are much encouraged to go on in the work of building up the Kingdom.

The next District Meeting will be held in the Greenwood house, of the Cabool congregation, Texas County, Mo. The next District Sunday-school Convention, held quarterly, will meet in the Shoal Creek church, Newton County, Mo. F. E. Miller.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF NORTHERN IOWA, MINNESOTA AND SOUTH DAKOTA

The 1919 meetings were held in the Lewiston church Oct. 7-9. The Conference was preceded by three splendid lectures, given by Sister Anna V. Blough. Her coming seemed to pave the way for a more enthusiastic and spiritual meeting. Some of the delegates for the Conference arrived in time to hear Sister Blough's lectures.

The Elders' Meeting was organized Oct. 7, in the forenoon. In the afternoon there were so many present that there was a demand for a service, not planned for by the committee. A very spiritual and helpful hour was spent, with Brethren Glen Montz and I. D. Leatherman in charge.

Tuesday evening the Ladies' Aid Meeting was in charge of Sister Anna B. Landis. The principal address was given by Sister Lydia E. Taylor, of the Dress Reform Committee. She was followed by Sisters D. H. Keller and Ruth Eddy. Following was the Temperance program, presided over by Eld. W. O. Tannreuther. The general topic was: "The Church of the Brethren and the Great Temperance Conflict." Locally, H. H. Wingert; Nationally, W. E. Buntain; Morally, I. D. Leatherman.

Wednesday morning was beautiful and full of promise for a fine day for the District Meeting. Owing to the absence of Eld. A. P. Blough, the Retiring Moderator, Eld. H. H. Wingert acted as Moderator pro tem. The organization as perfected was: Moderator, Eld. J. E. Rolston; Reading Clerk, Eld. D. H. Keller; Writing Clerk, Eld. D. F. Landis.

No papers were sent to Annual Conference. However, there were resolutions passed, to be sent to Congress against Universal Military Training. Eld. W. O. Tannreuther was elected a member of 1920 Standing Committee; Eld. J. E. Rolston, alternate.

Wednesday evening was the Educational Meeting, presided over by the Trustee of Mt. Morris College, Eld. Tannreuther. The principal address was given by Prof. A. J. Brumbaugh on the subject, "The New Day." The Missionary Meeting followed, in charge of the President of the Mission Board, Bro. I. M. Forney. Addresses were given by Sister Anna V. Blough and Bro. A. S. B. Miller. The spirit of the meeting was fine. A collection of $500 was taken for Home Missions.

The meetings on Thursday, both during the day and in the evening, were the best of the whole series. Splendid enthusiasm and interest were manifested. Eld. A. C. Wieand gave his address on "The Forward Movement of the Church" in the Christian Workers' program. The Christian Workers presented plans for acceptance, whereby the churches of the District are grouped into three units, each to hold, before Jan. 1, a conference. Then the whole District is to hold a single conference some time in 1920.

Sister Taylor gave her second lecture during the Child Rescue hour. The work of these speakers, who are specialists, was appreciated very highly by the home folks.

The meetings for 1920 will be held in the Spring Creek church, Northern Iowa. We feel very grateful to our Heavenly Father and to the brethren and sisters of the State District, for the splendid conditions and attendance, which made it possible to have such a helpful series of District Meetings. D. F. Landis.

Lower Conewago.—Bro. G. G. Lehman, of Los Angeles, began a series of revival meetings Sept. 27 at the Hamdian-house, continuing for one week, and closing with our love feast. Bro. Lehman brought to us many rich truths which we believe created a deep interest in the meetings. Five were received into the church by baptism, at the time of our love feast, which was largely attended. Eld. David Kilheffer, of Ephrata, officiated in the evening services. A number of ministers from adjoining congregations were with us and we had a very pleasant feast.—R. D. Cook, Hillsburg, Pa., Oct. 17.

Martinsburg.—Sept. 20 Bro. A. J. Beeghly, of Friedens, Pa., began a series of meetings in the Clover Creek house and continued till Oct. 8. Eighteen were added to the church by baptism and three were reclaimed. We held our love feast Sept. 28 and closed Oct. 5, with about 275 members present. One was baptized at Martinsburg the day before our love feast.—J. H. Crofford, Martinsburg, Pa., Oct. 16.

Meyersdale.—It was decided at our council that there should be preaching services several nights before our love feast. Services began on Wednesday night and continued throughout the week, with the pastor in charge. Sister Mary Mumbaugh had preparatory service, which was largely attended. The sermon was preached by the pastor, Bro. Coffman. In the afternoon three were baptized. The evening service was splendid. At the close of the Sunday-school we took a special collection for Sister Ida Shumaker, our missionary in India.—Mrs. T. R. Coffman, Meyersdale, Pa., Oct. 20.

Midway.—Sept. 14 Bro. Harvey Miller, of Englewood, Ohio, preached for us at the Midway house. Brother and Sister Miller came east to attend the Bible reunion, which was held at Manheim, Sept. 14 and 15, meeting brethren with us were Hiram Gibble, who officiated, S. R. Zug, Wm. Oberholtzer, H. Morrellville.—Sept. 28 our church devoted the entire day to the interests of the Sunday-school. The morning service consisted of a Rally Day program. In the afternoon and evening a local Sunday-school Convention was held. Addresses on various phases of Sunday-school work were ably discussed by some of the workers from neighboring churches. We were also favored by having our field secretary, Bro. Foster Statler, with us. His message was always timely. Oct. 5 our council was held, at which time the officers for the new year were elected. Our elder, Bro. J. F. Ream, was retained for the coming year.—Mrs. C. C. Sollenberger, Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 18.

Moxham church held a family service on Sunday evening, Sept. 21. It was very encouraging to see so many families present. Oct. 5 we observed Rally Day with a splendid attendance—an increase of forty-five per cent over the previous Sunday. The program consisted of special music and a number of short addresses on the theme of "A Gospel Voyage." Promotion certificates were given to the Primary and Junior Departments. Recently three were added to the church by baptism and one by letter. Our communion service was held the evening of the second session of our members being present. Bro. L. B. Pittsburgh.—On Sunday morning, Sept. 21, was our annual Rally Day—quite a memorable event, especially in the minds of the young people. Bro. Worstler set a certain number for the attendance goal—a number far ahead of our average attendance—and in spite of the "it can't be reached" remarks, we reached the goal and, in fact, went over the top. Our attendance has kept up splendidly during the vacation period and subsequently. The work looks very promising and we expect big things this winter. On Tuesday evening, Oct. 6, we had another crowded house, and almost as enthusiastic as before. This was "Community Night," the credit for its success being due the Ladies' Adult Bible Class. The building was decorated to represent the fall season. The address of welcome was given by the pastor, followed by an extremely interesting program of readings and special music. Refreshments were served later. It was a big success. Our fall communion service is announced for Nov. 9, and we would like to see as many of our absent members as can come. It is also expected that Prof. H. K. Ober, President of Elizabethtown College, will give some interesting lectures for several evenings preceding the communion. Further announcements of the dates will be made in a later article.—Nelle Forney, 3878 Burchfield Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 15.

Walnut Grove church, Johnstown congregation, held communion services Oct. 5. We had Rally Day Sept. 28 and Promotion Sunday, Oct. 5. During the summer many of our Sunday-school workers were absent but are now back at their work again. During the vacation time we prepared mission boxes for China and Japan. The children and older ones made rag dolls and scrap books and collected various articles. Oct. 19 the delegates to the State Convention gave very interesting reports. WEST VIRGINIA

Harman.—Sept. 6 Eld. Jonas Fike, of Eglen, W. Va., began a series of meetings, closing Sept. 20. He preached in all eighteen inspiring sermons. On Saturday, at the close of the first week, we held our council meeting, at which time the annual visit was reported. Sister Lena Shears was elected to attend the District Meeting as delegate. Eleven accepted Christ during the meetings. Sept. 20 we had a very spiritual love feast at which about ninety-eight were present. Oct. 1 Bro. Jas. Harman, of Pendleton County, began a week's series of meetings at the Hartman schoolhouse, at Gandy, in which the entire community became greatly aroused. Eight accepted Christ, and many were made better by his efforts. The writer, with several others, had the privilege of attending these meetings.—Nettie Harmao, Harman, W. Va., Oct. 16.

Mount Zion.—Sunday, Oct. 12, the writer was with the members of this congregation in a pleasant and profitable missionary meeting. An all-day session was held and a splendid treat was had. Several visiting members were with us and very ably assisted in the work. We lifted an offering of $22.55 for World-wide Missions. We are working and praying that our District will become aroused to a full sense of her duty along missionary lines.—Verna May Kirk, District Missionary Secretary, Hommond, W. Va., Oct. 15.

The winter months have long been those in which our churches, especially those in the country, have had their revival services. Of course, in this the first year of the Forward Movement, your church is planning some special efforts along this line. We list here some books very helpful on that line.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM

H. Clay Trumbull, former editor of the Sunday School Times, expressed an opinion that many more people were won to Christ through the personal interview than through the power of the sermon. The following books will help you in this line and strengthen those who have done this in the past.

Here many pastors, together with their churches, could be saved the annual and sometimes frantic "S. O. S." calls for an evangelist if they would get and read this little fifty-cent book. It contains a record of the experience of a pastor who proceeded in his work upon the hypothesis that every church has its own evangelist. All the forces of the church were properly coordinated and the pastor was himself leader and evangelist. Experience under the most varied conditions, "with rural churches—with city churches—proved that the hypothesis was in reality a law. Every church may and ought to be its own evangelist. Get the book that will tell you how it is done.

TAKING MEN ALIVE, ... 60c
Charles G. Trumbull.
The principles underlying personal work illustrated by incidents from the life of his father. Cloth.

Many of the books listed above will be of interest to ministers in the general direction of the work. The following bear more particularly on the pastor's work.

Two Despicable Things

It is universally regarded as a despicable thing for the crew of an ocean liner to scamper for the lifeboats, when the ship is in peril, leaving the hapless passengers to the mercy of the waves. So despicable, indeed, that it almost never happens. Women and children first, then the male passengers, then the crew, is the unwritten law.

In one important point, the illustration fails, thank heaven. A Christian does not jeopardize his own safety in the slightest measure by making the safety of others his chief concern. He enhances it. By helping others into the Gospel life-boat, he makes his own presence there the more secure. And the boat is big enough for all. Nobody need be crowded out.

But these facts only make the more astonishing and the more contemptible the smug content of "Christians" who are so glad they are in the ark of safety and so little concerned about what becomes of the rest of humanity. How do you account for it?

There are a number of commandments and Christian virtues which we are fairly well acquainted with. But there is one we do not know much about. We have not found out yet what love means.

What Time Do the Services Begin?

UNFORTUNATE names often foster harmful ideas. Why should we speak of public worship as divine services or church services? And why do we talk about holding services?

A service isn't something you can hold. You must do it. And the opportunities for this at the church on Sunday are very small in comparison with those at other places and on other days. The weekly church services begin early on Monday morning, Dr. Harry E. Fosdick rightly said in a recent sermon. Sunday is a day of preparation for church service.

The Practical Purpos

HAVE you been thinking about that great prophet principle expounded by Jeremiah? Were you caref to notice that it works both ways?

One of the greatest difficulties which confronted t prophets of Israel, in their efforts to lift the nation greater spiritual heights, was its fixed belief in its p destined future glory, regardless of its charact From Abraham down, God had been promising gr things for Israel. Sometimes the conditions w stated. Often they were not. At certain periods the history the glorious picture was partly realized, b never completely. So the nation kept on expecting th the golden age was about to dawn and, with equal p sistence, kept on ignoring the conditions upon wh that golden age was promised.

It was precisely such a situation that called fo Jeremiah's great declaration. Babylon was threat ing Judah with destruction and the prophet was ple ing: "Return ye now every one from his evil w and amend your ways and your doings." But the p ple gave no heed, insisting that Jerusalem was safe, the ground of Jehovah's past promises of protect and blessing. Were they not Jehovah's own peop Jehovah's city and temple could not be destroyed.

By the illustration of the clay in the potter's ha Jeremiah tried to drive the truth home to them. If vessel the potter was trying to make was marred in hands, he made something else out of it, as the cor tion of the clay would permit. So Jehovah would with the house of Israel. The popular theory was t he was bound, by his covenant with Abraham David, to preserve the nation and make it great prosperous. Jeremiah said not necessarily. "If t do that which is evil in my sight, that they obey not voice, then I will repent of the good, wherewith I s I would benefit them."

Both John the Baptist and Jesus had no end trouble of the same kind. "Why, we are Abraha children," the people said. Wasn't that enou Didn't they know the promises to Abraham? W intimate that they might not have part in the com Kingdom? Hadn't they a warranty deed to it, sig and sealed—the original one made out to Abrah "his heirs and assigns forever"? But Jesus was backward about telling them that the family res blance suggested a different ancestry. And John t to direct their minds to Jeremiah's doctrine by say that the stones at their feet offered a more likely p pect than they for true children of Abraham.

Jeremiah's principle does work both ways. It co the whole range of predictive prophecy. When G speaks concerning the future of a people, whether terms of blessing or disaster, the conditional elemen always understood. And the conditional element is human element. God's part is absolutely certain. can be depended on. The promised blessing will su be realized, if—. And the threatened judgment surely follow, if—. And those "ifs" pertain solely what the people concerned do about it. But they

The New Era

Selected by Viola Priser, Sidney, Ind.

When will the clouds of discord cease on earth,
And man receive from heaven his nobler birth?
When all injustice shall have passed away,
And righteousness shall bring the perfect day.

When will the nations cease their wicked strife,
And live a better, sweeter, purer life?
When love divine cements them wise and good,
In one great universal brotherhood.

Then right and truth and justice shall appear,
And faith and hope shall banish doubt and fear;
Then ignorance and sin shall flee from sight,
And wisdom shed its pure, celestial light.

Then love and joy and peace shall fill the soul,
And give mankind a richer, grander goal;
Then man shall know the truth that makes him free
To serve his God and all humanity.

Victory

BY S. Z. SHARP

THE aim of every human effort is to gain the victory. Human life is compared to a battle-field, strewn with conflicts and checkered with victories and defeats. As we enter this life, we face many battles. First there are the diseases incident to infancy, and every child must run the gauntlet of these maladies. It is claimed that one-third of the human race dies before the age of six years is reached.

Next comes the battle for an education. First the language must be learned and many hard words must be pronounced, which sometimes take years to master. When the school-age is reached, then there are hard problems to be solved, and many hard efforts end only in defeat.

Then comes the battle for a living, and the conflict is long and weary. There are so many obstacles to be overcome and in so many forms. In the beginning it was decreed that man must "eat his bread in the sweat of his face." When primitive man tried to subdue the earth and sow his seed, he had to contend with thorns and thistles. Even now the farmer has to contend with insects and even when his best effort is put forth, he is often defeated by hail and storms. In India, when the monsoon fails, often millions die of starvation. In China, when the rivers overflow and the crops are destroyed, millions die for want of food. During the last war millions died from starvation. In our own country, where there is such an abundance of food, there is a constant battle in our large cities, among the poor, for something to eat. The reports of the school commissioners in our large cities show that a large number of children are underfed, their bodies are under size and they lack strength for their studies. Our own missionaries, in our large cities, often make appeals for food and clothing for the poor among whom they work. The present high cost of living has made the situation still more acute, and the conflict is the greater.

There is a constant conflict between capital and labor. During the last few years labor has gained great victories, and threatens to make use of its prestige to gain control even of our Government. In Los Angeles, recently, the railroad employés succeeded in tying up the traffic that no trains could leave the city, nor were any allowed to come in, to bring food, and so the citizens had to suffer. Even recently the various unions of the railroads combined, and threatened to tie up the traffic of the whole United States unless their demands were granted.

In politics there always was, and, probably, always will be, a conflict and a striving for victory. The greatest human conflict that ever happened on earth was waged between aristocracy, militarism and world dominion, on the one hand, and democracy, peace and freedom, on the other. While the conflict cost millions of lives and billions of money, it may be worth all it cost. Aristocracy is forever crushed. There is not a human effort in which victory is not the object.

Man has gained some remarkable victories over the forces of nature. He has caught the lightning, harnessed it, and makes it draw his cars on the railroads, light his cities, carry his messages over the land, and under the sea to foreign lands. He has caught the wind in sails and makes it drive his ship from sea to sea. He has even dared to navigate the air with the swiftness of the eagle. He has scaled the highest mountains and measured the deepest seas. He has dammed up rivers and streams, and made them propel his machinery in factories. He has eliminated the yellow fever from the land and checked the ravages of diseases.

One of the greatest battles to be fought in this life is with self, and a great victory is won when we conquer. "He that subdueth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." No one can succeed in this without help from above. Christ says in John 15: 5: "Without me ye can do nothing." Again, in 1 Cor. 15: 57 we read: "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord." Some say that after they have made themselves better they will lead a Christian life. They forget that without Christ they can do nothing but are like a horse on a treadmill—working hard and getting no farther.

Some start out to lead a Christian life and when they stumble they get discouraged and give up. What would have become of Peter if he had given up when he had denied his Master? There is not one of us that does not stumble sometimes in his life. God means that we should persist in our efforts to rise again. It is said of John B. Gough, who had been a drunken sot and became a great temperance lecturer, that only after his twenty-first trial did he succeed in conquering his evil habit.

The one thing to be remembered, above all things, is, that our victory must come through Jesus Christ. We forget too often that Christ came to this world to give us the victory. He was tempted in all points as we are that "he might succor those that are tempted." Let not those who have been slaves to evil habits think there is no remedy.

"Earth has no sorrows which heaven can not heal."

Our conflict is a double one—it rages both within and without—with the lusts of the flesh and the temptations of the soul. All through our lives we have had our conflicts, but our greatest conflict or our greatest victory will be the last. It is then that the body is weak and often in pain. It is then that the thought of separation from loved ones racks the mind. It is then that life opportunities are seen to be at an end. It is then that a sense of loneliness steals over us, if we do not feel the Savior near. As we stand at the margin of another world, we realize that we must meet God. What seems to be a defeat may be a victory in disguise. The wreck of our earthly house may be the occasion of occupying "a building not made with hands eternal in the heavens."

"The saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer though they die.
They view the triumph from afar
And seize it with their eye."

We dare not attempt to describe the disappointment and anguish of those who have lost their last battle. We may talk of the disappointment of Napoleon and of the Kaiser, but neither tongue nor pen can portray the anguish of a lost soul. Let us turn to a brighter picture and behold the apostle Paul, when he heard the last bugle call and could exclaim: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

Forgive Us Our Sins

BY WARREN SLABAUGH

THERE is no prayer whose need is so insistent as that which implores the forgiveness of our sins. Sin is the only thing that stands between us and God, therefore we need forgiveness of sin most of all. Each time we pray the Lord's Prayer, we voice this petition. Nowhere, it seems to me, is our true condition before God stated so clearly as in 1 John 1: 5 to 2: 2. Unless we look carefully into the text, we may be inclined to think that John's statement is a paradox.

John begins by asserting that God is light and that in him is no darkness at all. God is purity and in him is no sin at all. All accept that, for we would not worship a God whose purity was only relative. But let us see what this involves.

The application of the epistle is, that if we are children of God, we will be like him. If God is light, his children will be light also. Does he not continue in verse 6: "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in the darkness, we lie and do not the truth"? Were we to stop here, we might well conclude that sinless perfection is demanded. But let us go on: "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship with him," and so far that statement is in accord with the conclusion reached in verse 6: "And the blood of Jesus, his Son, is cleansing us from all sin."

John is not writing to people of the world but to Christians. He is not speaking of a past cleansing, at the time of their conversion, but of a present cleansing, while they are walking with him. Emphasizing the need of cleansing from sin, he goes on: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." Herein lies the paradox: "How is it possible, with sins to confess, to walk in the light with God?" John goes on: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful to forgive," etc. That is, God is true to his promise; he has covenanted to forgive our sins. Verse 18 does not refer to another kind of sin, nor sinning at another time. John is using this form of repetition, with a change of tense, to emphasize the fact that the child of God has sin to confess.

I find two extremes of thought in the matter of sanctification and I call them extremes because, to me, neither is right. On the one hand I find people who say: "If you are a child of God you can not sin, because of your conception," and they quote from another part of this same epistle. I met just such a man, some time ago, who frankly told me that I was a child of the devil because I confessed that I found shortcomings and mistakes in my life, which I regarded as sins. He said that for him it was useless to pray the Lord's Prayer, for he did not need it. These people have chosen a few texts and have built up a doctrine and—shall we say?—deluded themselves into believing that they are wholly sanctified. Then, on the other hand, there are those who are honest enough to recognize that their shortcomings are, in the sight of God, sins. They become discouraged and indifferent, and so they drift along without struggling against their weaknesses. They even misinterpret Paul's language in Rom. 7, when he says: "It is no more I that do it but sin that dwelleth in me," excusing themselves for their shortcomings, and so they go on without making any progress in spiritual growth.

But if neither position is right, what is the true ground? First of all we must take into account that man is dealing with God—the human with the divine. "My ways are not your ways, neither are my thoughts your thoughts." Of course, we are only responsible for the things we know. But do we live up to all the light that we have? If we do not, then we sin. That, to me, is the fundamental definition of sin—not necessarily stealing, swearing or the like, but failing to live up to the light. The light that we have is God's law, in our case. Do we live up to our ideals? If we do not, then we are falling short and need forgiveness. How many are they who, when the events of the day are done, review their actions before they close their eyes in sleep, realizing that they have not been all that they would like to have been? It is then that they humbly pray that familiar petition: "Forgive us our sins."

But does that mean we shall drift? No. Can you today look back one year, and realize that you are now winning victories that were then impossible? The ideal which you could not realize then has been won, and you are farther up the grade, but today there are ideals which, at the present moment, you can not reach. Shall not the coming days bring the victory? Is it not the steady progress toward higher ground that John has in mind when he continues with the exhortation: "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye may not sin"? We must not be satisfied to allow any sin to control us, on the plea that it is our besetting sin, but hating it we must grow into power to cast it wholly out of our lives. Neither can we justify ourselves by bringing the law of God down to our level.

God stated so clearly as in 1 John 1: 5 to 2: 2. Unless we look carefully into the text, we may be inclined to think that John's statement is a paradox.

I once heard the story of two men, both Christians. The one had many things to overcome and sometimes yielded to his temptations, even to getting drunk. But never, at any time, did he excuse himself; he exalted the law of God and went down into the dust, a sinner, begging for pardon. The other man was more respectable. But he continually adjusted the law of God to fit his own life. He excused his lack of love on the ground that the person in question was not his neighbor. He justified his crooked business deals by claiming that business has ethics of its own, apart from religion. He maintained his position before God, not by humility and confession, but by dethroning the law of God. The one, by his continual exaltation of God's law gave God opportunity to pour out grace into his life, by which he finally overcame. The other, by his pride and hardening of heart, could not but go deeper into sin.

There is nothing we need so much as forgiveness. Sin is the most terrible thing in the world, for it is the only thing that can stand between us and God. How deeply must we hate it! How closely must we examine our lives for the things that are unworthy the children of God! And though, while we live in this house of flesh, we can not hope to attain to the Divine Standard, we may, step by step, come up to higher ground, and thus allow God to reveal more of his righteousness. And by our daily confession, living under the blood, we may continue blameless in his sight, enjoying his favor, and assured of an abundant entrance into the glory world.

The Lost Bible

BY LEANDER SMITH

THAT is an interesting and instructive narrative, recorded in the Book of Second Chronicles—how in the days of the wicked King of Judah, Manasseh, the Book of God's Law was lost in the rubbish of the temple at Jerusalem. Manasseh had forgotten the pious and devoted life of his father, Hezekiah. He fell under bad influences, and the people were led far from God and his ways. Idolatrous practices became common. All the abominable vices of the heathen nations were practiced by Israel, the chosen people of God. Persecutions came, the Assyrians conquered, and Manasseh was made a captive. The book of God was lost and its commandments were forgotten.

That Book of God had been given for the guidance and safety of Israel. Through idolatry, adultery and worldliness it had been lost and its solemn mandates forgotten.

Sad, sad as is the fact, yet it is tremendously true. Even today, in this fair land of ours, the Bible is lost to many, many lives. The Bible is lost by neglecting it—by not reading it. A home without a Bible is desolate, but a home where there is a Bible that is never opened, is more desolate. And such are common. The Bible is lost to us when we have no sympathy with its purpose. To read the Bible merely for literature, poetry, history, or to justify ourselves or find fault, is to lose it in the deepest sense. The Bible is lost through prejudice, seeking to read into it things to confirm our ever shall. I do not understand it all, but I believe a accept it all. I will read nothing and I will hear not ing that reflects in the least on the Bible. I can n afford to do so. My faith in the Bible is the bulwa of my life. My experiences, all along the way, ha verified its teaching. It has been my stay and comfo My Heavenly Father is its Author. He is deeply a anxiously concerned about me, and he is making things, in providence and grace, to work out for good.

Have you lost the Bible? If so, you can find again. Read it diligently and prayerfully. Believe and obey its teachings! Seek grace that you may brought into sympathy with its purposes and spi Your life will be true, useful and happy, just in p portion as you truly find the Bible and let it rule your life.

The Laborers in the Vineyard, Matt. 20: 1-16

BY P. J. BLOUGH

"Many that are first shall be last, and the last s be first" (Matt. 19: 30).

Not long before the crucifixion, while on his journey to Jerusalem, Jesus spoke this parable to chosen ones.

The householder is God; the market place, world; the vineyard, the church of Jesus Ch throughout the universe. The workers are invitec all hours of the day into spiritual corn fields, wh fields, rice plantations, and vineyards, to render ac service for God.

A parable is a natural event which portrays a sp ual truth, and needs only to correspond as a whole, the central truth it is designed to teach. It need harmonize in all its details.

The disciples' cognizance of the young ruler's conversation with Jesus, prompted Peter's statement inquiry: "Behold we have forsaken all and follo thee; what shall we have therefore" (Matt. 19: 2

While Peter evidently was not filled with a me nary spirit, yet, seemingly, he expected a special ward because of his being one of the first to com Jesus.

Merely the reward, without the commercial would hardly have been a cause for Peter's rebuke, cause Moses looked for the recompense of reward, Christ looked forward to the joy set before him.

Then comes this parable, or sermon, on and foll ing the striking text: "Many that are first shal last, and the last shall be first," to teach that the portant thing is to accept Christ, regardless of w or time, as the extra time, spent in the vineyard balanced by the joys and benefits of the viney What a privilege to be permitted to serve the L three score years and ten!

The first ones agreed to work for a shilling, or a 17 cents per day, which was a full recompense then a day's work—that being plenty to supply any daily needs, and having the purchasing value of a lar of our money.

In our employ for Jesus, wages should not be chief consideration. Love for him and his cause, al should arouse us to active service, knowing that t is a crown laid up for all who love his appearing. mother's love constrains her to toil endlessly for children, without once thinking of wages, yet hop when she is old, to be graciously cared for by them

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of Go eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." We

"I must work the works of him that sent me" are enough for us to recognize our duty.

The parable teaches that every life should be one of service, and that activity should begin in the morning of usefulness. Think of the many who waste in nothingness their thought, their affections, their energies, their activities, their all. "He that would eat the kernel must crack the nut."

Evil thoughts intrude upon an unemployed mind as naturally as worms are generated in a stagnant pool. "An idle brain is the devil's workshop."

An eminent divine preached on the text: "Why stand ye here all day idle?" Next day a lady went to him and said: "Doctor, I want a spade." There are Sunday-school spades, and mission-room spades, and tract-distribution spades, and sick-visitation spades, and soul-saving spades. Who will apply for them?

God hires laborers, not because he needs them or their services, but as some charitable, generous householder keeps poor men at work—in kindness to them, to save them from poverty and starvation, thus paying them to work for themselves.

The devil, by his temptations, is hiring laborers to feed swine. God, by his Gospel, is hiring laborers for his vineyard, to dress it and to keep it and to harvest the products. That is Paradise work. We must make our choice, for hired we must be. "Choose you this day, whom ye will serve" (Joshua 24: 15).

My Lord's Feast

BY A. I. MOW

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

"Behold, I have made ready my dinner: my oxen and my fallings are killed, and all things are ready: come to the marriage feast."

THE table will be spread with a royal menu: Flesh, bread, water, fruit, word, book, Spirit and crown.

Symbolic of life-yielding agencies are the many provisions in this world for our natural sustenance and joys. Christ is the composite of all these propitious factors. Life was the supreme problem of God. He went to the last possible limit to induce man to receive it. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." Jesus was equally committed to the same purpose: "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." "In him was life." "I am the life."

The LIFE is the nutriment in

1. His Flesh.

"The bread which I will give is my flesh, for the life of the world."

"Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have not life in yourselves."

"He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood abideth in me, and I in him. As the living Father sent me, and I live because of the Father; so he that eateth me, he also shall live because of me."

2. The Bread of Life.

"I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall not hunger."

"My Father giveth you the true bread out of heaven. The bread of God is that which cometh down out of heaven, and giveth life unto the world."

"I am the living bread which came down out of heaven: if any man shall eat of this bread, he shall live forever."

"This is the bread which came down out of heaven: not as the fathers ate, and died; he that eateth this bread shall live forever."

"They said therefore unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread."

3. The Water of Life.

"If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water."

"Every one that drinketh of this water shall thirst again: but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life."

"If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink."

"Whence hast thou living water?"

"He that believeth on me as the scripture hath said, from within him shall flow rivers of living water."

"Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come all the way hither to draw."

"He showed me a river of water of life, bright as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."

"He that is athirst, let him come: he that will, let him take of the water of life freely."

"I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely."

4. Fruit of the Tree of Life.

"Out of the ground made Jehovah to grow . . . the tree of life."

"Hear what the Spirit says: . . . I will give to him that overcometh to eat of the tree of life which is in the Paradise of God."

"On this side of the river [of the water of life] and on that was the tree of life, bearing twelve manner of fruits, yielding its fruit every month."

"Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to come to the tree of life."

Many a royal feast was made with the spirit and purpose of taking the life of some unsuspecting victim. This feast is made for the spirit and purpose of contributing and sustaining life abundantly to all who come.

5. The Spirit of Life.

The Spirit of life in Christ Jesus makes every guest free from the law of sin and death. It is the Spirit that giveth life.

6. The Word of Life.

At this feast the toasts will be offered to Jesus the Lamb of God, who gave himself that all might live. And the conversation will be made up of the Word of Life.

7. The Book of Life.

All the guests will be registered in the Book of Life. "He that overcometh shall thus be arrayed in white garments; and I will in no wise blot his name out of the book of life, and I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels."

8. The Crown of Life.

Every guest will be given a crown of life.

"They that run in a race run all, but one receiveth a prize. Even so run that ye may attain. Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things. Now they do it to receive a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible."

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he hath been approved, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him."

I am sure that every reader will rejoice to attend this feast, for in its every feature it contributes to that life which all so much crave.

"John" Is Dead

BY I. N. H. BEAHM

THE funeral of John Barleycorn was held recently in the National Business College. I was present. The uniqueness and impressiveness of the occasion were such that I am prompted to send a very brief description to MESSENGER readers.

The Eighteenth Amendment to the American Constitution is short; but it took a long time to write it. A great many factors have made up the possibility of such a statute product. The temperance forces have worked long and patiently. It is claimed by some of our own people, along the line of church decisions, that we can not legislate folks into better ethics; but proper legislation is very wise and helpful, as a means to worthy ends—therefore the Eighteenth Amendment. The passing of John Barleycorn from the American stage of action is epochal.

Now, as to the funeral, arrangements and announcements had been duly made. The program was uniquely staged. Its execution was pronounced a success.

By request, the deceased had a beer barrel as a casket, which was fittingly decorated. The minister officiating announced that Mr. Barleycorn, the deceased, comes from a long ancestral line and of a very distinguished family. He was the fourth son of Noah, and had lived 3,926 years, 4 months and 16 days (?).

As the audience assembled that day, they were paying tribute to one of the most unique and most wonderful characters on the face of the earth. He has been known by various classic names, as King Alcohol, Bacchus, the god of wine, and Dionysus, the god of wine and of the drama.

At the Baalbec Temple, in Syria, the Roman Eagle was dedicated to his glory and liberty. In Greece, he was the master of joy and action; therefore, he became the father of the drama and theater. He has flourished in all the great cities of the world and has had a controlling influence over kings and princes, potentates and politicians. He was honored with a seat in the White House and a prominent place in our National Capitol. He has been very religious, and claimed membership in many of the most important organizations of Christendom.

His sway and sweep in the social circles was acknowledged throughout civilization. As a manufacturer, he stands practically at the head. He drafted armies and marched them into eternity in majestic form. He really manufactured his armies. He manufactured drunkards. He manufactured miserable homes, untimely deaths, sorrowing wives, broken-hearted mothers, wayward children, alms-houses, and did a marvelous part in populating prisons and penitentiaries. He was able to convert many people from human beings into beer-kegs, beer barrels, and bloated wrecks. Truly, the deceased was a "mighty man" among "the children of men."

The deceased leaves a large family and many relatives to mourn his departure. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Moonshine Barleycorn, Bootleg Barleycorn, Sport Barleycorn, and Gambler Barleycorn. These sons of his were duly placarded. Among the mourners were Gen. Crimes and his wife, a stately old fellow, old Mr. Brewer and his wife, Mr. Saloon and his wife, and a host of others. All these children, relatives, and friends were greatly affected by the departure of the distinguished deceased.

The Temperance Forces—the Christian Home, Vital Christianity, Old-time Prohibition Party, Salvation Army, W. C. T. U., and Anti-Saloon League—were duly represented by individuals and placarded. The speaker denounced them in strong terms as the real enemies of John Barleycorn. If they had not been so persistent and revengeful, John "had not died"; but he would be living today in splendor and glory. The preacher adjured them that they would have to give account for this marvelous deed in the day of judgment.

Just then the service was interrupted by an inrushing messenger with a telegram, which was handed to the speaker, and which so affected him, as the pastor, that he fainted. Several others fainted. Doctors and nurses were very busy. All this commotion, mingled with the moans and groans of this occasion, tended to make the situation very intense. On restoration of order and the persons, the speaker read the telegram, which follows:

To My Pastor:
Roanoke, Va., U. S. A.

My dear and honored Sir:

Just heard over wireless you're preaching my funeral today.

I'm surrounded by drinkers and drunkards, by the doomed and damned. Mercury stands at 375 degrees F. in the shade. The earthly cry of widows, the shrieks of broken-hearted mothers, rasp my ears with misery. Heaven frowns on me. God mocks at my calamity. A great army of drunkards is in mutiny against me. Beelzebub points the iron and fateful finger of scorn. All Pandemonium is in arms against me. Agony, misery, terror, infill and envelop me. The dagger of justice is thrust into my "heart of hearts." This punishment is absolutely indescribable, undismissable, and unbearable. Warn my boys! Warn my brothers! Warn all my relatives! My

o My Pastor:
Roanoke, Va., U. S. A.
My dear and honored Sir:

eyes are opened. Preach the gospel of Dives and Lazarus.

Yours in eternal lamentation,
John Barleycorn.

This message turned the tide of the occasion. The speaker accepted the wire as a statement of the facts in the case. He turned with tremulous voice and moistened eye in a storm of warning and exhortation, and appealed in dramatic style to the distinguished friends and relatives of the deceased. The sons, Sport, Gambler, Moonshine, and Bootleg, were especially appealed to in tender, terrific tone; then, in graphic manner, the preacher, impersonating John Barleycorn in the lower region, looking afar off, saw the good Temperance Abraham. He then impersonated Father Abraham looking down on John Barleycorn and giving him the real facts of the case; whereupon "John" sent up another fruitless wail that Temperance might go and thoroughly warn his "five brethren" in England, France, Germany, etc.

The climax of the occasion was a general "boost" for temperance, not only in nation-wide form, but also in world-wide form, and even going so far as to show that hell itself is opposed to such liquid fire and distilled damnation as alcoholism.

The "water wagon" is the thing here. Water is the cry of the lost in hell. In heaven, the River of Life flows from beneath the throne of God. Water is King. "Whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely."

The procession then marched with solemn tread to put "John" away in Potter's Field.

The Eighteenth Amendment is the big gun that killed "John." Righteous public sentiment strongly developed will kill any evil.

The real "tug of war" is not in the "home stretch," nor in simply going "over the top"; but in the early creation of public sentiment. The main point is to be allied with righteousness. All evil will be overcome. The devil will be chained. Righteousness will become triumphant and universal. "John is dead."

Better Christians

Studies of the Bible by Rev. K. Lewis Jonsson, Translated by J. F. Graybill

FIRST INSTALLMENT

Introduction

This little booklet on why we should become "Better Christians" and how to accomplish this end, is the work of a priest of a Swedish State Church. He differed from his contemporaries. He was a man who took more than ordinary interest in the poor of his parish and thereby won their hearts. This man, although one of the royal court priests, was known in his parish as "The Poor Man's Priest." With this class he felt most at home. This is not common among the priesthood. He is the author of several small works of a high spiritual type.

Because of the blessing that this little book has been to me, and the great need of all Christian people, to attain to a higher plane of Christian living, to become better Christians and thereby to be equipped for greater usefulness to the Master, I desire to pass it along, accompanied by the prayer that it may accomplish a good work. —Translator.

PART I

Why We Should Be Better Christians

THIS subject, "Better Christians," may arouse different thoughts in our minds. Some may possibly think that the subject is misleading. A Christian, too often, does not grow better, but rather worse. A Christian should, however, live his life by grace, so that, when his life's journey is ended, the following inscription may be carved on his tombstone:

"I have lived by grace.
I have died by grace,
I shall by the grace of God

Which of the above two is right? Both, in a cert sense. The first one thinks of righteousness by fa in Jesus Christ alone. And we must not begin th studies in the Bible, without raising this banner of profession high. A Christian believer's religion is n and till the hour of death will remain that of the p sinner—the religion that knows no other refuge t the foot of the cross, and which has no other garm to hide its nakedness, before a righteous God, than shining robe provided by the atonement of Calvary

Another thought on righteousness is, that a Chris is transformed by grace until he stands in the imag Christ before the throne of God—that a Christi walk—all the way from the strait and narrow gat conversion to the pearly ports of the heavenly Jer lem, is by grace through faith.

As we consider this subject: "Better. Christia we will naturally understand it to apply to a Christi walk in holiness. Why should we, in all since meditate on this subject? For two reasons: In first place, there are so many Christians who are sirous for the deeper things of God only after have gained a certain degree of holiness. Then, ag the God of the universe is turning a new page in tory, and we are about to enter a new period. At ushering in of such a change the people of God re a stronger call from high heaven to a holier life. you ever noticed, in the Old Testament, that Israel stood at the threshold of a new period, how Lord, time and again, called his people to greater uess? When Israel was about to cross the Jordan, paratory to entering the land of Canaan, the comm came to the people: "Sanctify yourselves" (J 3: 5). May we not hear the same voice of God t people at the present time?

"Be ye filled with Spirit"—these words in 5: 18 might well serve as a head-line and motto, f them we find what is required to be better Christ This command is as sound as the one following it.

But in order to be filled with the Spirit, the must first empty our hearts of self. What mus done if a glass of water is to be filled with milk? we must empty the glass of the water, and after fill it with milk.

The Lord must first empty our hearts and de our desires for holiness. Because of this let us consider some reasons why we, as Christians, sh desire to be better Christians.

1. For Jesus' Sake

If one asks a Christian, why he desires to be a b Christian, his first answer often is: "In order to greater blessing to mankind." This is good, b should not be the first and highest motive in a C tian's desire for more holiness. The first motive sh be for Jesus' sake.

A Christian can not meditate on the cross of Cal without a renewed desire of being a better Chris and to live in closer fellowship with him. Med upon this thought, and the Spirit of God will mak cross more vivid to you, and point you to the One gave up his life for you.

As you stand at the foot of the cross, you will t your Blessed Master for the blood that has atone your sins. Without the salvation that God won b cross, you can not be at perfect ease one mome now or in the time to come. But can you meditat this without a longing desire to become a better C tian, honoring him who gave his life for you?

There are two expressions from the history of C Zinzendorf—closely related to each other—that swer this question. The one came as a question the crucified Son of God, while the young Count,

THE ROUND TABLE

Be Filled With the Spirit

BY EZRA FLORY

It is a mistake to think that spirituality is necessarily demonstrative. "The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation" (Luke 17: 20), that is, with parade and demonstration. The important injunction of Eph. 5: 18 means literally fill yourselves in with the Spirit. That is, drink deeply in the Spirit. Few Christians realize their privilege in this matter of the infilling of the Spirit. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his" (Rom. 8: 9). Think how we have emphasized other supposed marks of a Christian and at the same time neglected this fundamental injunction of Paul. Spinoza was called the "God-intoxicated man"; but he was only a philosopher. Much more may the ordinary Christian be filled with the Spirit of God. But this excess of the Spirit should not result in unseemly riot, "for God is not a God of confusion" (1 Cor. 14: 33). The fruit of the Spirit is not necessarily in bodily exercises, in noises, in extravagances, in any kind of disorderly ways; but it is "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control" (Gal. 5: 22, 23). Here, in Ephesians, Paul is careful to tell us how the filling with the Spirit will be manifested, "speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord; giving thanks always for all things . . . subjecting yourselves one to another in the fear of Christ" (Eph. 5: 19-21).

The Spirit-filled life will be sane and wholesome and well-balanced, and, more than all, it will have quiet restfulness, a deep, unexplored source of strength and poise, an inward melody and gratitude of heart that will do more to convince the world than mere outward demonstration. "Make melody with your heart to the Lord" may be read, "Playing instruments in your heart to the Lord."

Our Own Light

BY G. W. TUTTLE

When the lure of the trout-fishing is upon me I take the trail in the noon o' the night for the distant canyon, where the foaming pools and the wary trout, alike seem to call with insistent voices to me.

But I carry my own light for the trail. I have no desire to follow the light of some brother angler, to be dependent upon either his gait or his whims. The light that I carry shines about my pathway, it illumines the rocks which would otherwise be stumbling blocks for my unwary feet. It shows me the smooth, inviting, narrow trail that leads through the intricacies of the canyon—I follow my own light, not the light of another.

Is not this a parable of life? Will not the Master give to every man his light, as well as to every man his work? Will he, who is the Great Light, not set our lesser lamps aright? When darkness fell like a pall upon the Egyptians, there was light in the dwellings of the Israelites. Jesus Christ fills the life and soul of the believer with light, even if darkness be thick about him.

Does a man run his auto by the light of his neighbor's machine? To every auto its own light suffices, lest the light of another auto blind the eyes and invite disaster. To every life is given its light—its Christ-given light. Is not a man worth more than an auto? Can he not have the indwelling light that shall illumine the straight and narrow trail that leads, first to the highway of usefulness, then to the pleasant fields of heaven?

Listen to the words of the Master: "I am the light of the world." Has not the glory of heaven shone down upon earth? Has not light arisen in darkness? How terrible these words: "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."

He who would borrow his neighbor's light will soon discover that it is unfitted for him, and both feet will soon be fast in the mire. A man must go to the Source of light for light—to Jesus Christ alone. As the oculist fits the individual to glasses, so does Jesus Christ fit his light to our individual lives and needs. The Master deals with individuals. He sets the lamps alight in every life separately. It is as though there were only one man in the universe. The Great Physician gives individual treatment. The Great Light-Giver lights our lamp one at a time.

"Dead Flies"

BY A. E. HECKER

What are your first thoughts when you find a dead fly? Do you know that the Bible speaks of dead flies? The "Preacher," in the tenth chapter of Ecclesiastes, makes a very significant statement and one which we all can verify. The fly is a little thing and its body does not weigh very much. The little ant can easily handle it, even pulling it straight up the side of the window-sill or the basement wall. We all know what ointments and perfumes are, and that they are a most costly luxury. We know that they can be obtained at the drug-store. Similar to these were the circumstances in the Preacher's time. They called forth an apt comparison when he said: "Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour; so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honor."

Do you know some person who has lived a good, honest life and enjoyed the confidence of his neighbors and the public at large, who, in an unguarded moment, did something that caused his neighbors to lose faith in him? Have you known some young person who was full of promise and whose advantages were of the best, to disgrace his or her parents by some foolish act or deed? Just as the dead fly caused the costly ointment to change from the sweet delightful scents to the putrid odor, so does the little unguarded, careless, and foolish act cause a person to lose a splendid reputation and character. With the ointment it is thrown away and forgotten. With a reputation and character it is different. A man can not drop out of the world. He may go to foreign countries, but the tongues of gossip will follow him. Even though he does take an assumed name and go to a strange land, his memory still lingers with those who knew him. We need only mention the name of Benedict Arnold.

Christians hold themselves as being possessed of wisdom and honor, and point to their examples and works as being worthy of emulation. The reputation of a Christian is worth far more than costly ointment, and can not be thrown away as the ointment can. It is not the gross crimes that the preacher is speaking of, but the "little follies." Watch out for the dead flies of inconsideration for others' rights, little white (?) lies, insinuating words, carping criticisms, dirty little tricks, vile stories, irritableness, anger, spite, grudges, petty jealousies, and maybe you can name a score of others. Perhaps you will find them right in your own home. You are almost sure to find them in your church membership. These are the dead flies in the lives and actions of Christians that, to the unconverted world, send forth the stinking savors.

A Morning Prayer

BY FAY ALDENE GRAY

With the hosts of nature's worshipers in this early hour, we bring our gifts of adoring praise. Almighty Father and Sovereign God, thou art love, so only loving-kindness can come from thee. From eternity to eternity thy care for us is infinite and tender. Thine is the watchfulness of all the mother-love of the ages—yea, more alert, protective, wise than the tenderest mother's solicitude. Thine eye, which never sleeps, is clear as the morning, all-searching as the noonday sun, and lovely as the stars of night.

Therefore we can trust thee with our future as we do this present moment. Tomorrow will hold no fear or foreboding for us, because thou art the same unchangeable Friend—sufficient for every day of ours.

Lead us out of the mists of doubt into the sunlit heights of faith! Give us a clear vision of opportunities of service! May we give the kind word, the helping hand, the uplift of encouragement, and be true representatives of Jesus in the busy round of duties today, always showing a morning face to our fellow-workers!

May the Holy Spirit direct each thought and purpose to the Father's glory! Give us strength for the work assigned us, and a heart in love with our work! Make us vessels of blessing to others, willing to reach down to the lowest of souls to lift them from the darkness of defilement into the whiteness of purity, even as Christ Jesus reached down from heaven to lift us up to thee! May our living prove that we have learned loving and saving from our Great Teacher! And may thy will, our Father, be our aim of conduct, thy fulness of grace our praise, thy glory our joy! And so abiding, our new enthusiasm of reconstruction shall be directed into right channels, that thy Kingdom may be advanced in righteousness and truth, and thy church perfected for the second coming of our Redeemer King. Thine be all the honor and glory forever and ever! Amen.

Tributes to the Memory of Steven P. Berkebile by His Fellow-Missionaries

1. By D. J. Lichty

In our journey through life, there are a few men, whom to have known and to be associated with, in a life of service, proves a continual benediction and inspiration to us, even after they are gone. Such was our dear Brother Berkebile. He was a Christian, earnest, joyful and true; a friend, radiating geniality and sunshine; a loving father and considerate husband; a missionary of the noblest type and an exemplar of patient suffering. For such an one to die and be with Christ, is personal gain, but it is our loss. Let us, with his loved ones, cherish the memory of this good man and be the better prepared to serve the Master of us all!

2. By J. M. Blough

Bro. Berkebile has passed from our vision, but a sacred memory abides with us still. He left our India mission field over nine years ago, yet he lives in the hearts of men in India today. One of our workers in the Dangs, last year, frequently referred to Bro. Berkebile in such a loving and respectful way. He had lived with him and he will never forget Bro. Berkebile's kindness and spirituality. Our dear Bro. La Personne, at Bulsar, often spoke to us about Bro. Berkebile. His testimony is that Bro. Berkebile was a good man and an able preacher, for he knew his Lord and was filled with the Spirit. How the missionaries rejoice when their fellow-workers are so highly appreciated by others! And is this not also the worker in whom Christ takes delight?

We remember well the glorious Christmas time in 1909. After spending some time in the mountains, in order to recover from a severe sickness of typhoid fever, Bro. Berkebile was returning home and stopped with us at Bulsar, to spend Christmas. His family was with him. What a joyful time it was! He seemed well; he had regained his weight and the color of health was in his face. We were hopeful. But he was not at home long until he began to weaken and to have pain. There was something wrong. It was my privilege to go with him to consult the physicians, and it was found that he had the beginning of tuberculosis. That being the case he was urged to return to America at once, in the hope of relief. Passage was secured and soon he and his family were on their way to America.

I tell this incident for a purpose. Bro. Steven was indeed a good man, and in such testing times, like the one I have mentioned, the goodness of a man has an opportunity to show itself. He did not chafe under the disappointment; he did not complain; but quietly submitted the whole case into the Kind Father's hands, saying, "Thy will be done." If there is anything hard for a missionary, it is to be compelled to give up the work to which he has devoted his life. To be able to do this with whole-hearted submission, shows the real character of a consecrated man. He kept cheerful through it all, though the prospect ahead was not very bright. And during all these years of suffering and gradual weakening of the body, there was this same victorious life of faith, courage, patience and cheerfulness. His spirit grew stronger as his body grew weaker.

He was not only a good man, but also a good worker. He had a passion for souls, which led him and his wife to choose to live right in the midst of the town of Vada, with very incongenial neighbors and under unsanitary conditions. They loved the people, and the people soon found it out. He was earnest and devoted in his work, changeable Friend—sufficient for every day of ours.

Lead us out of the mists of doubt into the sunlit heights of faith! Give us a clear vision of opportunities of service! May we give the kind word, the helping hand, the uplift of encouragement, and be true representatives of Jesus in the busy round of duties today, always showing a morning face to our fellow-workers!

Into all of his work he put the kind, considerate spirit which won for him so many friends among non-Christians as well as Christians. As a missionary among missionaries, he was just simply lovable. As a preacher of the Gospel he was unique. We all enjoyed to hear him. His was a simple but an earnest and victorious faith. He exalted Christ not only by word but also by life. Being so humble and even-tempered, made his work so acceptable and influential.

Yes, indeed, we miss him. Such missionaries are greatly missed, but we praise God for the sacred memory which we have of dear Bro. Steven, to help us along the way.

In the short time our dear Brother Berkebile was on the mission field, he made a quiet but profound impression for good upon the native peoples about him. Many of them, after his nine years' absence, remember him with pleasure, and speak of him with love and respect. The news of his passing away will sadden the hearts of his many Indian friends. Steven's happy, joyous, trustful, loving and helpful disposition was ever an inspiration and help to his fellow-missionaries. Early in his career he got a good grasp of the situation on the field, and proved himself a valuable and constructive worker. The mission in India has hardly yet recovered fully from the loss sustained by his untimely departure from the field. We long hoped that he might return to us.

One Sunday he preached for us at Bulsar on the text, "There is in this city man of God." As he unfolded his message I could not but think that he himself was such a man. My thought of him in this has never changed. Certainly we are better for Steven's having lived, and I shall ever be thankful that I was permitted to know him, and to be counted as one of his friends.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

CONFERENCE OF MIDDLE IOWA

The District Meeting of Middle Iowa, with its associate gatherings, was held in the Panther Creek church Oct. 11-13. It was the consensus of opinion that this was one of the best, if not the best gathering of its kind our District has ever held. The weather and roads were ideal, and our people made good use of their automobiles in bringing the people to the meeting. Almost the entire membership of several adjoining congregations were present. Over 175 autos were counted on Sunday, and about 700 people were served at dinner. This was our first experience in holding these meetings over Sunday. The change proved very acceptable, as it gave more of our young people an opportunity of attending.

We were favored in having with us Elders John Heckman, H. C. N. Coffman, H. D. Brower and Frank Sargent, also Bro. Orlo Messamer and Bro. L. A. Walker, who formerly were in our District. These brethren assisted in the various programs, and their services and presence were greatly appreciated.

The Elders' Conference was held in the afternoon, Oct. 11. About eighteen elders of the District were present. The first program of the Ladies' Aid Society was held at the same time. The Society was formally recognized by this Conference and granted an equal place in the future on our programs.

In the evening Bro. N. E. Baker, of Des Moines, gave a splendid temperance address. Bro. J. Q. Goughnour gave a short but interesting account of the Child Rescue work of our District and reports this work in a flourishing condition. The Home, located at Ankeny, is one of which we can well be proud and in which we should feel an interest by giving towards its support.

The forenoon session on Sunday was devoted to the Sunday-school work, with Bro. Wm. Cordis, Moderator, and Sister Ella Lehman, Secretary. Sister Zona Ott gave an interesting paper on our part in the organization of new schools and of leading every scholar to Christ. Bro. J. Q. Goughnour spoke on how we may rally our Sunday-schools to inspiratory giving in meeting the call for our part of the $40,000 for missions. Bro. J. F. Burton gave an interesting address on the Sunday-school's part in the missionary goal of the Forward Movement. Bro. Orlo Messamer gave a short report of conditions as he found them in his recent visit among our Sundayclination and Environment or Lack of Teaching by t Ministry?" Bro. J. D. Brower gave a short talk "Our Discouragements and Encouragements."

Bro. I. W. Brubaker was Acting Moderator of the M sionary Meeting, which convened in the evening. B John Heckman gave a splendid address along the l of the Forward Movement in our church. The Mo erator's appeal at the close was not directed so much the raising of funds as to the calling out of volunte While no one responded, we feel that the appeal has been given in vain. The offering for the evening, toget with what was given the day following, totaled $2,002 This will be divided equally between Child Rescue District Mission work.

A male octette from the Coon River church, as well a chorus from Des Moines Valley congregation, rende interesting numbers on the day's program.

The District Conference proper convened on Mond Eld. C. B. Rowe was chosen Moderator, Eld. J. F. Burt Reading Clerk, and W. H. Royer, Writing Clerk. Twe five delegates were present, representing the seven churches. Two churches had no delegates present. various reports from committees showed creditable g over previous years. The District Mission Board appointed as a committee to arrange a suitable lect course for churches desiring the same. Eld. D. W. W was chosen delegate to Annual Conference, with Eld. J Burton, alternate.

The members of the Panther Creek congrega showed their unbounded hospitality in entertaining meeting. May the Heavenly Father abundantly b them for their acts of love and service. We trust that benediction may rest upon all that was done and that District, with larger visions, may press forward to gre usefulness in his cause. W. H. Roy

DOUGLAS PARK MISSION, CHICAGO

Summer days have been busy ones for the mission. the absence of our pastor, Bro. O. E. Messamer, we faithfully served by Bro. I. J. Gibson. Two have added by baptism and two more are awaiting the initia rite.

The fresh-air vacation has been one of our richest periences. About one hundred and two children thirteen women enjoyed this privilege the past sea To some of the mothers it meant the first glimpse o country; to most of them their first experience of C tian homes; to all it has been an unmistakable demon tion of the Gospel as a worth-while power in the of men and women. This generous hospitality of brethren and sisters has been splendid.

With the opening of the fall quarter, our pastor' turn, and a new corps of helpers enlisted, we are lau ing a larger program of service. Among the added tures are: Night school for teaching English, a rea room, an organized adult Bible class at 7 P. M., and ior Christian Workers' Meetings on Sunday after We also plan for week-day sessions of Bible school, opened as soon as arrangements can be made. Bible classes, Gospel team visitation, reading for blind, Christian nurture classes, industrial classes, teacher-training have established themselves as perma phases of our work.

Nor are we forgetful that, with the approach of ter's cold, many are needing help in material things. tinually we find children who are undernourished. can not be sufficiently clad to attend school and Sun school. Bro. H. C. Early has been devoting some time, recently, to evangelistic work. When last heard from he was engaged in a meeting, much hindered by the almost incessant rain, at Woodbury, Pa. He was expecting to turn homeward shortly, in anticipation of the meetings to be conducted in his home church, Mill Creek, Va., by President Otho Winger, of Manchester College, assisted by Sister Winger. The meetings are to begin the coming Sunday, Nov. 9.

Bro. John Culler, of Louisville, Ohio, writes us concerning the distressing physical condition of his wife, mother of our Relief Worker in the Near East, Bro. A. J. Culler. She is partially paralyzed and after spending eleven weeks at the University Hospital, Columbus, Ohio, her sufferings seem rather to increase. She earnestly craves the prayers of the church in her behalf. And while desiring relief from her great physical suffering, if this be the Father's will, she is especially concerned that, in the event of her continued affliction, her mind may be kept clear. Remember Sister Culler at the Throne of Grace.

Bro. Jesse B. Emmert, who has been visiting some of the churches of the West recently, stopped off at Elgin last week for a conference with the Secretary of the Board. It was only a few days before this that we had at last succeeded in getting in touch with him by mail. We mention this merely by way of explaining the delay in publishing the tributes to the memory of our lamented Bro. Berkebile, which appear in this issue. These brief tributes from three missionaries who labored with him on the field, will be appreciated, notwithstanding this delay, for which, of course, Bro. Emmert is in no wise responsible.

MISCELLANEOUS

Notice.—The Trustees of the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home of Middle Indiana are in need of a manager, and correspondence, to the end of securing a suitable brother for the place, is solicited. The name and address of an elder should be given as reference.—By Order of the Board of Trustees. Ezra Musselman, Secretary, Mexico, Ind.

Several of the wide-awake Christian Workers' Meetings in the Middle West have greatly added to the interest of their gatherings by having frequent joint meetings with near by organizations. In these days of automobiles, the plan is entirely feasible. In that way a spirit of congenial fellowship is engendered, of the highest value to all concerned, and undoubtedly there is an enhancement of interest, not attainable in any other way.

The District Mission Board of Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado asked for $10,000, at the recent Conference of the above-named District, for the successful carrying on of its missionary activities. Their request was enthusiastically granted, which shows that the Forward Movement spirit has a firm grip on the hearts of the people in that District.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

An Apt Illustration.—The pastor of a church in the Southwest, gives this most appropriate illustration of the "Ladder of Church Success": The ladder rests on the Word of God and reaches to the Crown of Victory. Its two supports are named "Faith" and "Prayer," respectively. Its seven rounds are these: Listen, Love, Learn, Decide, Obey, Serve and Persevere.

The Day of Larger Giving.—The Bystander was pleased to note, in a recent report, that one of our active western churches raised $320 for home missions at its Harvest Meeting. Only a few years ago so large an offering would have been considered quite creditable even for a District gathering. But we are now living in a day of more liberal giving. The vision of a greater world-need insists upon offerings to correspond.

Judging by recent references to Bible characters, by writers for the daily papers, there is a lamentable degree of ignorance as to Scriptural facts. In describing the rendition of a photo-play, "Joseph and His Brethren," the reporter speaks of "Potiphar" as "Pharaoh's wife." Another newspaper man glowingly speaks of "Moses and his companions" as "not defiling themselves with the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank." Their Sunday-school training must have been sadly neglected.

Well Spoken.—Possibly not all of us may agree with some of the utterances of Vice-President Marshall, but we can surely give cordial assent to his terse summation of the labor situation at the present time: "What the economic life of America needs today, is not a law-giver but an evangelist." He frankly avers that employers and employés "must learn to love each other; otherwise the situation is hopeless." Mr. Marshall is wise enough to know that such a spirit can not be infused into men's hearts by legislation. It must come from above.

The Sunday Evening Service.—In many of the city churches everywhere it has become exceedingly difficult to secure even a moderate attendance at the evening services on the Lord's Day. In consequence, some pastors have simply dropped out that service, while others have substituted programs of various sorts—lectures, concerts and the like. At one of the recent large Methodist Conferences, however, the folly of dropping out the Sunday evening preaching service was sharply criticised. Greater consecration of the membership was urged, to restore that service to its old-time power and influence in the community.

Social Reform.—According to a venerable truism, "man never is, but always to be, blest" and so the political agitators are all the while pointing forward to better days ahead, when this or that social inequality has been adjusted by remedial measures of some sort. Social reform is discussed more generally today than ever before, and never, perhaps, was the need of it more fully recognized. But how is it to be accomplished? Some say it matters not how it is brought about—get it at all hazards. Profiting by the lesson that is clearly taught in the annals of history, woe betides both church and society if social reform is attempted by the means of revolution, and not through religion and the principles it nurtures.

A Commendable Plan.—In conversation with a member of a leading denomination, recently, the matter of church dedication happened to be touched upon. The gentleman in question spoke of the loose way in which the financial part of some church erections is conducted, and that frequently a church is dedicated while a heavy incubus of debt is hanging over it, dragging the very life out of the organization. He then alluded to the inflexible rule of his own denomination, which is something like this: "No church can be dedicated until all financial obligations, incurred in its erection, have been provided for by bankable securities." This, as he says, makes the matter of dedication much more appropriate—you are dedicating to the Lord's service a building the church actually owns.

Being at Services on Time.—The Bystander has often been impressed with the fact that many of our dear members—who would not for anything fail to be prompt in reaching the depot for a train they desire to take—are lamentably indifferent so far as promptitude at church services is concerned. Now, God's house is a house of order. His business "requireth haste," but is never hurried, because for everything there is a time. Christ was a model of promptness. The keynote of his life-story, as written by Mark, is the word "straightway." Christ never dallied. As quickly as one thing was done, the Master gave himself to the doing of the next thing. As members of God's family, intent upon the Father's business, we can well afford to show our earnestness and zeal by being in the Lord's house at the appointed hour

John Wanamaker Heads World Sunday-Schools

It must be admitted that the World's Sunday School Association has been singularly fortunate in calling to its leadership men of rare capability and broad vision. In choosing a successor to the late H. J. Heinz, of Pittsburgh, Pa., the executive committee honored the body they represent by their selection of John Wanamaker, well known as an ardent promoter of Sunday-school interests. The new chairman brings to the position assigned him a large stock of information and executive ability, rarely excelled. Since competent leadership is essential to the success of any large enterprise, the World's Sunday School Association is sure to benefit by his aggressive labors.

Prohibition Enforcement Act Passed

Oct. 28 the Senate passed the Prohibition Enforcement Act over the President's veto, and made immediately effective machinery for preventing the sale of beverages containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol. While friends of temperance felt much gratified for the time being, a later announcement from the White House was decidedly disquieting. It was the declaration that the war-time law of prohibition—put into effect after the cessation of hostilities—would be annulled the moment the Senate formally ratifies the German Peace Treaty. Prohibition leaders had hoped that the effective date of constitutional prohibition—Jan. 16, 1920—might be reached without a reopening of saloons.

Why He Left a $10,000 Job

For some years Stuart B. Edmondson has been district manager of an insurance company, at a salary of $10,000 a year. Then he felt impressed with the fact that the salvation of men's souls is of infinitely greater importance than the successful writing of life insurance policies. So he decided to return to his "first love"—the preaching of the Gospel. He has accepted the pastorate of the Lake Forest, Ill., Methodist Episcopal Church at $2,500 a year. In explanation of his rather unusual action, from a worldly standpoint, he says: "There are some things that are better than gold." That is a truth, by the way, that can not be emphasized too strongly. Some of the finest and best things of life can not be purchased with the coin of the realm.

His Greatest Delusion

Recent photographs of the late ruler of Germany show him with his scant beard and of a meek expression. It is a tired, quiet, thin and worn face that appears beneath the soft hat. Undoubtedly his mind is also quieter, more serene and content than it was in the days when the autocratic ruler liked nothing better than to pose as a reincarnation of the mighty Cæsar. As one writer suggests, his greatest delusion, undoubtedly, was the fatuous one that God had selected him to rule scores of millions and lead them to slaughter in order that he might carry out his selfish and ambitious aims. Had it not been for that baleful infatuation, his executive ability, wisely directed, might have made him a blessing to the world and a happy man.

A New Source of Energy

Necessity has often been designated as the mother of invention, and thus the great coal shortage, under which France is laboring at the present time, has led to practical experiments, to determine the possibility of utilizing the enormous power of tidal waves. Isolated attempts along that line have demonstrated that, by the installation of proper appliances, it is quite feasible to develop a power plant of considerable magnitude by that means. Mechanical experts have recently declared that in the near future all needed power for the world's activities may be provided by a proper utilization of various means provided by a Beneficent Creator. Is it not also true that untold amounts of spiritual energy—now dormant—will some day be made available for the Lord's work, when his people arise to the full consciousness of the mighty powers within their grasp?

The Great World Need Is Peace

It needs the practical ap cation of the "Golden Rule" to the industrial life eve where. Nothing is gained by the perpetual warring of terests that should coöperate for the greatest good of country and humanity in general.

A Purveyor of Happiness

Recent press reports announce the death of Mrs. Wheeler Wilcox, the well-known writer of poems of lift and optimism. Mrs. Wilcox was an enthusiast had the happy faculty of making others enthusiastic. poetic effusions may not have been as fully permeated religious sentiment as some would have liked, but th was, nevertheless, the strong and outstanding factor abounding faith in all that is good and enduring, and hope that, eventually, the cause of right must triun To the extent that some, at least, have signally profi by her strong appeals to optimism, her pen ministry probably brought happiness to those who were influen thereby—certainly no mean accomplishment.

When the Preaching Aroused the Conscience

While much of the preaching at modern revival m ings strongly arouses the emotional nature of man, casionally a revivalist succeeds in so stirring up the science, that there is an irresistible effort to settle scores, making restitution for things wrongfully ta etc. At a revival in Blountville, Ind., by Rev. Carl T er, a number of people confessed to shortcomings in y gone by, and attested to the genuineness of their con sion by immediate action. Scores of old bills were gl paid, and old grudges amicably adjusted. One fa confessed to the burning of his home, some years in order to collect the insurance money, but now, a saw himself in all his guilt, he was ready to make r tution, even if it took all his property. The arro conviction had found its mark.

Manhood and Property Ownership

A recent document from the National Security Le asks this question: "Whenever was manhood poss except as inseparable from the ownership of propert Admitting that the possession of property is fine, possible, nevertheless, to have manhood, irrespectiv the ownership of property. HOME AND FAMILY

Is Life Worth Living?

Is life worth living? That depends Upon the objects, aims and ends.
If through the world we grov'ling go,
Seeking things sordid, mean and low;
If arrogating all to self,
The pride of birth, the pomp of pelf,
Scant kindness we to others show—
Is life worth living? No, no, no!

But if, though born in humble sphere,
We try some drooping heart to cheer;
If we the generous impulse know,
Of friendship's ever genial glow,
And, if all other things above,
We know the joys of mutual love;
In these we all the world possess—
Is life worth living? Yes, yes, yes!

The Way It Works

BY PAUL MOHLER

THERE used to be a question in my mind as to the first commandment with promise: "Honor thy father and mother, that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth." I wondered if there were some sort of a miraculous or specially-providential care over those who honored their parents, granting them longer lives than others. If there is, I do not know it, but one thing I do know: Those who do honor their parents are likely to live longer than those who do not, and I know the reason for it.

It all works out as a simple proposition: The child that obeys its parents escapes a great many physical dangers that others do not. It escapes accident and exposure to cold, wet, and disease. It eats more regularly and of better chosen food. It dresses more comfortably according to the weather. How much of the sickness of children is due to their wrong eating, drinking, and playing! Moreover, the child that obeys wise parents in these things while small, forms habits of sane and healthful living that remain with it in after-years, preserving health unto old age.

In the second place, the child that honors its parents works for them and with them, not living off them as an idler. He forms habits of industry, and learns to use head and hands, so that, when he starts out for himself, he is able to provide for himself the means of living. The boy or girl that has learned to work at home, has an immense advantage over others in the start of life.

So much for the physical end of it, but the most important is to come. The boy that honors his parents looks to them as his ideals. It is a very unfortunate boy that can not respect his parents and look to them as his ideal. This ideal will keep him from descending into vicious practices that destroy both soul and body. Every year a multitude of young men destroy their health and shorten their lives by sinful indulgences, which they would have avoided if the honor of their parents had been their chief concern.

Again, if a child honors his parents, he will obey them. The boy who obeys his parents, will obey his teachers, and obey the law of State and Nation. This saves him from a great deal of trouble and innumerable dangers to both soul and body. It certainly tends to length of life. The devil has a thousand traps to catch the unwary. The disobedient are his easiest victims, for they recognize no authority but their own sweet wills, and their lack of experience leaves them at the mercy of the deceiver. Parents know by their experience the dangers of the devil's traps, and obedient children are protected by their counsel, even though they do not themselves see the danger.

We have reason to view with alarm the present trend toward total disobedience of parents. It seems to be the spirit of this age to disobey all authority, beginning with that of parents, and extending to that of the nation. This spells national degeneracy and destruction. No nation can long exist as a nation, without obedience to its authority. No nation can maintain authority over its citizens when they have been brought up without regard for any authority. Obedience to parents, is, therefore, fundamental to long national life as well as individual.

Just now we are experiencing the evil effects of parental disobedience, in the church. A great many disobedient children have come into the church, and they can not bear to recognize the authority of the church. As Jude says, they "set at naught dominion, and rail at dignities." "These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their lusts." If unrestrained, they will destroy the church.

We all know that there is something within us that naturally resists authority. Just being told not to do a thing sometimes creates a desire to do it. This fact raises two questions:

1. Whence comes this inclination—from the spirit or from the flesh? Certainly it is not found in the "poor in spirit" or in the "meek," on whom the Lord pronounces his blessing. Paul finds it in the "lovers of self" (2 Tim. 3:2). It is hard to believe that it is from God, or will lead to any good.

2. How shall we meet such an inclination? I know parents that get their children to do things by coaxing them, hiring them, diverting them—everything but compelling them. Any wise parent knows better than to rule unreasonably, but he also knows enough to exert his authority and maintain it when necessary. It is the same in the church. There are times of persuasion, of teaching, of influencing, etc., but there are also times for discipline, and the church that does not maintain its discipline is headed for the rocks. It is not only the privilege, but the duty of parents, school-teachers, church officials, and officials of State and Nation to exercise their authority to the fullest extent when necessary. The interests of the child, as well as of society in general, demand it. We require our State officers to enforce the law; we should demand as much from parents and officers of the church.

So many parents (and church officials) excuse their laxness on the ground of their tender love. They deceive themselves. Tender love never lets a little child seize a coal of fire, no matter how much it may desire and cry for it. Tender love does not let it play with rattlesnakes or wildcats, or electric currents. It is a strange parent that would not snatch a child bodily from such a danger. It is even more strange when he will not snatch it from spiritual danger. Jude says: "On some have mercy, who are in doubt; and some save, snatching them out of the fire; and on some have mercy with fear; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."

The Influence of Pictures

BY J. H. MOORE

MOST MESSENGER readers have heard of the mother who unthinkingly made sailors of her boys by having on the wall of her home a large picture of an ocean vessel at sea. At first the picture attracted the eye, then the brain, and lastly the very soul of each boy, as he grew from childhood to manhood. He admired the great vessel as it proudly rode the waves, and the more he thought of the picture, the greater grew his longing for the sailor life. The picture buried itself in his soul, and made of him a sailor boy.

This paves the way for some special lessons, pertaining to the training of children. Children can be trained to live a life of sin, or they can be trained for God and righteousness. The secret is in keeping constantly before the child the image of what it should be. Place on your wall a nice picture of a man smoking a cigar, and your boy will take to smoking, in spite of all your teaching to the contrary. In this way thousands of boys have been led to form the smoking habit, and that is why artistic pictures, at great expense, are published in the finest of literary magazines. Cut out these pictures, remove those displayed elsewhere, and there will be a marvelous falling off in the use of cigars and cigarettes.

Hang on your wall a large picture, representing a battle-scene on an extensive scale. The soldiers in khaki or gray are seen lined up here and there, marching to the front. In the distance there is a cavalry dash. At another point artillery has been massed. Machine guns are placed at every point of vantage, while amid the bursting of shells there is a mile-long charge on the entrenched enemy. The ground is strewn with the dead and wounded. The scene is an exciting one. It stirs the blood to look at the heroic struggle of men who seem to know no fear. Your boy looks at the picture by the hour. He sees it every time he enters the room. On the table is a book describing the battle from start to finish. Over and over the story has been read by your boy, and to another boy he may be found describing the battle in detail. By this picture you have made a soldier of your boy. He longs to appear in uniform, to look like one of the generals and to be one himself. Talk about teaching that boy nonresistant principles! It is too late. The picture has done its work and it has been done thoroughly.

Another lesson. Probably at some cost for the frame at least, you have placed on the wall of your well-furnished living-room a nicely executed painting of a fashionably attired mother. Around her are three girls, varying in age from four to twelve. In the attire of the little group the last word in the fashion magazine is represented. The blue, the green, the red, the pink and white are touched up in a most artistic manner. Here are the flounces, the frills, the feathers, the jewelry, with diamond setting, displayed with the utmost of taste. With such a fine blending of colors the picture is a most attractive one and with the plainly-attired father and mother of the home, at their evening prayers, it certainly helps to make up a contrast that is striking, interesting and full of food for thought. But that is not the worst of it. There are three little girls in the family. Day after day they have been looking at this picture. They love bright colors, and the picture, with all it portrays, has imbedded itself in their very souls. The minister enters the home and talks to the two older girls about entering the church. His talks are impressive and put the girls to thinking. They think about the church and her claims; then they think about the picture on the wall. Deep down in their hearts they feel that they ought to make the good confession, and they purpose sometime to do so, but the church will not let them dress like the girls in the picture on their mother's wall, so they decide to put off coming to Christ, and line up with the picture. Between the Bible on the center table and the picture on the wall, the contest was a close one. But the picture won. The girls are to walk with the world and not with the church.

Let us look at the other side. Nearly 200 years ago a celebrated artist painted a fine picture of the Last Supper, representing Jesus and his disciples around the table in the upper room. It is a splendid picture, and it is worth while to study the expression on each face represented, and then to compare the scene with the narrative found in the four Gospels. The picture has been reproduced, in every manner known to the art preservative, and for years has adorned the walls of hundreds of homes among the Brethren. Hundreds of devout men and women, who frequent the Lord's table from year to year, can not remember the day when they did not know about this picture. Early they learned to look upon the picture. Later they read from the Book what is told concerning the incidents of the upper room. Then they learned to compare the picture and the Book with what transpires at a love feast. The harmony so greatly impressed them that the order of service, thus presented, became a part of their brain and soul make-up. The picture, working with the Bible and the church, has been the means of leading scores, if not hundreds, Christward, but has never repelled any one.

One more illustration. We once entered the private study of a young man who had set his heart on becoming an orator. The walls of his room were lined with the pictures of the most distinguished orators, preachers and lecturers of ancient and modern times. We noticed scores of books on oratory, voice-culture and public speaking. There were books on the life and experiences of many whose portraits could be seen on the wall. We saw at a glance that the young man had planned to live in the very atmosphere of oratory. The pictures reached him through the eye, and the books stirred the soul and brain. In his preparation for the rostrum the pictures cut an important figure. They stirred the heart every time he entered the room.

After pondering these lessons, and others that the reader will readily recall, can it be said that pictures have nothing to do with shaping the early lives of boys and girls? Surely not. And since pictures have so much to do with moulding the minds of children, why not select those that will lend a helpful influence? Why not secure a good picture of your favorite school among the Brethren, and give it a place in one of your rooms? A good colored picture of the Brethren Publishing House would give the boys and girls and others, to understand that our publishing interests mean something. Instead of spending money for a wall photograph of your favorite general, or your favorite president, why not invest in a few enlarged photographs of some of the Brethren who have done so much in shaping the affairs of the church? In other words, keep the church and her interests right up to the front in your homes and every place else. When your children enter your home, and begin noticing things, let them first learn to know and to admire the things that are characteristic of the Brethren—the things that point in the direction that we would have them go.

the Master. A veritable Pentecost! And the offering! It was announced that all of the offering should go to the work in India. When the count was finally made, it was more than $1,500. But when the Treasurer, the following day, rose to announce the offering, some one announced an additional check, and still other additional amounts were named, until the total was more than $2,300. This amount was far beyond anything this District ever attempted to raise. We hope and pray that it may be only the index of the things we are going to do in the next five years. The Conference pledged itself to stand back of the Forward Movement. Great possibilities are before us with our men and money.

The District Conference proper convened on Tuesday with Bro. C. B. Smith as Moderator; the writer, Reading Clerk; Bro. C. A. Shank, Writing Clerk. The writer was elected to represent the District on Standing Committee, with Bro. C. A. Shank as alternate.

The business was speedily transacted, and we were impressed with the spirit of complete harmony that existed. For this we thank our Heavenly Father. The Appanoose people entertained the people in a most acceptable manner. We thank God for this splendid meeting, the fellowship and the Spirit's working with us. We convene next year at Sabetha, Kans. W. H. Yoder.

"THE LITTLE BROWN CHURCH IN THE VALE"

Is it a reality or only an imagination? This question has been asked the writer several times in the past. Some weeks ago, with wife and family, traveling through Iowa by auto, we learned that we were in the locality of the "Little Brown Church," near Nashua, about which that beautiful song, "The Little Brown Church in the Vale" was composed by Dr. W. S. Pitts, a member of that congregation in 1862.

On Sunday afternoon, Sept. 28, we started to look up the "Little Brown Church," expecting to find a lonely little spot that once marked the place of considerable spiritual enthusiasm. But to our surprise we found the church with doors wide open for the traveling stranger to enter. There was an open book in which visitors recorded their names, and we found that since April 1 fifteen hundred, from every State in the Union, had recorded their names. In a short time about two hundred people were on the church grounds—all for the purpose of seeing if the Little Brown Church was a reality.

Some one had come especially to sing the song in its inspire thousands around the world. How much a c secrated life can bring about!

In June, 1916, a reunion was held at the noted spot. Pitts, then eighty-six years old, and living in Brook N. Y., was sent for, to sing the song he had compo sixty years ago. If one soul can do so much, what co be done if every hand and heart would unite forces in spiring the wandering soul to come to church servi as Dr. Pitts has done. Dr. Pitts, when a boy, said: am going to set the whole world singing." And he

"Once more I stand by the church in the wildwood,
Once more I wait at its wide open door,
Hearing the songs I loved in my childhood,
Thinking of those who have gone on before,
Here in the valley near to the wildwood,
Bravely they wrought, and nobly they won,
Now they are sleeping, quietly sleeping,
Fathers and mothers, sisters and sons."

The little church is painted brown, and is kept in g repair, by the surrounding community. It has a fine pearance. The timber has all been cleared away aro it, except in the church-yard.

Services are still held there by the Sunday-school, there is preaching occasionally, when a minister can secured. Any minister passing that way, as many tra ing strangers do, is invited and expected to deliver a pel Message.

Sept. 28, 1919, was a great day at the Little Br Church, and reminded one of the time when all nat shall be represented and gathered together in that umphant victory, to enter the heavenly Jerusalem,' w ing crowns of glory and waving palms of victory.

TO SOUTHERN INDIANA FRIENDS

I was elected as a member of the Mission Board of Southern District of Indiana in October, 1901, and se successively for fifteen years, first as Treasurer for se years, and then as Secretary-Treasurer. In that fiel work I made many new acquaintances and renewed m old ones.

In the summer of 1916 my health failed me, an October of the same year I was compelled to send report to the District Conference, instead of making final report in person, as I so much desired to do hereby desire to thank the Conference of 1916 for printed, unanimous vote of thanks for my many years service. Then, too, I wish to thank the Committee Resolutions for their kind remembrance of sympathy.

During the winter of 1916-1917 I was confined to house all of the time, but rallied and became somew active again. In October of 1917 my wife took her de ture for the spirit land, and my two sons enlisted in army and sailed overseas for France. These changed c ditions and new experiences caused me to sell my p and break up my old home. My present environm are such that I can not regularly attend the church of choice, but I am living within a few blocks of two o denominations and I attend their churches alternatel

While I was not physically able to attend the An Conference at Winona Lake, yet I was able to kee touch with the work by reading the Conference Boo Conference Daily, "Gospel Messenger," "Missio Visitor" and the Full Report. For the last six mont have been making my home with a married daughter have spent many pleasant hours with my little grandc A short time ago she was taken from us, and why good Lord spared me, in my declining years, and took beautiful, tender bud, is one of the many things I can fully understand now.

It was reported in the East and in the West, as fa California, that I had taken my last long journey, wh no traveler ever returns, but these few lines will indi that I am still in the land of the living.

A DAY OF OPPORTUNITIES

Just a few years ago only a few members were li in the great, hustling city of Detroit, Mich. Some them taught Sunday-school in other denominations, tried to keep in touch with the church work as best could by taking the "Gospel Messenger" and o church papers.

Finally about two or three of them got in touch the Mission Board of Michigan, and persuaded two their number to meet with about ten of the members were living in and near Detroit. The meeting was held small room in the Y. M. C. A. building, one evening. members of the Mission Board, after prayerful consi

GOSHEN CITY CHURCH, INDIANA

Bro. Otho Winger, of the General Mission Board, gave us two splendid addresses on Missionary Day, Oct. 5. The contributions on that day completed our $500 Conference offering.

At a council meeting, held Oct. 15, four letters were read. It was decided to hold a love feast this fall, but no date has been set.

A program in the Christian Workers' Meeting, on "The Christian Service Flag," resulted in our obtaining one for our church. It shows two red stars, one for a worker preparing for the mission field, and the other for an evangelist who has gone out from our congregation. It also contains ten white stars, representing the number of converts, so far this year. We intend to add a roster of the active members of the church.

At our Wednesday evening prayer service we are beginning a course in doctrine and devotion, using the textbook prepared by the General Sunday School Board. This class is taught by our pastor.

Oct. 19 Bro. Lawrence Shultz, District Sunday-school Secretary of Middle Indiana, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Forward Movement." The following Sunday Bro. Virgil C. Finnell spoke to a large audience on the subject, "The Biggest and Best Paying Business."

We hope to have the basement of the church in shape for the use of the Primary Department by Nov. 9, so that we can have our Rally Day.

Nov. 2 many of our members will attend the fall meeting of the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Association of the Elkhart, Goshen and South Bend churches, to be held at the First South Bend church.

Beulah Manahan.

HUTCHINSON, KANSAS

We held our semiannual love feast Oct. 26, with a good representation of the membership present. The home ministers had charge. Bro. O. H. Feiler, our pastor, preached a splendid examination sermon in the morning from the text, "God looketh upon the heart." Following this, Eld. A. F. Miller gave a good talk on "Love in the Home on the Part of Parents and Children."

We recently enjoyed four weeks of instruction in singing under the leadership of Sister Alma Stump, of Indiana. Her work was helpful and did much to put new life into the song service. Since she has gone, our young people are spending one or two evenings a week in practicing special songs for the regular church services.

Bro. L. H. Root spent three weeks here, giving us deep, rich sermons. While there were no additions to the church, the membership has been strengthened by his efforts.

During the year we have baptized thirty-four, and six have been taken in by letter. Bro. Feiler takes an interest in the children and young people, as well as the aged, and so we keep growing and going forward.

Dr. D. W. Kurtz, of McPherson, will speak at the church Nov. 14.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION OF BLUE RIDGE COLLEGE

"God first" is the motto of the Ministerial Association of Blue Ridge College. Any organization that aims to spread the Gospel, to facilitate doing good, deserves the sincere support of every devout Christian.

Before the school closed last year, we elected Bro. Charles O. Garner, president, and Bro. Walter L. Slifer, vice-president. At the opening of this year we immediately became busy. Our members doubled the record of last year. We have some who are not ministers, but are looking forward to the work of the ministry. Every member is giving his loyal support, and the old members worked faithfully to secure new ones.

At our first meeting we decided to meet every two weeks, on Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. Here we discuss the problems of the ministry. Those of us, who were here last year, received much help by these opportunities. The faculty bids us God-speed in our work and is doing much for us. Before Bro. Murphy was president of Blue Ridge College he came to visit our school, and then suggested that we ought to have a Ministerial Association. Delighted with his suggestion, we immediately set about to have it.

President Murphy was the first speaker this year. He spoke of the vital problems of the Church of the Brethren. His interesting, inspiring, and edifying message held all motionless. Bro. E. C. Bixler gave us a splendid address on "The Setting of the Text." He said: "Quote Scripture in the way it is used, and not to substantiate any personal opinion."

Four of our members have pledged to fill alternately an appointment in West Virginia. Every Sunday some of us go somewhere to preach. Oct. 26 Bro. Mallot preached the Harvest Sermon at Meadow Branch. In the evening he preached at Union Bridge.

The association is always glad to have its members go out to preach. If any church would like to have some one to preach, we would be glad to communicate with you. One of the members has promised to do some Institute work and there are others who are open to such calls. If you are interested in this, write to the president of the association. We realize that many have not had our opportunities of studying the Bible, and therefore we are willing to sacrifice much to help others to become familiar with the Bible.

We give a cordial invitation to the brethren to visit us, and would be delighted to have some Gospel Message. Pray for us in our work!

New Windsor, Md. Charles O. Garner.

SEBRING, FLORIDA

With us everything has been moving along pleasantly. Enough members remained at Sebring to make it practicable to keep up our preaching and Sunday-school services during the entire summer. At present we have three ministers and four deacons. Inside of a few weeks there will be more preachers as well as a few additional deacons, to say nothing of several families, representing the laity, most of whom have homes here. Not a few are planning to remain through the year.

We have preaching on Sunday morning and evening; also an interesting Sunday-school and a well-attended midweek prayer meeting. Each Tuesday, in the afternoon, the Sisters' Aid Society meets at the church, where they have a good room for their work.

Bro. R. F. McCune and wife, of Princeton, Kans., drove their car through to Sebring, and will remain for the winter. Bro. McCune preached for us last Sunday.

Bro. J. H. Garst, in addition to his work here at Sebring, has charge of the congregation at Arcadia, a town of 4,000 people. Here the Brethren have a neat chapel. Bro. Garst is looking for an efficient minister to take charge of the Arcadia work on part support. He may be addressed at Sebring.

Our Bible Institute, to be conducted by Bro. Jas. M. Moore, of Lanark, Ill., is scheduled for the first week in February, and may last two or three weeks. We look for a good attendance.

This season Sebring is on a building boom, and improvements are going forward rapidly. Oranges and grapefruit are being rushed to the market, all of which means business. We pray that the religious interest may be kept fully abreast of the temporal movements.

FROM YOKOHAMA TO PEKING

The outgoing China missionaries, who left America during the early part of August, thinking that possibly many of their kind friends in the homeland would enjoy reading an account of their journey, agreed among themselves that each one write an article for one of our church periodicals, since it would be impossible to write a letter to each one of our many friends. It fell on Bro. M. M. Myers and myself to write for the "Gospel Messenger." Likely you have already read his account of our journey from America to Yokohama, so, without any further explanation, I shall proceed to tell you something about the rest of our journey.

Our ship landed at Yokohama August 25. Here, as we went ashore, men with rickshas approached us, desiring to convey us to our destination. Perhaps some of you have never seen a ricksha. Briefly described, it is a miniature buggy with only two wheels, and a seat just large enough to accommodate one person. Bro. Bright bargained with the men for a sufficient number to accommodate our party of sixteen, and soon our little procession was going down the street. To us, who rode in them for the first time, it seemed rather queer, to have a man pulling us instead of a horse. The children, especially, were very much amused. Among the many things which were of peculiar interest to us, as we rode along, were the wooden shoes which some people wore, and the many two-wheeled carts, heavily loaded, which were drawn by one horse or several men. After a few minutes' ride, which we all enjoyed, our rickshas stopped in front of the Pleasanton Hotel, where a three days' rest, after our long voyage, was greatly appreciated.

We had planned, after a little rest, to go to Kobe, and from there to take another boat across the Yellow Sea to Tientsin, but being unable to make satisfactory arrangements for sailing without a long delay, we decided to continue our journey by rail, rather than to wait, as living expenses are very high in Japan. So, after securing our tickets and going through the usual red tape of having our baggage inspected, and so forth, we boarded the train on Thursday forenoon, August 28. It took us about twenty-four hours to cross the island, and the scenes which we saw from the car windows were indeed beautiful. Now and then we got a glimpse of the big blue ocean through the gaps of the mountains. On either side of our train there were beautiful green rice-fields, with little irrigation ditches winding through them. Here and there we saw a clump of mulberry trees or a patch of growing vegetables. Even the mountains, which sometimes appeared to be only a stone's throw from our train, and at other times far away, were terraced, and had something green growing on them. One of the scenes for which we were watching, was the peerless Mount Fuji, which is covered with snow the year round. When told, however, that we would not be able to see it that day, because of the density of the atmosphere, we were very much disappointed.

Leaving Japan at Shemonoseki, we were ferried across the Korean Strait to Fusan, a small seaport on the southern coast of Korea. For a short time we enjoyed watching, from the deck of our boat, the old-time sail-boats, but soon we got out where the waves were higher, and our little boat began to rock considerably. Some of our party, who had crossed the Pacific without getting seasick, now had that experience. While it only took us eleven hours to cross over, to some it seemed much longer, and by the time our boat landed at Fusan, we were all glad to go ashore.

When we left the boat, it was about midnight. Walking a short distance to the railroad station, we found our train on the track, waiting, and as soon as all our baggage was placed on the train, and we ourselves on board, our train pulled out of the depot. The next morning, after a few hours' rest, we enjoyed looking out of the car windows again. The scenes which we saw were not as beautiful as those we saw while, passing through Japan. In Korea the mountain slopes are sparsely clothed with verdure. Here and there are a few small mounds, which mark the graves of Koreans. Many of these have doubtless died without a knowledge of Jesus Christ. The valleys are cultivated, but none of the crops look very flourishing. However, the people themselves seem very much contented. Now and then we saw a person working in the field, or watching some cows as they grazed. Others gazed at us from the doors of their little mud-huts with thatched roofs.

About ten o'clock on Saturday night we crossed the Yalu River, which is very wide, and forms the boundary line between Korea and Manchuria. Across its waters one of the big battles of the Russo-Japanese war was fought. Our train stopped on the Manchuria-side at a little town called Antung. Here our baggage was all taken off and inspected, but we were fortunate enough in having to open several trunks only. When all baggage was again placed on the train, we again proceeded on our journey.

Early on Sunday morning our train pulled into Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, and the cradle of the Manchurian dynasty. Here we changed cars. Having a few hours' wait, we enjoyed a good breakfast, and later on a short service, which will long be remembered, especially by those of us who were going out to the field for the first time, as many helpful suggestions were given us by Brother and Sister Bright and Sister Hutchison. We then boarded the train and proceeded on our journey to Tientsin. The section of country, through which we passed, was very level. Judging by the appearance of growing crops, the soil must be very fertile. Looking out of the car windows on either side, we could see thousands of acres of kaffir corn and millet. There were other crops also, but these were cultivated much more extensively. They constitute the chief food of both man and beast in North China. The latter is much cheaper than rice, and when cooked makes a very good breakfast food.

We arrived in Tientsin on Monday morning, where we were met by Mr. A. C. Grimes. He is the business agent for the missionaries of North China, and is a very fine man. By him we were directed to a hotel, where we got breakfast. After breakfast we went to the American consul, to file our application to remain in China as missionaries for the next seven years. He was observing Labor Day, but upon learning our business, received us very cordially. Here we also received Chinese names, by which the Chinese know us.

On Wednesday morning we boarded the train again, and after about three hours' ride viewed the ancient wall which encloses the city of Peking. A little later we passed through one of its gates into the city. Leaving the train, we hired rickshas to convey us to our final destination. The men who pulled the rickshas were poorly clad. Some had queues, while others had their heads shaved. The streets were thronged with pedestrians, rickshas, donkey-carts, and push-carts of all descriptions. On either side of the street were shops and stores of various kinds, with open fronts, and samples of their contents hanging out near the street. Soon we came to the gate of our court and went into our new Chinese home, where we will live the first year, and attend the language school.

In closing this letter, we hope none will imagine we have come merely for the trip. After traveling thousands of miles, the harvest field seems larger, and the need of workers greater. We hope you will hold up our hands during the first years of our hard study, that we may be workmen well prepared for the Master's use.

O. C. Sollenberger.

MIDDLE MISSOURI

Herewith we give the yearly report of the Sisters' Aid Society Meeting of the Middle District of Missouri, held in the Spring Branch church Sept. 30.

On account of influenza our societies here have not been able to do as much work as usual. Six sent in their reports. During the year 89 garments were made and given away; 243 were donated and distributed; quilts

A SAD ACCIDENT

One of the saddest and most shocking accidents in the vicinity of the Kewanna church, Ind., occurred on Thursday night, Oct. 16, at about eleven o'clock, resulting in the death of Sister Margarette Hendricks, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister William Hendricks, of near Kewanna.

With her sister and a young man, Sister Margarette was returning from a meeting of the young people's Sunday-school class, when the automobile in which they were riding ran into a deep ditch by the road-side. The automobile turned completely over, pinning Margarette and Bro. Evans beneath the car. The weight of the machine resting on her neck and shoulders is thought to have broken Margarette's neck, causing instant death. Another theory is that she was drowned, while lying helplessly beneath the wreckage, with her face in the water. In any event, she was unconscious from the beginning. Bro. Evans barely escaped drowning by turning his head sideways, thus being able to keep his nose and mouth out of the water.

The other sister being loose, ran back about a half mile, to tell the other members of the class, who were coming in a wagon. By the aid of some of the neighbors and a team of horses, the machine was pulled up, releasing Bro. Evans and also the body of the girl.

Sister Hendricks was a very attractive and intelligent girl, a member of the senior class of the Kewanna high school, and standing at the head of her class.

The Kewanna schools and two neighboring schools remained closed on Friday, in respect to her memory. She was planning to enter Manchester College next year, in preparation for mission work. It seems strange, indeed, that one who had such a large vision of life, with such high ideals and such a noble purpose, should be called home so young. But the Lord knoweth best.

Margarette E. Hendricks, daughter of William and Albina Hendricks, born Sept. 22, 1901, at Lenoxa, Kans., departed this life Oct. 16, 1919, aged 18 years and 24 days.

At the early age of fourteen she accepted Christ and was baptized April 10, 1915. To this trust she was devoted and faithful. Although her time was short among us, she gained our full confidence and won our sympathies. She was earnestly striving to prepare herself for life's duties, but in the midst of her preparation the Lord said: "It is enough."

She leaves mother, father, three sisters, two grandmothers, a grandfather and other relatives and friends. She was secretary and chorister of the Kewanna Sunday-school.

Services were held on Sunday afternoon from the Bruce Lake United Brethren church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Irvin Fisher, of Mexico, Ind., and Bro. Roy Mishler, the pastor. Text, 1 Sam. 20: 3.

The funeral was one of the largest ever held in the vicinity. It was estimated that more than a thousand people thronged the streets around the church. Only about one-fourth of the people could be accommodated in the church. There were 136 automobiles and 42 horse-drawn vehicles in the procession. Burial in the Bruce Lake cemetery. B. D. Hirt, Laton.—At the September council our present pastor, Eld. D. R. Holsinger, was reëlected for the coming year. Bro. R. H. Jenkinson was elected clerk. A number from here attended the District Meeting at Empire, and report a very good meeting. Our delegates gave a very spirited account of it, and all are full of zeal for better work. Oct. 18 our love feast was held—an all-day meeting. We had a good crowd and several other congregations were represented. Bro. A. O. Brubaker, of Raisin City, preached the examination sermon. Bro. Blickenstaff, of McFarland, presided in the evening. He also preached two very forceful sermons on the day following on the subjects: "The Spirit" and "The Sixth Sense, or Sense of Imitation." Oct. 23 and 24 Sister Swadley, of Bethany Bible School, gave us two helpful talks on "Training the Child in the Sunday-school" and "Religious Training of the Child in the Home." She also gave a talk on Friday evening to the mothers and daughters. We have had several helpful sermons by Bro. D. H. Forney, of Raisin City, since our last report.—Verna De Hart, Laton, Calif., Oct. 25.

Modesto.—Our Sunday-school enjoyed a picnic Labor Day, Oct. 19. We made a house-toby letter. Others contemplate coming to our city. Our Sunday-school enjoyed a good program on Rally Day, Oct. 5, with 159 present; our usual attendance is about 125. Our young people are finding the Junior Christian Workers' Society very interesting under the supervision of Sister Asa Trantle and Bro. Harvey Netzley. Their work now is Bible character study.—Ida B. Gibbel, Pasadena, Calif., Oct. 26.

Arcadia.—Eld. Garst met with us in council Oct. 5 and brought the good news that arrangements had been made whereby we are to have a permanent minister as soon as a suitable one can be secured. The writer was chosen church clerk. Our Sunday-school is increasing in attendance and interest, and we feel that the work is advancing. We will be glad to answer any inquiries as to either permanent or a winter home here.—M. Cloe Tracy, Arcadia, Fla., Oct. 23.

Heckman as our elder for the ensuing year. Bro. H. A. Stauffer was chosen Sunday-school superintendent for the country church, and Bro. E. J. Stauffer for the town house. Notice.—It has been the custom, during the past school-years, for the Volunteer Band of Bethany Bible School to send out Deputation Teams to the various churches within her reach. The chief aim of the Deputation Teams are to increase missionary interest in the churches, and, by coming in contact with the young people of the churches, to inspire them more fully to consecrate their lives to the Master's work. While in school at Bethany, our Volunteers come in contact with many spiritual men and women, and through the study of God's Word they are filled with messages which they are glad to take to their many Christian friends in the home churches. Should you desire a Deputation Team to come to your church, write to the undersigned.—Merlin L. Shull, 3435 W. Van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 28.

Oak Grove church met in council Oct. 4, with Eld. D. J. Blickenstaff presiding. Two letters were received and one brother reclaimed. Bro. Weaver was chosen delegate for District Meeting. Oct. 5 we held our love feast, with fifteen members present. Bro. E. Eshelman, of Canton, was with us.—Mrs. Jas. P. Kenyon, Dunlap Point, Ill., Oct. 24.

Romine.—Bro. J. W. Switzer, of Roanoke, Ill., evangelist, and Sister Edith Bubb, of Astoria, Ill., song leader, conducted a revival meeting here, beginning Oct. 12, and closing Oct. 26. The interest was good and we feel that all have been benefited by the meetings. Our love feast was held Oct. 25, at the close of the revival, followed by a basket dinner on Sunday, with services in the afternoon.—Mrs. Kate Baker, Salem, Ill., Oct. 27.

West Branch church closed a three weeks' revival meeting Oct. 26. Four Sunday-school pupils confessed Christ. We enjoyed our love feast Oct. 18, when a large number were present. One of our aged sisters was anointed the day before. Two letters of membership have been granted since our last writing.—Mary Fry, Polo, Ill., Oct. 28.

INDIANA

Bethel.—Oct. 5 Bro. Ralph G. Rarick, of Covington, Ohio, began a series of meetings here which proved very inspiring. Our singer, Sister Elba Stockberger conducted the song service. Five were baptized and one was reclaimed. Oct. 25 we held our love feast, with Eld. H. H. Keim, of Nampa, Idaho, delivered a sermon here, at his home church. We appreciate the help of visitors, and hope there will be more.—Lulu Goshoro, Ladoga, Ind., Oct. 28.

Middlebury.—Our two weeks' revival closed Oct. 26. Bro. E. E. Swart, of Elkhart, Ind., was the evangelist, and his sermons were very spiritual and uplifting. Five were baptized, two reclaimed and three await baptism. Our meetings were preceded by one week of song and prayer services. We had good interest and attendance throughout the meetings, which closed with our communion service.—Mrs. Carrie Kindy, Middlebory, Ind., Oct. 27.

Nettie Creek.—Since the last report three Sunday-school girls were baptized into the church, Sept. 14. Eld. O. D. Wareing commenced a two weeks' series of meetings at the Olive Branch house. Although there were no accessions, we believe that much good was done. On Oct. 10 we held our love feast, at which nearly 200 members communed. Ministers present were Elders G. L. Studebaker, L. L. Teeter, L. A. Paul and C. A. Wright, who officiated. The following day we held a splendid Children's Meeting. At present Eld. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, is in the midst of an interesting series of meetings at the Lock Grove house. One has accepted Christ.—Chas. Miller, Hagerstown, Ind., Oct. 26.

Pleasant Hill.—Our love feast was held Oct. 25—an all-day meeting. Eld. Hiram Forney, of Goshen, was with us also Brethren Ackerman and Elson. About seventy-five communicants were present. A little church was much built up. We also had with us visiting members from Pioneer, Ohio. On Sunday morning we had Sunday-school and preaching, after which dinner was served to all. We spent an enjoyable day together.—Sarah Gump, Pleasant Hill, Ind., Oct. 28.

Rossville.—We met in council Oct. 16. After the report of the annual visit, Bro. W. L. Hatcher was called to remain here another year. Oct. 19 the Christian Workers' Society of the Pyrmont congregation rendered the entire program, using "The Second Coming of Christ" as their topic. Appropriate songs were given by the quartette. Bro. David Dinsmore delivered the address. Oct. 25 we held our love feast, with Bro. David Metzler, of Nappanee, officiating. He was our pastor and elder ten years ago; consequently the service was an enjoyable occasion to us all. On Sunday we again had him to talk on the subject, "The Church, the Body of Christ," in the evening. "Satan, His Ways of Getting Into the Lives of Christians" was the subject of the church hall. preached for the audience that had gathered in the Brethren's house. This house has been recently remodeled and was very well suited to the needs of the various meetings. Judging by appearances it is an excellent house for the live Sunday-school and church services that are held in it.

Wednesday was taken up by the various programs, in which the Forward Movement had a prominent part. The writer was unable to be present at these sessions, but, judging by the report he got of them, they were of undoubted value to those who attended, and will be beneficial to the District in the days to come.

The retiring officers of last District Meeting were present, and presided during the organization of this year's meeting. In spite of two or three "ties," it took but a few minutes to effect an organization, with Eld. I. B. Book as Moderator, and Eld. T. D. Butterbaugh, Reading Clerk. This was Bro. Book's first time in the Moderator's chair, but you would scarcely have guessed it, if you had come in as a stranger.

A rather large number of papers came before the meeting, and most of the forenoon was given to their consideration. A few were left for the afternoon, to be disposed of after the various District boards and committees had made their reports. Most of these papers related to various District matters, though two of them—one regarding life insurance and the other pertaining to the repeal of certain obsolete minutes—were passed to Annual Meeting. Brethren J. C. Murray and I. B. Book were selected as delegates on Standing Committee.

Rain in the early morning hindered activities somewhat, but this soon stopped and nobody was the worse for it. Most of the day the house was comfortably filled, and all seemed to enjoy themselves thoroughly. The brethren of the Salamonie church had their work thoroughly organized, and it went forward without a hitch. It has been thirty years since a District Meeting was held in this church, but they have not forgotten how to entertain such a gathering. Their work was thoroughly appreciated. Mexico and Eel River both asked for the meeting of 1920, and it was given to the latter. May we be granted, by a Loving Father, as pleasant and profitable a meeting there, as the one just closed.

A SPLENDID SERMON

One nf the most timely and reasonable sermons I have ever listened to was delivered at the Brethren church in Carthage, Mn., on the Belshazzar fiaseo, in the Bnok of Daniel, by Bro. D. G. Bruhaker.

The king had taken the golden vessels out of the house of God at Jerusalem and drank wine with a thousand nf his lords. "The king and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank wine in them: and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of hrass, of iron, nf wood and of stone." Then came the fingers of a man's hand and wrote upon the wall, "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin." Daniel was called to interpret the mysterious message. Here is an epitome of the interpretation:

God gave thy father a kingdom and majesty and glory and honor. His heart became lifted up, and his mind hardened in pride. He was deposed from his kingly throne and they took his glory from him. He was driven from the sons of men. His heart was made like the heasts; his dwelling was with the wild asses; they fed him with grass like nxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven till his hair had grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws; and until he knew the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will. And, Belshazzar, you know all this, and against the advice and experience of your father you have lifted up yourself against the Lord of heaven. You have hrought forth the vessels nf his house and with them have been holding a drunken revelry in praise of your heathen gods. "And the God in whose hand thy hreath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified."

The heautiful and timely application of this appears when we remember that the words nf the Lord are pure words, as apples of gold set in pictures of silver. They are the vessels in his house. Men take them nut, adopt them in their carnal worship, corrupt them, disfigure them, and fail, as Belshazzar did, to honor the God of heaven.

Dn men rob God? Ayel shamefully do they rob him. They drink their own corrupt wine in his sacred vessels. They defile his vessels in fleshly lusts. Carrying his sacred vessels away from the house of God, they use them as occasions for the flesh. The Word is defiled hy worldliness. The armor of God is thrown aside. The hreast is hared to the destructive darts of sin and Satan. The head is intoxicated with wine, drunk from God's sacred vessels. Corrupt wine is poured intn them. Corrupt doctrines are imhibed from them. The corrupt heart is filled, surfeited, and made merry with delusion and vain imaginings.

Men nse the livery of heaven to serve the devil in. His mercies are hrushed aside. Drinking the intoxicating wine nf the world from the sacred vessels of God's house, the gods are praised, a spirit nf intoxicatipn follows, the heart is hardened into insensibility, the eyes beenme dim, the ears dull of hearing, and the heautiful citadel of man's soul falls a prey to the hosts of sin that are hesieging its walls and, as Babylon the mother of harlots fell, dies like the wicked king died.

DEATH OF ELD. ALBERT U. BERKLEY

Eld. Albert U. Berkley was born at Berkley's Mills, Somerset County, Fch. 11, 1862, and died Oct. 4, 1919, aged fifty-seven years, seven months and twenty-three days.

April 11, 1886, he was united in marriage to Miss Lavina Hershberger, of Johnstown, Pa. To this union five children were born—Mahel F., married to Curtis Lamhert, Norman William, and an infant (both deceased), Ivy May, married to John P. Coleman, and John M., married to Roxy Heater—all living in the eighth ward of Johnstown, Pa. Bro. Berkley is survived by four brothers and three sisters; also three grandchildren.

Early in life, when hut a boy, he was haptized into Christ and hegan his religious work. He was the first superintendent of the Roxhury Sunday-school. He was also, for a number of years, the teacher of the Bible class, connected with this school.

In June, 1894, he was called by the church to the ministry and May 4, 1915, he was ordained to the highest office within the gift of the church—that of the eldership.

From the time of his election to the ministry until the messenger of death closed his earthly career, he was actively engaged in ministerial work in the various churches around and in the city of Johnstown. By his earnest and faithful lahors in the West Johnstown church, the churches at Roxhury, Viewmont, Pleasant Hill and Morrellville also received inspiration and help to overcome their early struggles, and to attain to their present influence in the community in which they are located.

At the time of his death he was presiding elder of the Pleasant Hill church, by which, Sept. 25, he was reelected for another year.

Thus, while almost in the prime of life, and while still busily engaged in the King's husiness, the Master said: "It is enough; come up higher."

Funeral serviees were held in the West Johnstown church, at 2:30 P. M., Monday, Oct. 6, with Eld. E. M. Detwiler in charge, assisted by Elders H. S. Replogle and C. O. Beery.

He will be missed both in the church and in the home. May he rest in peace!

Eld. Norman W. Berkley.

DEATH OF ELD. NOAH BEAM SHERFY

The subject of this sketch was horn April 5, 1848, in Washington County, Tenn., heing a son of Eld. Samuel S. Sherfy and Nancy (Garst) Sherfy. He felt the influence of the Spirit at a very early period in life and accordingly united with the Church of the Brethren at the tender age of twelve years, which was exceptionally early at that period in the history of the church.

He answered the call from the church, to serve in the capacity of a minister at the age of twenty-three, and the following year entered college at Marysville, Tenn., under the instruction of Eld. S. Z. Sharp, now of Colorado. He spent three years in this institution, after which he returned to his native county and engaged in the profession of teaching, which he followed with great success until the last two years of his life.

He was married to Mattie Sherfy in July, 1877. To this union were horn one daughter and one son. The daughter preceded him to the spirit world over twenty years ago. The son, Samuel H., is now engaged as a teacher in the city schools of Los Angeles, Calif.

His first wife died June 30, 1880, leaving him to care for the small children. His second marriage was to Sister Sophia Humphreys. To this union was born one daughter. The second wife died of cancer in 1894. About two years later he was married to Sister Rehecca Jordan. To this union were horn three children, all of whom remain. He also leaves three sisters and two brothers—Eld. John Sherfy, of Kansas, and Eld. Joel Sherfy, of Saluda, N. C.

Bro. Sherfy was one of the first members to organize and conduct Sunday-schools in the County of Washington, in the Knob Creek congregation. He often related to the writer his experience in Sunday-school work which, at that time, did not appeal to many of the older members, and had to be carried on despite the npposition of many members of the church. But his untiring efforts were not without much fruit, for he lived to see Sunday-schools established in almost every community of his native county.

Bro. Sherfy was ordained to the eldership in the Pleasant Hill congregation in about 1890, having moved to the adjoining county of Sullivan in 1880. He was associated with this congregation the remainder of his life. To my knowledge he was never absent from a church council during all these years.

Bro. Sherfy represented his District onee on the Standing Committee, and was many times Clerk of our District Meetings.

Possibly he had more friends than any of his contemporaries, having followed the profession of teaching in this county for thirty-four years. The school that was able to secure his services, thought itself very fortunate, for in his prime he possibly did not have a superior in his chosen profession.

Bro. Sherfy's countenance was always illumined by a pleasant smile. The stranger, as well as intimate friends, always found a hearty Christian welcome in his home.

At the last District Meeting he was permitted to attend, and which convened in his home congregation, I remember a personal appeal which he made to Prof. T. S. Moherman, of Dalcville, Va., and others, who were in attendance, extending to them an invitation to enjoy the hospitality of his home in these words: "Brethren, I have only a small house, BUT A BIG HOME." This statement I shall carry with me through life, as it was very expressive of the "higness" of his heart. He was an able defender of the Gospel, and many lives were influenced for good by his Christian life and teachings.

Thus a great life has ceased to move among us, hut the influence of his life will continue to hear fruit for the church and its interests.

All the topics were ably discussed.—Margaret Replogle, New Enterprise, Pa., Oct. 27.

Unity.—We have just closed an interesting two weeks' series of meetings at Fairview. Bro. B. S. Landes, of Harrisonburg, Va., was the evangelist. He gave us some very interesting and helpful sermons, which were much enjoyed and appreciated. The church was much strengthened and built up. Five stood for Christ, two of whom have been baptized. The White Queen of Okoyong

W. P. Livingstone

The life story of Mary Slessor of Calabar retold for children. Mary Slessor was born in Aberdeen but early moved to Dundee. Her home was darkened by the intemperance of her father. Her mother, a godly woman, told the children much of the work of the Presbyterian church in west Africa, and Mary desired to be a worker there. After learning the language and the character of the natives at one of the mission stations, she went into the bush where she lived alone, the only white person among the savage blacks.

One of the customs which she defied and gradually stopped was that of killing twins. Time after time word came to her of the birth of twins and she dropped her work and went to the reseue. A number of them she kept with her until they grew up.

Another custom which she was instrumental in modifying was that of trial by ordeal. In this the suspeeted person was given poison. If he died he was guilty. At times Ma Slessor had to withstand the whole tribe to protect a person. If so she bravely stood.

Interesting from beginning to end, the book illustrates the life of faith in God. Cloth. Price $1.25.

Why Marvel At a Universal Law?

JESUS tried to show Nicodemus that his doctrine of the new birth was nothing to marvel at. The mere fact that there was an element of mystery about it was no argument against it. There were plenty of mysterious things, the reality of which could not be doubted. The wind, which they may have heard blowing at the moment, was one such. The effects produced proved it to be a fact. "So is every one that is born of the Spirit."

"Ye must be born anew." It follows from the simple fact that "that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Everything partakes of the nature of its source. To change that nature there must be a new source of life. A new stream of energy must be turned into the soul.

The law is absolute. You can not see any kingdom without being born into it. You can not see the kingdom of art without being born of the spirit of art. Nor that of music, or literature, or science, or anything.

You can not see the Kingdom of God without being born of the Spirit of God. And if you can not see it, why, you just can not see it. And no power in earth or heaven or hell will be able to show it to you.

Evil Thinking and Evil Speaking

"Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil" (1 Cor. 13: 4, 5).
